hands. You were in every sense of the word a true comrade, and when the days were darkest your unbounded optimism, your never flinching courage, and your zeal for the welfare of all, were, indeed, an inspiration to us to push forward and conquer. Your sympathetic attention to the sick and wounded, as well as your efforts to comfort the dying, were also object lessons to all those who were privileged to witness your ministrations. And when the time came for us to take our accustomed places in civilian life you did not cease your efforts in our behalf. Whenever the cause of the returned men needed a champion, your eloquent tongue and gifted pen were at our command, and it was indeed a tribute to your ability that your espousal of our cause was almost invariably followed by public recognition of the justness of our claims.

We shall miss your co-operation in all our activities. Since the close of the war you have officiated annually at our Armistice Day proceedings; in fact, at all our public functions you were always willing to lend your valuable assistance.

And now dear Padre, we say farewell. Rest assured that we shall follow your career in the city of Montreal with interest. We trust that health and happiness may be yours, and that some time in the near future you may return to renew your associations with your war-time comrades in Prince Edward Island, the Great War Veterans' Association.

H. A. MacDougall,
President.
G. E. SHERREN,
Secretary.

A suitable presentation was then made to Mr. Taylor by Dr. Croken.

Mr. Taylor, in a brief and appreciative reply, spoke of the enjoyment he had derived from his companionship with the boys after their return from the War.

Remarks were then made by several of the Association members. Major T. E. McNutt, in expressing his regret at the departure of Mr. Taylor, told of what he had done for the boys overseas, often at a considerable sacrifice to himself.

Mr. R. L. Cotton said that he, by passing to Mr. Taylor at the shipside his commission as Padre, had introduced him into the Army. Further remarks of regret and farewell were made by Mr. Charles Toombs, Mr. W. S. Hughes, Col. Stewart, Mr. Philip Palmer, Mr. H. R. Stewart, Major Walker and Mr. Chester Acorn. The proceedings closed with three hearty cheers for Padre Taylor.

MYSTERY AND FAST COMEDY

Twenty Authors of "Bobbed Hair" turned out Fine Picture.

If one good author can turn out one good story, twenty good authors can turn out a story twenty times as good—and if you see "Bobbed Hair," the Warner Bros. Classic of the Screen, which opened yesterday at the Prince Edward Theatre, you'll be convinced that this is good arithmetic and a mighty good picture.

Warner Bros., who produced this photoplay, lost no time in procuring one of the most popular novels of the season for screen use. Almost everybody who read the adventures of beautiful Connemara Moore in book form will be interested in seeing Marie Prevost in the same role on the screen. She is exactly the type pictured by the twenty famous authors—incidentally, it might be fair to mention them now:

George Agnew Chamberlain, George Barr McCutcheon, Robert Gordon Anderson, George Palmer Putnam, Alexander Woollcott, Meade Minnigerode, John V. A. Weaver, Louis Bromfield, Gerald Mygatt, Carolyn Wells, Rube Goldberg, Bernice Brown, Wallace Irwin, Frank Craven, H. C. Witwer, Elsie Janis, Ed Streeter and Sophie Kerr.

The story is a rollicking, swift-moving, joyful tale through whose maze of swift adventure progresses the charming heroine and the personable young men in love with her. Not only is it an adventure story, but a delightful romance as well; perfectly acted by a cast which includes Kenneth Harlan, Louis Fazenda, Francis J. McDonald, Pat Hartigan, Emily Fitzroy, Reed Howes, John Roche, Tom Ricketts Walter Long, Otto Hoffman and Kate Toncray, besides "Pal," the dog.

Hard Problem

Great Britain, represented by Lord Cecil, is opposed to launching into such study, believing that the covenant should be allowed to remain as it is, and that it is unwise to make disarmament contingent upon working out of the precise obligations of States in the event of war.

France and Belgium contend that disarmament will be difficult of attainment if certain countries, once disarmed, cannot count on definite support from the League in case they are attacked and believe that this support should be as powerful as, say, forces which the war making country could possibly throw against them. Hence, they argue, comes the necessity of devising a plan whereby the States would be more definitely committed to granting assistance than is provided for in Article XVI.

