Taylor, the Kensington Tennis court is now in excellent shape and a number of tennis enthusiastics are taking advantage of same and the excellent weather conditions to enjoy this swell game. A hundred per cent of the younger element attended the dance in the Maple Leaf Gardens, in Summerside on Tuesday evening, and all report a fine crowd and a nice time.

A challenge and acceptance of same, for a tennis game by two of our old-time athletes is now in the offing, all that is now necessary is a smart promoter to get their names on the dotted line, and set the date. It is rumored the winner will be an entry in the coming tournament in the capital, which would certainly be just too bad for those foreign entries, so both agree, they are also seriously thinking of inviting Perry, Vines and other professionals to attend, thinking they would gather in some new tricks, which would help them a hundred per cent in their matches. So now where is that promoter? —H

Legion Urges National Unity To Commission

By CARL REINKE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA, May 26—If Canada is to become a nation in fact as well as name, national unity must be encouraged by the strengthening of the central government, the Canadian Legion asserted today.

United effort and high morale, in the Legion's view, were no less necessary for Canada in peace than in wartime, it declared in a submission before the Rowell Commission.

"It is with this knowledge that we feel impelled to make our plea for unity and to withhold our support from those forces which tend to develop nine sovereign states owing doubtful and grudging recognition to a central authority of limited power," said Col. C. Basil Price, Montreal, Legion spokesman.

"As we view the events of postwar years and realize how the lessons of those years have been disregarded while sectionalism has developed, we are frankly disheartened and dismayed.

"While we know this Commission is only a fact-finding body with power of recommendation, we come before you with the hope that you may find it possible to make recommendations which will tend to strengthen the national government, with the provinces equitably provided for, and thus tend to the development of a nation with unity as its keynote and high morale as its inspiration, and not simply a loosely knit confederacy."

So Canada might develop as a united nation, the Legion advocated a review of the whole structure of its constitution to ensure:

That the central authority has ample power to implement international obligations.

To make it clear that the central authority has power to legislate in matters which have become of national importance.

That provincial rights should not be permitted to develop to a point where each province becomes a sovereign state.

That means be provided whereby Canada can amend her own constitution.

This would all be subject to the one condition that "special rights and privileges already accorded to minorities shall not be abrogated or reduced without the full consent of the minority affected."

In addition the Legion proposed inclusion in the British North America Act of a constitutional declaration of the rights fundamental to Canadian citizenship, "in particular, those rights which ensure civil and religious liberty, free speech, free assembly, a free press, and, most important of all, an independent judiciary with right of free access to our courts."

Col. Price told the Commission these views had been approved in general at the Legion's bi-ennial meeting last January and had been approved by eight provincial branches. New Brunswick had not concurred. This was not indicative, however, of disagreement but merely that the New Brunswick branch doubted the value of such organization making such a presentation.

The Legion submission wound up a day in which the Commission received the appeal of the National Council of Women for clarification of marriage laws and protection of the status of women in industry, a plea by the Health League of Canada for revival of the Dominion-provincial co-operative effort against venereal diseases and greater use of preventive measures generally for the protection of health, and the proposals of a United Church group to increase social security.

British Cruiser At Strike Scene

KINGSTON, Jamaica, May 26—(CP Cable)—The British Cruiser Ajax steamed into Kingston harbor tonight after an emergency call from Jamaican Governor Sir Edward Denham brought her from Bermuda to guard lives and property in Kingston's general strikes.

Waterfront workers who started the strikes Saturday refused compromise wages offered by shipping companies today. They demanded a flat wage of 40 cents an hour for day work and 50 cents an hour for overtime. Night rates were not mentioned.

The offer would raise the pay for wharf workers from eight to 10 pence (16 to 20 cents) an hour for day work. Night workers would receive the old rate, 33 cents. Ship workers would receive 18 cents for day work and 37 cents for overtime.

Wings Rally To Defeat Royals

(C. P. by Guardian's Special Wire)

MONTREAL, May 26—A seven-run outburst in the fifth inning after their opponents had gone ahead with five tallies in the fourth gave Rochester Red Wings a 9-5 win over Montreal Royals today and sent the Wings into sole possession of third place in the International Baseball League.

