CANADIAN PRESS MEN MEET IN HALIFAX

A LEASED LINE WILL BE ESTABLISHED FROM HALIFAX TO VANCOUVER FOR THE EXCLUSIVE USE OF THE CANADIAN PRESS

HALIFAX—A conference of officers and directors of the Canadian Press with the maritime publishers was held in the executive council room of the province building yesterday. The subject of discussion was the question of co-operation for improvement of the newspaper telegraphic service of the Dominion. The president, secretary and directors of the Canadian Press came to Halifax to confer with the representatives of the maritime province dailies on this question, and there was an extended discussion. The Dominion government has offered assistance to the Canadian Press to the extent of $50,000 a year, and it is planned to establish a leased, twenty-hour press service from Halifax to Vancouver, thus bridging the gaps in the service now existing. The following names were present:

E. F. Slack, president Canadian Press, Ltd. (Montreal Gazette).
E. H. Macklin, first vice-president Canadian Press Ltd. (Manitoba Free Press).
C. O. Knowles, general manager Canadian Press, Ltd. Toronto.
J. F. B. Liversay, assistant general manager Canadian Press, Ltd. Winnipeg.
C. F. Crandall, secretary-treasurer Canadian Press Association, Ltd. (Montreal Star).

"CAN THE KAISER"
U. S. WAR SLOGAN
LONDON—The newspapers declare today that the soldiers and marines of Pershing's army have already found a slogan, which is "Can the Kaiser!"
The Daily Express commenting on the American use of the word "can," ponderously explains that it is used in the sense of hermetically sealing the Kaiser to prevent his further activity.

There is no American trait more puzzling to their British cousins than the ability to invent slang phrases. The British public already has picked up many American slang words and phrases from the movies, but it is on the eve of a new era of modified Americanisms. American slang already promises to become popular among the British troops, who will pass it on to the people at home.

So far as the records show, the slogan "Can the Kaiser" was first suggested by W. O. Stoddard, Jr. of Madison, (N. J.), who on June 18 wrote a letter to The Sun suggesting that phrase as a war motto.
He incorporated it in stirring parody on "Dixie"—or rather, a version of "Dixie" brought up to date, which he wrote (according to his letter) "on train to New York." His modernization of the rebel war song and which was printed on The Sun's editorial page of June 19 follows:

In khaki suit and army visor,
All aboard to can the Kaiser.
Look away! Look away! Look away!
Germany!
In Kaiserland he reigns alone.
We'll pu! the Kaiser off his throne.
Look away! Look away! Look away!
Germany!
Then I want to can the Kaiser! Hooray!
In Kaiserland I'll take my stand
Until I can the Kaiser.
Let's go, let's go let's go and can the Kaiser.
Let's go, let's go, let's go and can the Kaiser.

Valuable Farm for Sale
The beautiful farm on which was formerly located the well known Pleasant View Hotel, owned and so successfully operated for a number of years by the late Hon. Matthew Smith, is now offered for sale by the undersigned. The farm consists of a square block of land containing 94 acres, all level and clear, and in an excellent state of cultivation.
A fine new dwelling replaces the hotel which was destroyed by fire three years ago. Water is found on tap in the house and barn yard.
The owner, who is leaving the country on account of ill health, would prefer to sell crop—or even crop, stock and implements along with farm but would consider any offer.
This is one of the best and most beautifully located farms in this section of the Island, fronting on Northumberland Strait, and is near to Churches, School, grist and saw mill.
If farm is not sold by July 25th, other arrangements are being entered into.

PTE. ROY A. MACDONALD.

It is with deep feelings of sadness that the death is chronicled of Pte. Roy A. Macdonald, son of Mr. and Mrs. David Macdonald of Peters Road—who was killed in action in France on April 9th, 1917. Pte. Macdonald died in his prime, having not yet attained the 23rd year. Leaving home some four years ago for the West, he located with his brother Russell at Phoenix, B. C., but when the war clouds rose, and the call came for volunteers for King and Country he speedily enlisted and in the 54th Battalion while serving in France, he gave all that he could, his life, for King and country and right, and while tears may fall as loved ones mourn, yet the noble death is a consoling feature to the bereaved parents and family, to whom in their sorrow deep sympathy is extended. On a recent Sabbath Pastor Rev. A. Sutherland held a memorial service in commemoration of the sad event, and in fitting terms referred to the part the deceased had performed for others. The following extracts were received by Mr. Macdonald from the Chaplain of Pte. Macdonald's Battalion.

54th Canadian, B.E.F., France 19-5-17.
Dear Mr. Macdonald: I deeply regret having to confirm the sad intelligence already sent you of the death of your son Pte. R. A. Macdonald No. 931385, who was killed in action on the morning of the 9th April. He took part in an important engagement, and was instantly killed early in the action. His remains were reverently laid to rest in the field of battle, by the side of many of his brave comrades, who fell in the same engagement. I desire to assure you of my deep personal sympathy with you in the loss of your gallant son, who so bravely gave his life in defence of home and country. May God comfort and sustain you and all the members of your household in this trying hour.
Yours most sincerely,
J. H. WHITE, Chaplain.