This article provides for economic and financial measures against aggressor State, but merely gives the Council the right to recommend to the governments what military, naval and air forces they should supply the League for protection of the League covenants France and Belgium believe that an aggressor State could successfully defy economic and financial sanctions, and that a precise military plan, which would be obligatory, should at least be studied.

This would bring matters a step further than was even stipulated by the Geneva peace protocol which Britain rejected, for the protocol merely authorized the Council to receive undertakings in advance from States as to what military and naval forces they would be able to contribute to the operation of the League penalties.

As during the protocol decision so now Britain objects to binding herself in advance as to what she can concretely do in the event of an outbreak of hostilities among League members. Another meeting of the Disarmament Council will be held tomorrow in an endeavor to reach an agreement.

Final Farewell

be able to have the same strong influence for good that it has always had.

In all that goes for the betterment of our citizenship, your voice and influence have always been on the side of right, and your example was always helpful in giving strength and vitality to every movement to make Charlottetown a better place to live in.

As a Pastor, your timely attention to every call and your anxiety to be a comfort in sickness and distress were not confined exclusively to your own charge, but were so generously distributed as to be available to every call that came.

As a people, we sometimes may have the weakness of the race, and be inclined to grumble and complain that what was being done at any particular time should have been done some other way than it was being done, and at times your people may have been inclined to set up their opinions against your opinions, but when these petty differences are seen in retrospect, they can now see that you were all honestly aiming at the same objective, but some of you by a slower tread than others—and these differences are quite unavoidable among people of Celtic blood, and particularly when the leader who has given closer study and consequently has a clearer vision, perhaps may have shown some impatience with the slower operations of the cautious minds of his followers. But all this is not really proof of weakness but, on the contrary, it is what has given strength to many a cause.

We part with you in a spirit of assurance that there is open to you a greater field for up-building for which your constructive mind and unbounding energy so well qualify you. And while you are quite a capable and far-seeing general in defence of the citadel, and the tearing down of old Christian strongholds is repugnant to your mind, yet you also have shown a spirit of advancement and initiative, so strong, but well-balanced, that in the great work that now lies before you we foresee achievements to your credit, worthy of the natural gifts with which you are so richly endowed and further developed by great industry and application.

For the Congregation you are parting with, the future is, under God, in their hands; they have the willing workers and, although their worldly means are not too abounding and the demands on them will require devotion and sacrifice, yet these have been the outstanding qualities of the people of Zion Church in the past, and as God has prospered His work in their midst in the days gone by, they shall enter the future without fear or misgivings.

In conclusion, Sir, your fellow citizens assembled in our City Hall here, are pleased that an opportunity has been afforded us to meet with you, to express our good will towards you and join in our best wishes for your future welfare.

Signed on behalf of the people of Charlottetown.

(Sgd.) JOHN McKENNA,
Mayor.
(Sgd.) GEO. P. NICHOLSON,
City Clerk.

Mr. Taylor, rising to reply, said that in the last week he had been the object of many surprises, and when this evening a voice over the telephone had asked him if he would be at leisure to meet with citizens in the City Hall, he had felt that the end was not yet, especially as earlier in the night he was to meet the War Veterans. For thirteen years he had been putting on what might be called a barrage from the pulpit, where perhaps nobody could get back at him. Now conditions were reversed, and he was beginning to realize that he was at the mercy of the majority. He hardly knew how to express the feelings that rose in him at these times.

Mr. Taylor said that he had come to Charlottetown thirteen years ago under rather remarkable conditions. He had just been getting over an attack of typhoid fever, and the doctors had told him to take a rest. He had naturally thought of a visit home to Scotland. But just about that time had felt called upon to help out another clergyman, Rev. Mr. Sutherland of Kensington, who had been overtaken by illness while preaching on the mainland. It was under such circumstances that he had come to the Island and spent the summer preaching in Mr. Sutherland's charge at Kensington and Long River. And then he had been called to Charlottetown to fill the vacancy caused by the illness and later death of the Rev. Mr. Strathey. Although he had insisted at the time that he was not in form, that he was an invalid still in a state of convalescence, he had in a sort been compelled to undertake the charge. It was with a good deal of hesitation, not to call it reluctance, that he had been consecrated into the ministry in Charlottetown. The church then under construction had been completed and was now almost paid for.

