Election Looked For By Xmas

WINNIPEG, Aug. 23.—That there would be a general election before Christmas was the impression of Senator Geo. H. Bradbury, who arrived in Winnipeg today from Ottawa.

"It is my honest opinion that there should be an election, and the public demand and unrest is probably strong enough to force the government to appeal to the country before Christmas."

Irish Bulletin Is Contradicted

DUBLIN, Aug. 23.—The Irish Bulletin prints a long argument contrasting British government's dealings with northeast Ulster and the remainder of Ireland. "Compulsory free trade," says the Bulletin, "is imposed between Ireland and Great Britain. There is no such obligation between Ulster and Ireland but there are proposals involving a customs barrier between them. This is the traditional policy of using Ulster as a bridgehead for maintaining British military rule in Ireland."

Church Intervens In Ireland

DUBLIN, Aug. 23.—"The Hierarchy," as the Roman Catholic Church is known in Ireland, has intervened in the Irish peace negotiations. The Most Rev. Edward Muldoon, Lord Bishop of Down, came to the Bulletin last night with a message from "highest authority," which he delivered to Eamonn DeValera and other Sinn Fein leaders. There were long consultations over the message. Asked whether the message came from the "Cardinal," meaning Cardinal Logue, Primate of Ireland, the priest who accompanied him, Mgr. Mulhoon replied in the negative.

WAVE, TROT, WALK THE WINTER STEPS

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—No one will frown upon dancing if the dancing masters are able to carry out the ambitious programme outlined last week at the convention of the International Association, Masters of Dancing at the Hotel McAlpin. Interest was centered around ideas for better dancing for a nation that loves it not particularly as an art, but chiefly as a diversion. The dancing masters believe that a deeper appreciation of dancing should exist and realize that education alone can make a public look upon it as an art.

Lengthy debates were held over the present methods of uplifting dancing. The teachers have endeavored unsuccessfully to enlist the friendly aid of the clergy. In fact, their overtures to the Church only brought upon them greater opposition, they declare, so they can hope for no immediate aid in that quarter. They have been loud in their disapproval of the extreme dances which have thrived with the public without their endorsement, and they have issued reams of literature on dancing as it should be. An open challenge to the clergymen of New York to appear at their luncheon and debate with them, had been ignored, and propaganda has proved slow in results.

The dancing masters have decided that they will now try to make the teaching of dancing such that it will be impossible for the public to practice new dances that have not been endorsed by a recognized body appointed for regulating dances in various dance halls and places of amusement. In fact, they have a dance censorship. In Philadelphia dancing is censored by a combination dancing teacher and police inspector. Ever since she began teaching, Marguerite Walz has been an advocate of dance censorship and when the shimmy and toddle became so popular and even more extreme dances gave promise of becoming popular, she started an active campaign in Philadelphia against them. Her work among her pupils and at the municipal dances soon attracted attention, and she was appointed dance censor by the Mayor and given full police authority.

Miss Walz is enthusiastic over the success of her undertaking and says that the standard of dancing in Philadelphia has been greatly changed under this new supervision. At a recent municipal dance Miss Walz said that out of 20,000 people only five were reprimanded, where formerly at such affairs many arrests were made.

"Vulgarity is the expression of the individual," said Miss Walz, "and it should be the purpose of the dancing teachers to go after those who are degrading our work. We should be able to control it so that the ministers cannot attack us. Of course the present-day music is greatly responsible for immoral dancing, and if we wish to regulate the dance halls we will have to censor music as well." The Oriental and Hawaiian music is jazz is sure to stimulate the highly emotional, and then the exaggerated steps are the certain result."

At the closing session yesterday a committee was appointed to confer with the committee appointed by the opposing organization, the American National Association, with a view to consolidating the two organizations. "The two associations realize they are working for exactly the same ends," said Stivester P. Murray, "and they both see that they can more effectively work out their problems together. We hope to be able to effect this consolidation next Summer, and, once the two organizations are merged, we will then begin an active campaign for legislation regulating the teaching of dancing."

"Our plan, as roughly outlined here, is to have a teachers' college at which every teacher must graduate, this, of course, to be under some government supervision. We are quite as anxious as the public to eliminate bad dancing, but we have no protection now in regulating teaching. Under the present conditions any one who can get a class together can teach, no matter what his training or experience may be. If we are to uplift dancing we must now attract low such people to represent themselves as qualified to teach."

According to the decree of the dancing teachers attending the convention the dances for this winter will be the Tango Trot, the Saunter, the Society Walk and the Pershing Wave. Fox-trot music is still much in favor, but any jazz will be discouraged. Quieter, smoother steps are endorsed. In fact, there is a great tendency to go back to the lances of long ago, and some of the delegates even declared that we would soon be doing the old-fashioned schottische and the polka.

FORTUNES LEFT BY STAGE FAVORITES

It seems safe to say that Caruso left a larger fortune than any other great singer or musician. It has been estimated at about a million and a half dollars, but since Caruso is supposed to have lived at the rate of one hundred thousand dollars a year for many years past, it is probably within the mark to say that his voice earned him three million dollars and, because of the phonographic records, it will continue for many years to provide money for his estate. It is not often that the great artist is a great saver or a wise investor. As a rule he is so occupied with his art that he knows little about financial affairs except to be greedy. He has to depend upon others for advice in the handling of his money, and frequently it is frittered away in foolish speculations. If the artist is woman she is likely enough to take some wastrel as a husband, and in this way ensure the dissipation of her savings."

PATTI'S FORTUNE.
Patti made a huge fortune through her voice, but when she died her estate, instead of ruining into the

MELBA AND NORDICA
Melba, another noble singer, who has had a long period of success on the stage, has now retired and is reckoned one of the rich women of Australia. Occasionally she takes a pupil, not from necessity, but from pleasure, while Lilli Lehmann teaches only when she finds a voice which rouses her enthusiasm. Nordica, a fine artist and a charming woman, ought to have left a great fortune, but litigation has yet failed to reveal what became of her famous pearls. Nordica, like Caruso, was warned by her first teacher that she had no future as a singer and was urged to adopt any other profession.

RISH AND POOR

estate, though not as much as has been expected by those who had his frugal habits. Tagliapietra, once a great favorite in New York, left hardly any estate. Del Puerto, the baritone, saved his money and left his family comfortably off. Martine Roze, famous for her beauty as well as for her voice, died poor. Campanini made a lot of money with his voice, but when it failed him he invested his savings as an impresario and lost everything. Annie Louise Carey had never an opportunity to earn such fees. Lind or Patti, but she saved money, and when she died she left a handsome fortune. She had taken the precaution to become the wife of a wealthy man, who had advised her throughout her professional career. Josef Hofmann, popularly credited with having earned and saved more than any of fellows, with the exception of Caruso.

GREAT EARNERS
Paderewski, probably earned more money, but Paderewski is a patriot first and a pianist afterward. The great bulk of his money has been sunk in Poland, and probably he will not see much of it. Paderewski is by no means a poor man, and though he plays no more he continues to live comfortably in California. Heifetz's violin, credited with earning nearly a million dollars for himself and his managers, and will earn more. Rachmaninoff, who was robbed of his fortune by the Bolsheviks is now in the United States earning another one. It is estimated that in one year he received $200,000 which included royalties on his pieces, as well as fees for his performances. Auer also lost a fortune in Russia and is building up another one by teaching. He will have little difficulty in doing it while as regards Rachmaninoff, he continues to be as successful for the next few years as he was last season, he might accumulate as much wealth as Caruso.