CHEMISTS SEE PROFIT IN GAS FUEL FROM STRAW NOW WASTED
By Ella Hendrick.
Vice President of the Chemists' Club
There is a man by the name of George Harrison who lives in Moose Jaw, Saskatchewan, and he is a master mechanic. There's another man by the name of Robert D. MacLaurin who lives in the city of Regina, Saskatchewan, and he is a chemist. He has been studying the properties of straw for a time he was here at the Rockefeller Institute, and now he is head of the Department of Chemistry at Saskatchewan University. Both are live men, men with imagination. They knew that the fuel problem was a serious one among the grain farmers of the prairies of Western Canada, as it is among those of the United States. Nights are long and cold in winter, wood is not abundant on the prairies, and coal is not only dear but sometimes you can hardly get it at any price. Selah.

Straw is a nuisance, and, except for the little needed for bedding stock, it is usually burned in the West. Freight is too high to ship it far, and you have to ship it far to get any kind of a price for it. In the Western prairies of Canada alone they have 20,000,000 acres in crop and from that they have an annual yield of over 20,000,000 tons of straw. Chemically, straw is not unlike wood and is, therefore, becoming with coal. Physically it is a nuisance because of the room it takes. Like wood and coal, it may be distilled in closed retorts and the results is good, inflammable gas, 10,000 cubic feet of gas per ton of straw after it has been scrubbed and the tar and ammonia removed from it.

Its heating value is 400 British thermal units per cubic foot, so that if all the straw of Western Canada could be conveniently handled and turned into gas, the 20,000,000 tons would produce, converted into power, 22,000,000,000 horsepower hours or 2,511,000 horsepower years. This is seven times the power obtained in Canada from Niagara Falls. Just consider the problem, please: coal dear and hard to get that the only inconvenient to handle that the only thing to do seems to be to burn it up after it has been through the thrashing machine. All that heat wasted in warm weather with a coal famine ahead and the long, cold winter nights come on! It seems as though there should be some way of turning the trick.

It has been turned by George Harrison, with the advice and aid on the chemical side, and the enthusiastic support of Professor MacLaurin. It will cost the farmer no more than $500 to equip his entire gas plant, and he need buy no more coal from that time forward. His wife will cook with gas, his house will be heated with it and so will his outhouses; he can shell his corn, pump water, and run his thrashing machine and grind his meal by means of a gas engine; he can have all the heat and light that he wants and then a great quantity to spare.

The Harrison process for utilizing cereal straw requires first that the straw be baled into a size and shape to fill the retort. This makes a bale about seven feet long, two feet wide, and six inches high; not too much to handle. The retort consists of three oval cylinders made of highly refined steel which are set up in the usual fashion. Then there is a scrubber to remove the tar and ammonia and a gas holder.

That is the apparatus. Into each cylinder a little bale of straw is charged and then, underneath the retort, a fire of straw is started, or if there is gas in the holder the heating may be done with gas. It takes about 30 per cent of the gas made to produce it in this way, but it is very convenient; all the farmer has to do is to turn the gas on after he has charged the retort and then come around in half or three-quarters of an hour and turn it off again. This will give him gas enough to last twenty-four hours. It is estimated that thirty to forty tons of straw will provide the average farmer with all the heat, light, and satisfactory power he requires for a year. The average farmer in the east raises far more than that.
For every ton of straw the farmer gets six to eight gallons of tar and ammoniacal liquor. This, in its crude state, will pay for baling the straw. When the gas is made there remains in the retort finely divided carbon called char, which is in effect lampblack, about 600 pounds to the ton of straw. It is now worth 15 to 18 cents a pound, being imported into Canada for use as black paint. If farmers could get one cent a pound for it it would make their straw worth 36 a ton after they had got the gas out of it. Since a farmer cannot possibly use up all his straw in this way if he has a hundred or more acres in grain, the neighboring towns and villages will probably take it worth his while to bale up the rest of it. A ton of straw that produces 10,000 cubic feet of gas, together with tar and ammonia, is worth hauling, especially where coal is dear.

ADDRESS AND PRESENTATION.
The following address was presented to Mr. Malcolm E. McDonald, teacher, Middleton School, Lewes, Lot 60: Dear Teacher—We the pupils of Middleton School take this opportunity of expressing our love and esteem for you as well as our regret that you have resigned as teacher of our school and that the ties that have bound us to each other as teacher and pupils during the last two years are about to be severed. But we assure you that the days we have spent together will always remain fresh in our memories and that we shall always refer to them as being some of the brightest and most pleasant of our lives. You have always been a diligent and active teacher, never sparing yourself in anything that tended to our comfort and pleasure during school hours. The example set us by you in industry, tidiness and cleanliness cannot fail of good results. And now dear teacher, we beg you to accept this gift as a very small token of our esteem and affection for you, and you may count the pupils of Middleton School among your many friends, as you shall always have the love and respect of ourselves and our parents. In parting we wish you many years of success and happiness. Signed on behalf of pupils: Christy M. MacLean, Annie Nicholson, Mary C. McKinnon, J. David Wallace, Mary J. McAnlay, Lewes, Lot 60, June 29th, 1917.