All the time that he had been on the Island he had been busy with one thing or another, and it was only lately that he had awakened to the fact that he had spent more time on Prince Edward Island than in any other part of Canada. He was beginning to realize that it meant home to him. His friendships and associations here were stronger than in any other part of the Dominion. And when he said that he remembered that he had friends in every corner of Canada. Even taking into consideration all this, there was no place that appealed to him like the Island. When he had decided to accept this call he hadn't known what parting was going to mean, and even now he was just beginning to realize what had happened in the last week. It was with a great deal of reluctance that he was going, and if it had been made impossible for him to get back to the Island to spend the summer months ,he thought that he would have changed his mind. He was not going aimlessly and moved only by a feeling for change but because he felt that he was entering a field of larger endeavor. He had been asked to go and do what he could and his task was not to be an easy one. Here the hardest part of the work was over.

In conclusion Mr. Taylor said that Prince Edward Island was more or less isolated, and that it was perhaps well that it didn't move so fast as the world moved. It got in at the tail end of things, and he, for one, thanked God for it. Much of the dissatisfaction existing here was the consequence of talk, and Mr. Taylor said that if he was Mayor of this city he would feel like making it an offence for anyone to speak ill of the state. What was needed was a crusade of good speech, the cutting out of grousing. This was the best place in North America and if people would only keep saying that and make it generally understood, the population would tend to become contented. Our actions were hypnotizing ourselves into the idea that we were worse off here than anywhere else, and Mr. Taylor said that he often wondered what the people were thinking of when they left here to seek better parts that didn't exist. He was not saying this because he himself was going away and wished to say something complimentary. The people, he repeated, were being hypnotised into pessimism, and it was time to begin to crusade for boosting the Island. "Just tell the truth, he concluded, and you will put it across."

A number of citizens also spoke in terms of regret at the departure from the city of Mr. Taylor.

Rev. Father Maurice McDonald said that he had felt that he could not neglect this opportunity of coming and saying good-bye to Mr. Taylor. He had always been pleased to meet and converse with him. Mr. Taylor had taken an active and pronounced part in every movement for the betterment of the town and his influence for good had been felt in both city and country, and at the public manifestations during the Great War, at which he had given advice and consolation. He would bid farewell to Mr. Taylor with the wish that his good angel would accompany him and dwell with him.

Mr. K. J. Martin, City Magistrate, in adding his expressions of regret at the leave taking of Mr. Taylor, said that he had been one of the bridge-heads of all work for good, carred on in and out of the city.

Hon. J. H. Bell, ex-premier, said that he could only speak of Mr. Taylor as he had observed and found him. He had one of the characteristics of the Scottish in in being a man of courage both as a man of peace and in time of war, and armed at all times with nothing but his sense of duty, and with his faith. In conclusion he had much pleasure in advancing his approval of the sentimemnt expressed already at Mr. Taylor's impending departure.

Mr. C. G. Duffy said that Mr. Taylor would be more missed than most citizens who could leave us. As he went forward in his great opportunity to build up Christianity, he could do so with the assurance that when the people of Charlottetown said that they were sorry at his going they meant every word of it. They never applauded anything they did not appreciate.

Ex-Mayor R. H. Jenkins, M. P., said that he was not pleased to be here, because it was certainly not pleasant to lose one of the best citizens we had. He heartily endorsed the sentiments of the other speakers, and hoped that health and happiness would remain with Mr. Taylor in his new abode, and that he would be back here in the summer time. The representatives here gathered together tonight would show Mr. Taylor how he stood with the community. Mr. Edgar Shaw said that he had always watched Mr. Taylor's career with interest, and the loss of all citizens of his type was often greater than we realized. They were not only valuable for what they said and did but also for the example they showed of true citizenship. He hoped that Mr. Taylor would be the same shining light in the days to come that he had been in the city of Charlottetown.

Mr. W. L. Cotton, Mr. F. J. Nash, and Mr. C. H. Black also added their testimony of the good works of Mr .Taylor, and expressed their regret that he was leaving the city. Mr. Nash said that it was rather a pity that so much emphasis should be laid upon the departure of such a good citizen as Mr. Taylor, and so little on trying to keep them on Prince Edward Island. His loss would be seriously felt. He was not only a spiritual man, but a manly man. He would without doubt make himself felt as a force for good in his new sphere.

