Musical Romance Of A Century At Prince Edward

One of the most genuinely interesting motion pictures of the season is "Beloved," the Universal "musical romance of a century" which opened an engagement at the Prince Edward Theatre yesterday.

John Boles and Gloria Stuart play featured roles in this highly unusual production, and Boles sings several songs as only he can sing them—simple, moving songs of the heart. Fine support is given by Dorothy Peterson, Edmund Brees, Anderson Lawler, Lucille Gleason, Morgan Farley, Richard Carle, Mae Busch, Ruth Hall and many others.

From a production standpoint, "Beloved" is a remarkable demonstration of the flexibility of the motion picture. The story covers a period of nearly 100 years, and the feat is accomplished in such a completely satisfying manner as to constitute a convincing tribute to the screen art.

Director Victor Schertzinger, who also wrote the music for "Beloved," may well be proud of his accomplishment in bringing this epic film drama into the limits of an evening's entertainment, and in knitting the various incidents so closely together in a smoothly flowing musical cavalcade.

Do not fail to see "Beloved." It is such a picture as seldom reaches the screen, and it is tuneful entertainment of the most enjoyable sort.

The rink committee are to be heartily commended for their efforts on behalf of the young people of the community.

Charlie Ruggles In Laff Riot At Capitol

Roars of laughter greet Charlie Ruggles heading a splendid cast in "Goodbye Love," which stars him in the role of a love-starved butler with Don Juan impulses.

The film is a personal triumph for Charlie Ruggles. His rare talents as a comedian have never been seen to better advantage than in the thoroughly ludicrous character of Groggs. The story opens as Groggs finds himself confronted by the inescapable problem of alimony. He borrows enough money for a final settlement on his wife from his employer, but only pays his divorced wife an installment and goes on a vacation to Atlantic City.

He meets Phyllis, a blonde gold digger who takes him for all his money and then leaves him flat. Groggs arrives back at his master's apartment just in time to hear the clergyman pronounce Phyllis and his employer man and wife. Groggs' ensuing efforts to help his master get rid of the gold digger Phyllis, provides one of the most uproarious climaxes seen in recent months.

Verree Teasdale as Phyllis makes an attractive and alluring big time gold digger. Sidney Blackmer is sincere in a fine performance of Groggs' employer. Mayo Methot deserves bows for a truly fine portrayal, and Phyllis Barry is excellent as the misunderstood secretary who wins out.

Peters Road And Vicinity

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph H. Morrison of Edmonton, Alta., are now visiting their native province and guests at the home of Mrs. Morrison's mother, Mrs. William Macdonald, Peters Rd. Mrs. Peter Morrison and Miss Ethel Morrison, Mr. and Mrs. Allan Morrison and family, Peters Road. On their way eastward Mr. and Mrs. Morrison visited at the home of Mr. Morrison's sister, Mrs. McKay of Tatamagouche, N. S. It is now in order for us to state that Mr. Morrison holds the responsible position of Express Agent of the C. N. R. at Edmonton. Twenty-nine years ago the subject of our brief sketch heard the call of the West and fired by the enthusiasm of youth landed in the great domain of Canada's Western Prairie land. After various experiences in different avocations, he became attached to express work on the C. N. R. at Prince Albert and Edmonton, finally attaining the enviable position he now holds as stated above. From time to time we have noted the merited promotion of many of our "Island men" and in this particular case we have no hesitation in classing Mr. Morrison also as "one of our successful Islanders abroad." Mr. Morrison reports a gradual improvement in conditions in the West, especially in those sections where mixed farming obtains, and attributes the same cause to the staying powers of the Maritimes and especially of P. E. I. even during the depression. Mr. and Mrs. Morrison leave again shortly for the West. The Guardian and their many friends wish them both a refreshing vacation in the big little province by the sea—P. E. I.

Mr. Garfield Johnston and son, Peters Road have been busily engaged during the last winter and spring in boat-building both for himself and son and others. Many who have had the pleasure of examining Messrs Johnston's workmanship are loud in their praise of their thoroughness and skill.

