Who's Going To Support You When You Marry? Urges Youth To Spare Parents

Dorothy Dix

Have a Heart for Your Poor Old Parents, Dorothy Dix Entreats Boys and Girls—Don't Marry Before You Can Support a Family and Then Dump it as an Added Burden on Your Tired Father and Mother

Boys and girls, have a heart. Consider your parents a little before you get married. Don't bring a wife or a husband home for your poor old father and mother to support.

You have thought that the reason that dad never took a vacation or got away from the office was because he had some sort of peculiar mental complex that made him prefer work to play.

Well, you are vastly mistaken. You are the reason why father has slaved over his desk and mother has got hump-shouldered bending over the gas range and the sewing machine.

But they were human, and a few feeble, selfish longings that even parental love could not entirely crush out, kept alive in their hearts.

Father would ease up on his work and mother could afford a maid in the kitchen. They would buy themselves some good clothes and mother would see if the beauty shop could massage out some of the tired lines.

And, best of all, when the children were grown they would have a chance to lay up something for their old age.

There isn't a sacrifice that your parents have made for you that they begrudge. There isn't a thing that they have done for you that they would have left undone.

Of course, it is done every day. In the last month I have seen the tragedy happen three times in families I know.

Of course, you say that you are so terribly in love that you can't wait to marry until you can finance your own home.

You are literally taking the bread out of their mouths when you force them to feed your wives and husbands and children.

It is poor pay for all your parents have done for you to force your old father to have to work harder and longer hours because he has more mouths to feed and to turn your feeble old mother into a nursemaid.

So, boys and girls, I beg you to have a heart. Consider your parents before you marry.
