IN MEMORIAM

Many friends will regret to learn of the death of Miss Irene McKinnon who passed peacefully away at the home of her father, Mr. Hugh McKinnon, Bradabane, Aug. 9th, at the early age of 22 years. Her illness of several months was borne with patience and cheerfulness, and her last hours were the happiest of all, knowing she would soon be in the presence of her Redeemer.

Irene by her kind and cheerful disposition had won the deserved respect and esteem of a host of friends and her death in the bloom of womanhood has left in the hearts of those who knew and loved her a void which shall not soon be filled; and while the loss to her friends is great it is in the home the blow falls most heavily and the heartfelt sympathy of the whole community go out to the sorrowing father and mother and their irreparable loss. During the war she worked untiringly to provide comforts for our Noble Boys at the front, and her efforts did not cease when they began to return but was foremost in preparing a welcome for them.

The funeral service was conducted by her beloved pastor Rev. John Strickland, assisted by Rev. G. Ayers. And the large number in attendance testified to the high esteem in which she was held and gave expression of sincere sympathy to the bereaved. The floral tributes were many and beautiful. The casket was borne by Harry and John Elliot, Clark Crosby, F. Murray Cuyler Matheson and Louis McKay. The remains were laid to rest in the Fredericton Cemetery.

MAY BE ABLE TO REFLOAT CRAFT

YARMOUTH, N. S., Aug. 12—A tug returned late last night from the Gloucester schooner Mary E. Harty, ashore at Race Point, Seal Island, and this morning left again for the scene. Captains of the tug report a possibility of floating the necessary apparatus to take her off the rocks. The schooner struck at three o'clock on Monday and after going on the rocks swung around and lies in an excellent position to be refloated. The schooner's keel and rudder are gone and the tide flows and ebbs through her. Carpenters are going to the scene with material to stop the inflow, which will be attempted at low tide this evening. The vessel will afterwards be pontooned and towed. Boat captains anticipate her refloating on the following tide. Captain L. W. Hines, of Yarmouth, is looking after the interest of the owner, W. H. Jordan and Company, Gloucester.

TOUCHING INCIDENT OF A STOWAWAY

There was one man on board the giant cubic ship Colonia when she dropped anchor in the steam Saturday that was not on the ship's papers when she left her last calling port in England. His name is Arthur Hollen, aged about 30 years, and his presence on board made a total of 141 men. Two days after the Colonia left London Hollen made his appearance. He told the commander and officers of the ship that he went dead broke in England, where he was marooned after a long time in the trenches in the various battle zones. He became a stowaway that he might get back to his people in Winnipeg, and was willing to take his trick at any kind of work on shipboard.

That he was a different type from the ordinary stowaway was gleaned from an interesting incident that happened on board the Colonia shortly after dropping anchor in the stream Saturday. When immigration officer Dooley went on board to examine the ship's papers commander Campos informed him of Hollen's presence on board and all about it.

"I would ask you," said Commander Campos, "to let me have a few words with the young man before he goes over the side of the ship."

The request was naturally granted and when the local official returned with the stowaway the full ship's crew of 140 men, with a few exceptions, were lined up, together with the officers, each in turn bidding the young Winnipegger a fond good bye and wished him Godspeed. These kindly expressions were accompanied by a liberal donation in cash the officers and men contributing.

It was a rather touching scene, made more so when tears gelled up the young veteran's eyes as he stepped out on the landing and wended his steps down the ship's ladder leading to the tugboat. In waiting.

150 Avenue Pius IX, Montreal. "For three years, I was a terrible sufferer from Dyspepsia and my general health was very bad. SIR SAM HUGHES MYSTIFIES DOCTOR

LINDSAY, Ont., Aug. 11—Sir Sam Hughes, former Minister of Militia, who has been practically at death's door at his home in Lindsay for several weeks, is hanging on to life with a tenacity that has his family physician, Dr. J. McAlpine, mystified. "He has a rallying power that I cannot understand," said the doctor today. "His case is a wonderful one, and he is a remarkable man." On Sunday he was quite low and gave up hope and Monday afternoon he lapsed into a comatose state and was unconscious until 2.30 o'clock this morning. He was not expected to live through the night, but when I returned to his bedside this morning he put out his hand, greeted me with a smile, and asked me how I was feeling, and wanted to know the latest news of the day. He was very bright, his mind being clearer than it has been for some time past. He chatted with his brother, Colonel John Hughes of Bowmanville, and also with a couple of Lindsay friends who called to see him. Of course, his pulse is weaker, although his heart is good, he cannot possibly live much longer. Yet he is a remarkable man with an abundance of will-power."

An Experienced Shopper.

An Impious Utterance.

(From the Boston Transcript.) It would be an offence to decency to print the words of the following extract if these words were not uttered by the responsible spokesman of a very important labor union, and if their presentation did not betray very significantly the attitude and mental and moral temper of the more radical and reckless wing of the labor agitators:

The laboring man of the United States can be the Father Son and Holy Ghost of every damn thing in this country if he wants to. Or ganized, he can do everything he wants to.

These words were spoken, according to the report in the New York press, at an address by G. H. Planton, Vice-President of the United Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way Employees and Shop Foremen, before a meeting of the district council of the union held in New York yesterday. The matter under discussion was a resolution insisting on the eight-hour day for the members of the brotherhood. And Mr. Planton, after uttering this a lot of dead phony, went on to say that he did not care what the decision of the Federal Labor Board, not yet rendered, might be, but he proposed that the employees concerned and no more, anyway. We read that his remarks evoked great applause. The speaker revealed still another phase of his mind for attacking President Harding for suggesting the necessity of a reduction of wages just before his address to a lot of dead soldiers at Hoboken, in which he said that the American laborer ought to get a living wage and be able to save money. It is possible that the quoted words of the Vice-President of a Railway Brotherhood may become as famous, or as infamous, as the remark made long ago by the President of the Reading Railroad, Mr. G. F. Baer, in His Infinite Wisdom, had confided the control of the railroad interests of this country. There is an impious and Bolshevistic twang about Mr. Planton's utterance which can hardly fail to attract the attention, and arouse the indignation of the people, who still believe that even the "brotherhoods" should deal honestly and squarely with their neighbors, and respect not only the laws but the faith of their countrymen.

What The Theatres Must Learn

(From the Worcester Telegram.) The theatre public of war time and inflated wages has gone, but another public is ready and eager to take its place. It is a public not seen for a long time at the theatre, yet one which before the war was the mainstay of the entertainment world, particularly on the road. It is made up of the salaried man and his wife. It is made up of his family. It is ready to come back to its fourth row of the balcony or sixteenth row of the orchestra. But it has the habit of looking for value received, and made its mark on the market as a buyer. It cannot get quality it will not pay the price. It has learned the difference between the real and the shoddy, and will not pay prices for the one to get the other in the theatre any more than it will anywhere else.
