

Smart Style is Linked with VALUE in the $1465 GRAY-DORT

F.O.B. CHATHAM WARTAX EXTRA

The new Gray-Dort is a veritable treat to the eye—dignified, pleasing, modern.

The new hood with its many long, narrow louvers gives a European touch. So, too, does the smaller, smarter cowl. The gasoline tank is now in the rear. And the Raynite top, hand-tailored in our own shops, is easily the smartest top on any light car.

Crowning all is the lasting elegance of the coach-builder's art and finish which Gray-Dort craftsmen have spent 60 years in perfecting.

But this beauty of line and finish cloaks even more desirable features.

The smooth, quiet Gray-Dort motor with its 5 1/2 stroke and 3 1/2 bore; the heavy 40 lb. crankshaft; the channel steel frame; the heavier steering gear; the Thermoid brake lining; the improved ignition and carburetor; the Westinghouse starting and lighting systems; the heavier rear axle and cantilever springs, both Chatham-built—the more you know about cars the more superlatives will you find in the Gray-Dort, hidden under its robe of smart beauty.

At $1465 there is nothing in the light car class to match the refined and improved Gray-Dort.

It is the dominant VALUE. See it first.

JUST A GIRL

BY JANE PHELPS

ZENA'S ANSWER

CHAPTER 9. Mother nearly had a fit when I showed her Kenneth's letter. She told me to tear it up and forget all about it. Just as if I could! I didn't make any reply, and I guess she took it for granted I would do nothing more. If she had known I had put it with my most cherished possessions in the bottom of my jewel box, she would have had two fits. Claudia said once that what people didn't know didn't hurt them. So, while I wouldn't have hurt Mother's feelings for the world, thinking of what Claudia said made me feel I was doing Mother a favor in not telling her I kept the letter. Fortunately she never asked me not to answer it. Seemed to take it for granted I wouldn't. I didn't say anything about that, either. That night I had a dream. So I answered it in a few days without saying anything. I was an awfully hard letter to write. I never wasted so much paper, and was so long in saying a few words in my life. I used to scratch a note off to Jack Pryor or Gregory Stuart in no time. But this was different—more serious, although I don't know why. Perhaps I felt that way because Kenneth didn't dance and talk foolishness like the other boys did. But finally I finished a letter, and hurried out to the post box with it myself. I wasn't going to trust James, the butler, with it. James was perfectly devoted to Mother, and she might ask him not to mail my letter to California—Mother was capable of doing that, you know, if she thought it for my good. Why do people always say disagreeable things are for one's good? Not that I meant to deceive Mother about my letter. If she asked, I would tell her of course that I had answered Kenneth's letter. I would even tell her what was in it. I took particular pains to write it when she was out. That gave me a chance to say I couldn't show it to her because she wasn't at home. I did show it to Dad, as I had promised. He said it was a very nice and proper letter. He also sent his remembrances to Kenneth, which I thought very nice in him. I knew Kenneth would think so, too. Dad is rather a big man, and usually so dignified. I suppose, since I have told you what was in Kenneth's letter, I should also tell what was in my reply. I wrote: "Dear Kenneth: "I read your letter to Father over our coffee. He was rather pleased at the compliment you paid him—the silly dear! You have no need to tell me it is nice to be like Dad. I think him perfect. He's going to see this letter. I promised him, because it is my first to you. I don't mean he asked to see it; I offered you see, Dad and I are pals. "Yes, I like animals—especially horses. I have a dear little Pomeranian that Father says is nothing at all but a bark and a tail—but a small dog is the only sort Mother will let me have in the house. I'd love a great big wolf hound, or a police dog. "I saw Claudia the other day, and she spoke of you; said they had had such a nice letter thanking them for entertaining you. I told her she should have thanked you for coming; that it wasn't every girl who had a nice-big cousin to visit her. I haven't any relatives hard-ly. "I don't know why you thought I would forget you in a month. Or why you thought I would not take time to write you. I haven't kept you either hoping or waiting very long, have I? "Give my regards to the horse and the dog. You didn't tell me what kind of a dog, or its name. Also remember me to the old Mexican woman who cooks for you. I think she must be a quaint old woman. You recall you told me some stories about her. "I must stop now if this is to be posted tonight. It is a very uninteresting letter, but perhaps next time—if there is a next time—I'll write a better one. Now I'll let Dad read this. "P. S.—It has passed the censor. "Very sincerely, your friend, "Zena Stewart."
