THE LAW AND THE PEOPLE.

The Legislature in pursuance of its power to make laws "for the peace, order and good government" of the Province has passed a law prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors in our midst. It is safe to say that the open sale of intoxicants is the most effective means of destroying peace, order and good government. Nothing that goes on in our country produces so many breaches of the peace, creates so much disorder or so flagrantly interferes with good government as the liquor trade. This is not the opinion of total abstainers alone. It is the concurrent opinion of all the thinking people of the land.

The liquor traffic being thus in its nature destructive to the best interests of the community and of society at large it is clear that it would be well for the community if that traffic could be wholly suppressed. It is the prime object of the prohibitory law to suppress it. The object of the law is therefore a good one. That object will be attained just in proportion as the law is or is not enforced. It has been found in many countries that prohibition of liquor selling is difficult of enforcement, largely because the gains of the liquor seller and the appetites of their former customers array them against the law. Let us admit that with these are a few who would not sell under any circumstances, and who do not drink, but yet have in their minds some form of objection to prohibitory laws.

In their attitude toward the law now on the statute book the people are divided into two classes. On the one side and in favor of the law are, generally speaking, the clergy, the great majority of church members, the members of the temperance societies, many leading men of the community in trade and industry, in the professions and a large body of the honest workers. On the other side and at the head of the class opposed to the law are the men who are or have been engaged in the sale of liquors, and with them a large number whose appetite for strong drink has become a ruling power in their daily lives. There are still others of a more respectable class whose feelings are for one reason or another against the law, but who would be most unwilling to be classed in the same company with the liquor sellers and their unfortunate customers.

Once on a rare occasion it was the privilege of the writer to see the prohibitionists and anti-prohibitionists of a county in New Brunswick divided one from the other on a public square at the County Town. It was in the days when the late Sir Leonard Tilley, of happy memory, had given to his Province the first Prohibitory law in British America. When the time came for the Prohibitionists and Anti-Prohibitionists to divide the contrast was so great that many who had little favor for prohibition were ashamed to stand up and be counted with the rum-sellers and their customers, many of whom were well intoxicated at the time. These doubtful ones, for sheer respectability's sake, either went away from the scene altogether, or came over and were counted on the prohibitionist side, which by the way was much the more numerous body on the occasion referred to. The spectacle presented was one of the most striking and memorable of a life time.

We shall not be privileged to see such an open division in Charlottetown. But none the less there is in the community a distinct line of cleavage and we know full well the leading forces, persons and influences arrayed upon one side to uphold the law and on the other side, to break it down. Which of these two classes shall bear rule in Charlottetown? Which ought to bear rule? Are our people prepared for a condition of things in which a minority so made up and led by the men in the liquor trade, shall override both the law of the land and the overwhelming sentiment of the Province, in order that they may fill their coffers with money and fill our streets with drunkards? We do not believe that such is the attitude of the majority in Charlottetown.

It is a notorious fact that an organized effort is being made to break down the law, to defend its violators and to re-establish an era of free rum in our midst. Thousands of dollars have been subscribed (made up of money wrung mainly from the victims of a degrading appetite) counsel has been retained and the battle is now on. It is clearly in the interest of peace, order and good government, in the interest of every drunkard and his family and in every sense in the best interests of the community that the law shall be maintained and enforced. We trust therefore that the Government and its officers will be upheld and supported in an honest and energetic effort to enforce the law. The duty is an unpleasant one no doubt, but none the less imperative.

So far the operation of the prohibitory law has been distinctly wholesome and good. In the few days since it has come into operation here has been a marked decrease in drunkenness and disorder, a noted falling-off in corner loafing and other fruits of the liquor business. The better elements of the community, and even the poor victims of the appetite for drink have no sympathy with the unlawful vendor. The hopes and prayers of thousands are that the law may be upheld, and that the traffic may cease to exist. We sincerely trust that they may not be disappointed, and we believe that a more powerful weapon has been placed in our hands for the suppression of a great evil than we ever had before.

TO PREACH IN THEATRES.

CHICAGO, June 8.—The aim of the new national church just organized by those interested in the Peoples' church in Chicago, is to preach the gospel in the theatres of every great city in the United States. The idea is to gather into the theatres men and women who are devoted to Christianity, but independent of sectarian dogma and practice. Thus far the only obstacle to large cash contributions for the work has been the lack of a recognized organization.

NO ARGUMENT NEEDED.

Every Sufferer From Catarrh Knows That Salves, Lotions, Washes, Sprays and Douches do Not Cure.

Powders, lotions, salves, sprays and inhalers cannot really cure Catarrh, because this disease is a blood disease, and local applications, if they accomplish anything at all, simply give transient relief.

The catarrhal poison is in the blood and the mucous membrane of the nose, throat and trachea tries to relieve the system by secreting large quantities of mucous, the discharge sometimes closing up the nostrils, dropping into the throat, causing deafness by closing the Eustachian tubes, and after a time causing catarrh of stomach or serious throat and lung troubles.

A remedy to really cure catarrh must be an internal remedy which will cleanse the blood from catarrhal poison and remove the fever and congestion from the mucous membrane.

The best and most modern remedies for this purpose are antiseptics scientifically known as Eucalyptol, Gualacool, Sanguinaria and Hydrastin, and while each of these have been successfully used separately, yet it has been difficult to get them all combined in one palatable, convenient and efficient form.

The manufacturers of the new catarrh cure, Stuart's Catarrh Tablets have succeeded admirably in accomplishing this result. They are large, pleasant tasting lozenges, to be dissolved in the mouth, thus reaching every part of the mucous membrane of the throat and finally the stomach.

Unlike many catarrh remedies, Stuart's Catarrh Tablets contain no cocaine, opiate or any injurious drug, whatever, and are equally beneficial for little children and adults.

Mr. C. R. Rembrandt of Rochester, N. Y., says: "I know of few people who have suffered as much as I from Catarrh of the head, throat and stomach. I used sprays, inhalers and powders for months at a time with only slight relief and had no hope of cure. I had not the means to make a change of climate, which seemed my only chance of cure."

Last spring I read an account of some remarkable cures made by Stuart's Catarrh Tablets and promptly bought a 50-cent box from my druggist and obtained such positive benefit from that one package that I continued to use them daily until I now consider myself entirely free from the disgusting annoyance of catarrh; my head is clear, my digestion all I could ask and my hearing which had begun to fail as a result of the catarrh, has greatly improved until I feel I can hear as well as ever. They are a household necessity in my family.

Stuart's Catarrh Tablets are sold by druggists at 50 cents for complete treatment and for convenience, safety and prompt results they are undoubtedly the long looked for catarrh cure.