Rochester sent 7 men to bat in their big inning, clubbing Ed. Chapman out of the box and continued the assault on Marvin Duke. Six of the runs came in with two men out and Sam Nabron's long double with the bases loaded was the most telling blow.

Anticosti Island Will Not Fall Into Foreign Control Says Premier In Commons

OTTAWA, May 26—(CP)—Anticosti Island, the huge wooded territory at the mouth of the St. Lawrence River, will not fall into foreign hands, Prime Minister MacKenzie King indicated in the House of Commons today.

The Government is now considering what action should be taken in view of negotiations reported being carried on between the consolidated Paper Company, owners of the island, and a German group. It has been in consultation with the Government of Quebec and both Governments are agreed it would be undesirable to permit the island to pass into foreign control.

Mr. King made his statement after Conservative Leader Bennett and J. S. Woodsworth, C. C. F. Leader, had urged the Government to expropriate the island.

Mr. Bennett said he had looked into the position carefully and had ascertained there was an option for the sale of the island, nominally to a foreigner.

Further he had learned the party of experts who visited the island recently were men "of great eminence in Germany—eminence as military and naval experts," and only one of them was a forestry expert.

The Government should immediately consult officers in the departments of justice and national defence and reach a decision.

"The Government has been fully alive from the beginning to all that has taken place," said Mr. King. "It has gone into the matter very carefully and is in correspondence with the Government of Quebec.

"I am glad to say the Quebec Government and this Government take one view of the matter."

Had the German investigations been limited to the amount of wood on the island they need not have caused any concern but they were something more. The party of experts was very large and the men in it enjoyed a "high reputation of skill but not as foresters or as woodmen."

Cites Progress Of Work In National Park

Considerable progress had been made in work in the Island National Park since the program was begun last year, J. Smart of Ottawa, assistant comptroller and chief inspector of the National Parks of Canada, said here yesterday.

Accompanied by Stanley Thompson, well-known golf architect, Mr. Smart intended to remain here a few days.

Work on the Dalvay House at Tracadie would be continued this season, Mr. Smart said. Foundations had been rebuilt and a new and larger cellar dug while a number of the floor joists were removed and replaced with spruce and fir. The upper storey was restuccoed.

This year the verandah, which was in a state of disrepair, will be torn down and reconstructed. The roof has been repaired and stained and the whole building will eventually be repainted on the outside and redecorated inside.

It was planned for the time being to leave the layout intact. One section would be reserved for administrative offices and the rest would be available for the use of the public as a community centre.

There will be a large community room and reception room and it was hoped that suitable concessionaries would be obtained for running a tea room in the building. A women's rest room and lounge will be fitted up and men's toilets installed.

"We hope," said Mr. Smart "that clubs and organizations will avail themselves of the privilege to use certain rooms."

A certain amount of work will be done in grading and landscaping. Facilities will be provided for camping and picnics, tables and stoves being available for those who wish them.

Applications will be received for the conducting of a dance hall in accordance with park regulations.

Stanley Thompson accompanied Mr. Smart for the purpose of looking over prospective sites in the park for a golf course. Mr. Thompson has laid out courses in Canada and the United States, including the courses at Banff, Jasper Park, in South America and other places.

At Dalvay a commodious main bath house is being constructed with dressing rooms and checking system. The house is only about 200 feet from the beach. Recreational areas will also be established, also a baseball diamond and tennis court.

It was expected a great deal of this work would be completed this year so that its facilities would be available for the summer season.

Another large bathing house is being built in the Cavendish area and will be completed in time for the swimming season. Facilities for picnic parties will also be provided.

Some work has been undertaken in connection with the Anne of Green Gables property, it was said.

It was proposed to construct a road from Dalvay west to Stanhope and other points running through the park property so that any part of the park will be accessible from the provincial highway. This road will be of the standard park type, 22 feet wide. One mile has already been completed from the approach at Dalvay to the house itself.

At Brackley it was proposed to rebuild the road leading to the beach, which is a favorite bathing resort, and build a main bathing house with secondary bathing houses east and west on the sand dunes.
