SAYS DUNCAN REPORT MUST BE ADOPTED

Failure to Implement Recommendations Would be Fatal, Editor Says.

MONTREAL, Dec 24. —Canada risks facing a sectional problem comparable with the Irish troubles in series, failing the adoption of the Duncan report on Maritime Provinces rights, in the opinion of Rielie Thomson, associate editor of the Financial Post. Addressing the Lion's Club at luncheon today, the speaker offered the recommendations of the report recently laid on the table ot Ottawa, as the means of ridding the Dominion of a perilous thorn in the flesh.

He found the Maritimes at present in such a state of discontent that he declared it impossible to fairly conceive the results of rejection of the report. Their grievances he found in most cases substantially were justifiable.

Claims Justified

Their appeal for freight rate concessions were met with the argument that the Canadian National Railway was not prospering. This answer he pointed out, came in the face of knowledge that the Intercolonial Railway was never intended to be a money making proposition under promises made at the time of its construction. Other railway questions were examined by the speaker. "It seems to me that they have a great deal of right on their side in railway claims," he declared.

Grievances concerning canals and immigration also found an exponent in the speaker, who said the Maritimers felt they paid an annual tribute for both and got little in return. "It amounts, they feel," said the speaker, "to taxation without proportionate participation."

Not Benefitting Maritimes

At some length he recited that the tariff policy of the Dominion was not benefitting the Maritimes. In regard to the steel and coal industries he submitted that the British Empire Steel Corporation, incidentally the largest corporation in the country, was in a regrettable plight because of hard economic facts and through no mismanagement.

The recommendations of the Duncan report were explained by the speaker in detail.

The increased annual subsidy of $1,600,000 to the three provinces, the reduction of freight rates to the same level of other provinces; the establishment of harbor boards, granting of bounties to the steel industry to enable competition with American interests, and other proposals of importance.