In replying to these, Mr. Taylor said that he would like to have it that his last word in Charlottetown should be of the goodfellowship existing among its citizens as a Christian people. He would have liked to have said this before. Rev. Maurice McDonald, but he had not known that Father Maurice was not going to be able to remain. Since coming to the Island he had formed many friendships, and some very long-lasting ones with the clergymen of the other churches. His friendship with the clergymen of the Roman Catholic church had been strengthened by his companionship overseas and later at home with the late Rev. Pius McDonald, his esteemed associate padre.

THE MARKETS

(Canadian Press.)

MONTREAL, Que., Dec. 7—There was a good demand from foreign buyers for Manitoba grades of wheat in the Montreal grain market today, but as prices were unsatisfactory no new business was done. There was also some demand for cash grain and a moderate amount of business resulted in that market. The tone of the market for oats was very firm under a better demand for car lots.

The market for spring wheat grades on flour was again strong and millers generally marked up prices another 20 cents per barrel, which makes a net advance since the first of the month of 60 cents per barrel. There was no improvement, however, in the volume of business for export account, owing to the fact that foreign buyers are not responding readily to the higher prices asked by millers. The domestic market was also quiet.

There were no new developments in the market for winter wheat flour, but the understone was strong on account of the higher prices ruling for the raw material, the small offerings from Ontario millers and the light supplies available on the spot.

The market for millfeed was unchanged, prices for all lines being firmly maintained with a good steady demand for local and country accounts. The market for baled hay was also without any new feature. No change was reported in the market for strictly fresh eggs but the feeling was firm. The feature of the butter market was the increased demand that developed from both local outside buyers for supplies. There was also an improved enquiry from foreign buyers for cheese.

The trade in potatoes showed no marked improvement, but the undertone was firm.

Hemorrhoids

Or piles are quickly relieved by Dr. Chase's Ointment.

It is a serious matter to have piles and one person in four has them at one time or another. The annoyance and distress is great. It is difficult to obtain lasting relief. So much so that your physician may tell you that a surgical operation is necessary. That is unless he is familiar with Dr. Chase's Ointment for many doctors recommend this treatment to their patients.

For nearly half a century Dr. Chase's Ointment has been the never failing relief for itching, bleeding and protruding piles. It is now very generally known by the medical profession, and the public generally, as the standard treatment for this torturing ailment.

Ask your friends about Dr. Chase's Ointment for "users are boosters" in this case. Relief comes quickly and you can obtain the ointment at any drug store.

Re-arrangement Of New Brunswick Hockey Leagues

By "TEC."

In the report of the special meeting of the Maritime Amateur Hockey Association, held in Truro, December 4th., it was stated that New Brunswick should be divided into a southern league consisting of Moncton, Sussex and Saint John; a central league consisting of Oxford and Amherst, and another league consisting of Campbellton, Bathurst, Chatham and Fredericton.

Last year there were the northern, central and western leagues and it is necessary that the teams belonging to each of these ask for withdrawal permission before a new grouping can be made. This permission was not up till the date of meeting demanded in which case last season's leagues are still existing, and with such permission as yet not asked for or granted the new grouping as published is not possible.

The World's Best by the Acid Test

It is recognized everywhere that the Show Ring is the reliable indication of the high quality in animals. The recent Silver Fox Show, in connection with the Royal Winter Fair at Toronto, brought together a remarkable array of valuable animals that were undoubtedly outstanding in the realms of Foxdom. It is gratifying to users of IMPERIAL FOX BISCUITS to know that all the principal prize winners were fed IMPERIAL FOX BISCUITS as a large and most important part of the daily diet.

For years, foxes fed on IMPERIALS have been dominating the Show Ring. This is not to be wondered at as IMPERIAL FOX BISCUITS are, without doubt, the finest balanced ration for foxes. Fed with milk and with a little meat as an extra diet once a day, they form a complete nourishment for the growing or adult fox.

UNITED STATES WINNERS—We learn, through the columns of The Black Fox Magazine that "MURRAY LUCY DALTON," the Grand Champion of the American National Show of 1925, was fed daily on IMPERIAL FOX BISCUITS.
