Mainly About People.

The elder Sothorn was extremely sensitive to interruption of any sort. Seeing a man in the act of leaving his box during the delivery of one of the actor's best speeches, he shouted out: "Hi, you sir, do you know there is another act?"

In response to a missionary's appeal for various articles for use on an African farm, a milking-stool was sent to him from England. He gave it to the negro whose duty it was to milk the cows, with injunctions to use it.

A Columbus, Ohio, pastor called on one of his parishioners, whose six-year-old boy is a bright youngster. Freddie had previously heard his mother say that the pastor was very successful in saving souls.

Mr. C. F. Stanbury relates in "The Barrister" many stories of Tom Nolan, the counsellor who for years kept the New York bar laughing at his conscious and unconscious drolleries.

In a series of sketches, entitled "Lights and Shadows in a Hospital," Mrs. Tertton tells of a melancholy man, depressed with rheumatism, in her cottage hospital, whom she wanted to cheer by reading.

At the time, now some years ago when subscriptions were being solicited for the erection of a statue in New York city to George Washington, a gentleman called on Russell Sage to secure a contribution.

Quizzing a boy is not always so easy as it seems. The Cincinnati "Enquirer" gives an instance in which a business man of that city came out second best in a passage at repartee with a boy named Claude who looks after the hat-rack in a well-known restaurant.

At the watch night of the Authors' Club on the occasion of the outgoing of the old and the incoming of the new year last winter, the subject discussed was "Fame and Its Blunders."

There was an old monk of Siberia, whose life it grew drearier and drearier, till he broke from his cell. With a hell of a yell, and eloped with the Mother Superior, whose lines are supposed to symbolize Mr. Stockton's breaking away from editorial toil.

Senator William P. Frye was once talking to the celebrated naturalist, Agassiz, of his fishing experiences. "Among my triumphs," said he, "was the capture of a speckled trout that weighed fully eight pounds."

An Englishman went into a restaurant in a New England town, and was served for the first course with a delicacy unknown to him. So he asked the waiter what it was, and the waiter replied: "It's bean soup, sir."

Has Been. An Englishman went into a restaurant in a New England town, and was served for the first course with a delicacy unknown to him.
