

Canada's Husky Wings of Peace Flying For War

By LORNE BRUCE

Canadian Press Staff Writer EDMONTON, Sept. 3 (CP)—War has taken over the romance of commercial aviation and this husky infant of Canada's industry life now is being used almost entirely or indirectly in military effort.

Civil aviation probably has converted itself into a military endeavor more than any other industry operating before hostilities broke out in 1939. Ninety per cent of the industry is devoted to war work and it is difficult to get freight or passenger space without a priority.

Planes for War The chief obstacles to expansion now are the difficulty of procuring suitable commercial aircraft, especially freighter, that can carry big loads, together with scarcity of experienced personnel.

aviation only on the rare occasions when the priority board decides the move is vital to the war effort. In conversion to a wartime basis, the commercial aviation industry provided the framework without which the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan might not have risen to the success anticipated for it. The industry's fields, its personnel and the flying clubs were merged into the training scheme.

Pilots for War In addition commercial aviation has sent hundreds of pilots, aeronautics engineers and mechanics into the R.C.A.F., the Royal Air Force and the ferry command, where their resourcefulness and experience under extreme weather conditions prove invaluable. The commercial aviation industry made rapid progress between the inauguration of the first regular airmail, passenger and freight service in the Dominion June 1, 1919, between Halifax, Ont., and Rouyn, Que. Now it has taken the war in its stride, having developed from a scattering of independent lines into a "big business" going "all out" for the war effort.

COUPONS UNNECESSARY "We don't need coupons for kindness," It's a joy that with all we can share. We don't need coupons for sympathy. Though it helps everyone everywhere. Let us face our troubles with cheerfulness. And courage for all of our needs. Develop our love with prayerfulness. And turn it to practical deeds. Charity too is untrammeled. Its store is unending and free. And though as a word it's old-fashioned Its meaning is as plain as can be. These gifts are a storehouse of treasure. On which we may draw without end. God has given them free without measure. That we may share them with a friend.

Refreshment NANCY COLEMAN — a refreshing sight in herself — arrives with a flinking tray of liquid refreshment for a sunny California noon. She is featured in "Desperate Journey," the Warner picture which stars Errol Flynn and Ronald Reagan with Alan Hale.

Make Graceful Tiebacks The need for substantial tiebacks in the living room gave us an idea. We cut off the handle of a coat hanger, keeping the first loop of the metal ends to hold a wall nail. It took just a moment to shape the middle of the hanger into a graceful form which fits our curtains firmly in place. Some of these tiebacks are pinned by hand to match the color schemes of the various rooms.

Meat Demonstration at Prince Edward

A razor-edged knife in a master's hand will be pitted against a stopwatch in Charlottetown in the Prince Edward Theatre, September 4th, before a representative audience invited by the Maritime Stock Breeders' Association and numerous women's organizations and service clubs, according to an announcement by J. H. Tapley, General Manager of Swift Canadian Co. Ltd., of Toronto.

William A. Denissen has been loaned by the Swift organization in the United States to give a demonstration lecture on the proper method of cutting, roasting and retail cuts of beef and lamb, preparing poultry, and carving meat at the table. He will conclude with the complete dressing of a chicken in ten seconds. This feat has been acclaimed as miraculous by chefs, but Mr. Denissen says it is a "simple kitchen job anyone can do with a little practice."

Junior Champion

One of the answers to Canada's growing beef demand is this fine Shorthorn specimen—the Junior Champion Female of the Provincial Livestock Exhibition held in Charlottetown recently. The prize cow is owned by A. H. Boswell and Son, Marquisfield. There was a good showing of this particular breed at the Fair and the Judge was particularly pleased with the quality of the cattle displayed. Boswell and Son had many more splendid animals on display.

Good Showing Of Ayrshires

Grand Champion Male

Mr. Cecil J. Stewart, Hampshire, is shown here displaying his high-quality male Holstein who entered as Grand Champion Male in a keenly contested class at the recent Provincial Exhibition in Charlottetown. Although there were not so many Holsteins entered in competition this year, the quality was up to the usual high standard as is evidenced by the type of animal shown in this picture.
