To condense the world's history into the form of a periodical magazine, to omit no important details of permanent value, to eschew all political, personal, and religious bias, and yet to preserve due proportions and an intelligent insight into the general drift of the changes on the stage of events, is no easy task in these days when history is making with such bewildering rapidity. It is, however, done in most commendable manner by "Current History," and the service rendered is one which makes the work invaluable to journalists, politicians, teachers, librarians, and students, and in fact all intelligent watchers of the world's progress. In view of the problems arising out of the war with Spain, the annexation of Hawaii, and the still unsettled situation in the Far East, the present volume is one of exceptional interest. As a work of reference on all subjects of too recent date to be found in the cyclopedias, as a hand-book of the current affairs of to-day worthy of permanent preservation on the library shelf in home and school, none could speak too highly of this quarterly. Current History, 2d Quarter, 1898. Edited by A. S. Johnson, Ph. D. 260 pp. Illustrated with maps, portraits, and views. $1.50 a year. Single numbers, 40 cents. Sample copies, 25 cents. Specimen pages free. Boston, Mass.: New England Publishing Co., 3 Somerset St.

HARVEST CONCERT.—The Mission Band of the North River Baptist church had a very successful harvest concert on Sunday evening, Sept. 11th. The church building was packed and numbers were not able to obtain standing room. The exercises by the children consisted of recitations, singing and dialogues. Several numbers were finely rendered by the choir of the church, and Rev. A. F. Brown, the pastor, gave a short address on the word "Advance" as applied to Christian missions. The church was beautifully decorated with ripened grain, autumn leaves, flowers, mottoes, &c. On one side over the platform appeared the Union Jack and on the other the Stars and Stripes. The collection for missions amounted to about ten dollars. The Mission Band is in a flourishing condition and forms a very important element in the church.
