

BUILT UP HER HEALTH
SPEEDY CURE OF MISS ECLISON

She is Made Well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and Writes Gratefully to Mrs. Pinkham.

For the wonderful help that she has found Zula Eclison, 6 Erie St., East, St. Thomas, Ont., believes it her duty to write the following letter for publication, in order that other women afflicted in the same way may be benefited as she was. She writes: Dear Mrs. Pinkham:— I heartily recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as a uterine tonic and regulator. I suffered for four years with displacement of the uterus and no one but those who have experienced this dreadful agony can form any idea of the physical and mental suffering those endure who are thus affected. Your Vegetable Compound cured me. Within three months I was fully restored to health and strength and now my periods are regular and painless. What a blessing it is to obtain such relief when so many doctors fail to help you. Your medicine is better than any doctor or medicine I ever had. No other medicine has such a record of cures of female troubles as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Women who are troubled with painful or irregular menstruation, backache, bloating (or flatulence), leucorrhoea, falling, inflammation or ulceration of the uterus, ovarian troubles, faintness, indigestion, nervous prostration or the blues, should take immediate action to ward off the serious consequences, and be restored to perfect health and strength by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. Her experience is very great, and she gives the benefit of it to all who stand in need of wise counsel. Address, Lynn, Mass.

FOUR MILLIONS IN GOLD--THE PIRATES' BURIED TREASURE.

In An Old Iron Bound Chest on Bleak Island Near Newfoundland.

Here is a marvelous story of pirate buried treasures, the secret of which has been held for more than twenty years by one old sea captain and his daughter, who are living in New York, and in the truth of which the woman has so much faith that she is trying to charter an expedition to go under her leadership to a rocky, bleak island off the coast of Newfoundland in quest of the cached riches.

These two persons, who claim to hold the charts and maps that show the location of an old iron-bound chest said to contain nearly 4,000,000 in gold and silver coin, diamonds and other gems and jewelry of a bygone day, are Miss Maria C. Wallace and her father, Capt. Wallace now eighty-three years old, and who for many years was a skipper in the New York and South Seas trade.

For more than thirty years, so Miss Wallace says, her father held the secret from every living soul, even from her. And it was only in his closing days, when his prosperity waned that he broke his silence and turned over to her the startling information. Miss Wallace did not volunteer the intelligence. It came through her efforts to secure the right men to go with her on the treasure hunt.

And here is the story that Miss Wallace tells: "I will not entrust the care of the expedition I am planning to any one. It is not a hazardous undertaking, for the treasure is hidden only a few hundred miles from New York, and all but a few miles of sailing, from Mainland to Island can be made by rail. I am thirty-eight years old and have all the experience necessary to look after my interests. My father tells me that on one of his trips to the South seas his first mate, who was quite old and who had served long under him, was taken sick and died. On his death bed he confided to my father that in his young days he had belonged to a pirate band that had operated off the coast of North America and had collected plunder from various ships they had taken after murdering all on board, the loot aggregating what in those days anyway would be about $4,000,000. This was all cached in one spot and the dying pirate had the marked charts that showed where that place was.

"It appears that the pirates had been wiped out by violent deaths of one kind or another, battle, storm and the like, and that only the old man who was my father's first mate survived. I have read of these same pirates. They were called the "Black Gang," and thrived for years after the beginning of last century. The dying first mate told my father about many of their adventures, but that is not what I am interested in. I want that treasure. The pirates lived on the island, so the old fellow said, but he was sure that no one had ever dug up any part of the treasure; and he was one of the last to leave there. He verbally bequeathed the whole thing to my father.

"I visited the spot alone last summer went on Miss Wallace, "and I found matters exactly as described. There were certain marks indicated in the chart and everything seemed to be undisturbed. There must be an immense quantity of treasure, for the old pirate said it would take four men several days to remove it. There are gold and silver bars, diamonds, and goodness knows what else.

Miss Wallace refused to give any more definite hint as to the treasure island's position on the map. She declared, however, that she expected to start next week and to return a very rich woman by the end of the month. The main difficulty she apprehends is in getting the treasure secretly and safely over the Canadian line.

POISONOUS PLANTS MET WITH DAILY.

According to a writer in the Canadian Good Housekeeper, we are beset with danger behind and before by the poisons contained in our commonest garden and wild flowers. Of course poison ivy and dogwood are an old tale, but from this source we learn that the common buttercup has poisoned the flesh of children, and wild clematis has been known to cause swelling of the lips to a child who bit the stem of the flowering seed vessel. The mountain laurel, kalnia, causes distressing swelling to the face and hands. Lily of the valley is one of the most harmful plants in our gardens, and others are wood anemone, buttercup, marsh marigold, larkspur and monkshood. As to poppy, the only part of the entire plant that is not poisonous is the seed. One case is instance of a mother who made an infusion of a single capsule, which she gave to her children, thereby causing the death of both.

The seeds of the castor oil plant, the Palma Christi, which has such a palmlike appearance in our garden are a menace to children's comfort and safety.

It would seem that nearly all plants are poisonous that have as a blossom a pea-blossom set in a raceme such as laburnum, wistaria, lupine, locust, nanea, and many of the bean family. Even the scarlet runner, whose bean is so nourishing as food, is so poisonous in its leafage that no animal but sheep ever touch it, and the root is poisonous.

Oricander is a violent poison in every part, being known to have caused the death of a pigeon which had drunk water in which a leaf had soaked, and also the sudden and violent death of a child. "Rum Cherry" is also poisonous, according to this authority, and the kernels of fruit stones contain prussic acid, a deadly poison. A word of warning is sounded to the cook lest she use, instead of the aromatic bay leaf, the violently poisonous leaf of the laurel, rhododendron, or azalen.

It is well to be acquainted with these truths about the plants we meet and touch daily, and it is also well to forbid children putting any leaf, berry, or flower in their mouths even the harmless rose-leaf. In the face of this array of facts we are amazed to find ourselves still alive, knowing how we used, as children, to munch of the shoots of young briar and grape tendrils, feast on rum cherries, eat clover and all kinds of flower petals, munch the berries on the flowering currant on the lawn while playing croquet, and make use of the "cheeses" of a little weed whose name I do not know, not to speak of other experiments along the same line. The only explanation seems to be the same old proverb about the Divine care over "fools and children."
