INTERESTING EXPERIENCE—Mr. and Mrs. Morley M. Bell, of Summerside, have just returned from a few days visit to Moncton, N. B. While there they had an interesting experience. Just about five miles past the car shops at Moncton on the Georgetown Road is a slight incline of about two hundred yards which the people of the district have named "Electric Hill." It was discovered during the latter part of this summer that an automobile upon reaching the bottom of the incline would be drawn up the hill with the engine shut off gaining in velocity as it ascended; on the other hand if upon reaching the bottom one wished to go on up the opposite incline, there appeared to be an unseen force holding back the car, so much so that it is with difficulty that the driver can make the grade in "high." Mr. Bell says several people have noticed this strange phenomenon and it has been commented upon in the press, but so far no one has found out just what causes it. Mr. Bell could hardly believe the story so his host, Dr. Donald of Moncton drove him to the place to experience the unusual occurrence for himself and Mr. Bell is now convinced that there is something strange about that part of New Brunswick.—S
