CAPTAIN BLOOD

A Romance of the Spanish Main

by RAFAEL SABATINI

Copyrighted, 1922 by Rafael Sabatini. "CAPTAIN BLOOD," a Vitaphone picture with J. Warren Kerrigan in the title role, is an adaptation of this thrilling novel.

CHAPTER XIII TORTUGA

At daybreak Don Esteban and his followers were put on a boat. Two days later, the three galleons sailed into the rock-bound bay of Tortuga, which nature seemed to have reserved for the stronghold of those who had appropriated it.

It was Blood's original intention to make his way to France or Holland. But in the long weeks of waiting at Tortuga for a ship to convey him to one or the other of these countries, his resources dwindled, and finally vanished.

Moreover, to a man, those who had escaped with Peter Blood from the Barbados plantations, and who, consequently, like himself, knew not whether to turn, were all resolved upon joining the great Brotherhood of the Coast, as those rovers called themselves. And they united theirs to the other voices that were persuading Blood demanding that he should continue now in the leadership which he had enjoyed since they had left Barbados, and swearing to follow him loyally whither-soever he should lead them.

The resolve being taken, he went actively to work. Ogeron, most accommodating of governors advanced him money for the proper equipment of his ship, the Cinco Lagas, which he renamed the Arabella. To the score of followers he already possessed he added three-score more, picking his men with caution and discrimination (and he was an exceptional judge of men) from amongst the adventurers of Tortuga.

"Good! My name," he informed the three men, two of whom at least were eyeing him askance, "it is Levasseur. You may have heard of me."

"They had, indeed. He commanded a privateer of twenty guns that had dropped anchor in the bay a week ago, manned by a crew mainly composed of French buccanniers from Northern Hispaniola, men who had good cause to hate the Spaniard with an intensely exceeding that of the English. Levasseur had brought them back to Tortuga from an indifferently successful cruise. A roaring, quarrelsome, hard-drinking, hard-gaming scoundrel, his reputation as a buccannier stood high among the wild Brethren of the Coast.

It was current gossip that even Mademoiselle d'Ogeron, the governor's daughter, had been caught in the snare of his wild attractiveness, and that Levasseur had gone the length of audacity of asking her hand in marriage of her father. M. d'Ogeron had shown him the door.

This was the man who now thrust himself upon Captain Blood with a proposal of association, offering him not only his sword, but his ship and the men who sailed in her. Because he disliked the man, Captain Blood would not commit himself at once. But, consented to consider it. Being afterwards pressed by both Hagthorpe and Wolverstone, who did not share his own personal dislike of the Frenchman, the end of the matter was that within a week articles were drawn up between Levasseur and Blood, and signed by them, and, as was usual, by the chosen representatives of their followers.

That night Levasseur slept on board his ship, which, with characteristic flamboyance he had named La Poudre, and there on the following day he received a visit from Captain Blood whom he greeted half mockingly as his admiral. Levasseur entertained his admirer to dinner, and jointly they drank success to the expedition, so copiously on the part of Levasseur that when the time came to separate he was as nearly drunk as it seemed possible for him to be and yet retain his understanding.

CHAPTER XIV LEVASSEUR'S HEROICS

It would be somewhere about ten o'clock on the following morning, a full hour before the time appointed for sailing, when a canoe brought up alongside La Poudre and a half-caste Indian stepped out of her and went up the ladder. He was the bearer of a folded scrap of paper for Captain Levasseur. Its contents may be roughly translated thus:

"My well-beloved: I am in the Dutch brig Jongvrow, which is about to sail. Resolved to separate us forever, my cruel father is sending me to Europe in your brother's charge. I implore you, come to my rescue. Deliver me, my well-beloved hero! Your desolated Madelon, who loves you."

IV. THE FIRST SPIRIT (Drawing: Christmas Past)

Very soon Scrooge got into bed and went sound asleep. After a while he heard the clock strike twelve. He jumped up and looked out of the window. It was dark; he had slept twenty-four hours and the first Spirit was due to visit him in an hour. Scrooge determined to wait up for the visitor. This was sensible, since he could no more sleep than go to heaven. The hour struck ONE.

A strange figure was at Scrooge's side, and for the fiftieth time he trembled. "Who are you?" he finally managed to ask. "I am the Spirit of Christmas Past, your Past. Touch my cloak and follow me." Scrooge wanted to argue the point, but was unable to and grasped the cloak. The two started on a journey, backward over the years. Soon tears welled up in the old man's eyes. (What caused the tears? Tomorrow's scene will tell.)

Miss Irene Wagner Tells How Cuticura Healed Pimples

"I was troubled with pimples from the time I was twelve years of age. Some of the pimples were very large and some were small. They were hard and red at first but after the second or third day they usually came to a head and gradually disappeared. They looked so badly that I was disgusted and did not want to go anywhere. One day I read an advertisement for Cuticura Soap and Ointment and decided I would send for a free sample. I purchased more and in two or three months the pimples disappeared." (Signed) Miss Irene Wagner, Box 881, Havre, Mont., Aug. 27, 1923. For every purpose of the toilet and bath, Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Talcum are excellent.

HOW TO IMPROVE YOUR PERSONALITY

Look your best. Make the best of yourself at all times and dress neatly and suitably for your part wherever it is, office, kitchen or parlor. It is a help to your job, a reinforcement of your self, Be sure your feet are dressed in shoes that do not throw your body out of balance; a growth on life often begins in the feet. And make your clothes look their best. How you wear them is more important than what they are. Dress your hair to frame the face. Select your hat also as a frame to your face. Get the constructive thought reflected from head to foot. Put it on with your clothes and wear it all day. Care for your body. This means fresh air, plenty of water, sun, proper diet for a person in your condition of life, inform yourself. Remember that water, air and sunshine are as necessary as food. Keep the air moving freely in your home and work out a plan that ventilates adequately all the time. Keep the body clean, polished, radiant. The mouth, teeth, skin and nasal passages will repay care in health and comfort and save dentist and doctor bills. Care of the hands and nails and of the hair are marks of refinement. The feet need the same care as the hands. Foot comfort depends on this care. Keeping clean internally means complete elimination through bowels and kidneys and pores of the skin. A clogged system is the

He Got a Hough

The agricultural education that we hear about should not be confined to the country. The city needs it too. A man went into a reading every day—and asked for a hoe. The young woman at the counter passed him a trowel and find that it was not what he wanted, asked him to pick out a hoe from the pile of garden tools. He did so. Then the saleswoman made out the slip. "One hough, 75 cents."—Youth's Companion.
