HOME GUARD—At the weekly drill, Tuesday last, it was decided to give the members here who are unable to handle a rifle some rifle practice at the range. Several citizens who have provided rifles and ammunition have volunteered to instruct the men, and give them the ammunition. All Home Guards here, willing to come out next Monday afternoon, or any young men who would like to get some practical lessons in shooting, are invited to Kensington Rifle Range at 2:30 Monday afternoon. Rifle practice is exceedingly necessary these troubled times, but unfortunately both rifles and ammunition are short at the present time. It might be stated that an extra effort is being made by the officers and men of the Home Guard to have a good parade Tuesday night next at the Drill Hall.

McCORMICK BINDER

The McCormick binders are made to meet the most exacting conditions of the grain crops, a binder that will meet field conditions successfully year after year deserves the careful consideration of every farmer who grows grain.

The McCormick binder is a very easy running machine. The frame is substantially built and well braced, another reason why the McCormick binder runs so easy is that the working bearings are in self-aligning boxes fitted with roller bearings, that is why a McCormick binder will run lighter, the longer it is used.

The McCormick binder embodies several special features to perfect its work in the field by having a level bottom platform and reel with double bearing and large range of adjustments, which enables it to handle short or down and tangled grain almost to perfection.

The McCormick binder elevator floats at three points, and therefore has the large capacity required for handling heavy grain. The platform and elevator canvasses are tightened and loosened by a simple device on the rollers, the butter on a McCormick binder is controlled by the driver from the seat, and can be changed for short or long grain without interfering with position of the twine on the sheaf. Note the steel disc in the point of the needle to prevent wear, and the cutting of twine. The McCormick knoter is one of the simplest knoters made, having only two moving parts—the twine disc and billhook, every knoter is thoroughly tested before being shipped. This fact, together with the simple construction, accounts for the excellent work of the McCormick Knotter in the field.