We regret the sudden serious illness of Mrs. Alexander Campbell, Alliston. This lady though well up in years was exceedingly active up till a short time ago.

It is pleasing to learn the long-felt want of an Illustration Station in Southern Kings seems likely to materialize in the near future. Local signed petitions have been forwarded to the Agricultural Dept., for consideration. The station will be located on the large farm of Mr. T. Albert Hicken, Alliston.—P.

Golden Wedding Anniversary

A most pleasing event was observed at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Bruce, Valleyfield, on March 13, 1934, when their children, grand children, and other friends gathered home to celebrate with them their Golden Wedding Anniversary.

Three daughters and their husbands and one son and his wife, also twelve grand-children were present on this occasion. One son, one grand-daughter and three great grand children were unavoidably absent.

To the bride and groom of fifty years, an address was read by one of their grand children, while a gift of gold from children a. l grand children was presented by two of the grand children, dressed as bride and groom. During the evening the young people of the vicinity and surrounding districts appeared on the scene, and expressed their pleasure at this happy event by a joyful chorus.

Following is the address:—

To Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Bruce,

Dear Parents and Grandparents, we take great pleasure in gathering here this evening to offer congratulations to you on attaining a half century of blissful wedded life.

It is with the kindest of thoughts and gratitude that we recall the years spent in the home. The tenderness of a mother—the advice of a father—is something we do not fully appreciate in childhood, but, having reached maturity and experience with life, we realize the sacrifice, the thought, and the watchful care that has been exercised to make the home a place of security and love.

We trust that the years may still bring many joys, and that you both may be spared to enjoy life together with families and friends in the community.

Please accept this gift as a token of our love.

Your children and grand children.

IN MEMORIAM

MISS CATHERINE FENNESSEY

Since the dawn of 1934 many nonagenarians have been laid to rest and among the number was Miss Catherine Fennessey who died March 14th.

About seven years ago Miss Fennessey and her sister, Miss Alice, finding that advancing years made housekeeping too much of a burden, sold their residence on Great George St., and went to live at the Sacred Heart Home. (Miss Alice is remembered as one of Queen Square's devoted teachers; she died in 1931.)

Miss Fennessey suffered a paralytic stroke a year ago and was confined to her bed ever afterwards. Death came with startling suddenness in the end but the call did not find her unprepared because she always lived a devout Catholic life and she appreciated to the full the opportunities afforded at the Home for frequent reception of the Sacraments.

The deceased came to Prince Edward Island from Ireland, that other "Isle of Saints and Scholars," when a child. She liked to tell that she had shaken hands with Daniel O'Connell before leaving the Emerald Isle. She retained to the last an ardent love for the land of her birth, for the noblest ideals of the Irish race and for the ancient faith of St. Patrick.

Her religion drew her ever closer to the Heart of Jesus, from which she derived grace to practice the virtues He loved. She endeared herself to all who knew her by her charity and equanimity and she had many friends at the Sacred Heart Home who sincerely mourn her passing. During her days of helpless invalidism she was always patient and most grateful for anything done for her. Her hearty "God bless you" seemed an abundant reward for any service rendered her.

She was the last member of her family but her declining years were made happy by the loving attentions of her niece, Miss Mary Flanagan.

Miss Fennessey's funeral took place from the Sacred Heart Home on March 16th. Requiem Mass was offered at St. Dunstan's Basilica by Reverend Leonard McDonald. Reverend Dr. Bernard Gillis assisted the choir. Reverend Father Dalton officiated at the grave. The pall bearers were: Messrs. Edwin Murphy, J. H. G. Murphy, Carl Kelly, James Carragher, Fred Renoff and James Dalton.

Eternal rest give unto her, O Lord!

JOHN GORDON

Silently, suddenly, the Angel of Death opened his sable wings, and proved the truth of the aged long saying, "in the midst of life we are in death". There passed away on Saturday, March 10th, at Cardigan North, John Gordon. Born in Heatherdale in 1852, he took as his life's partner, Flora MacPherson of Valleyfield, being married in 1891. There are left to mourn his loss, his widow, two sons, Alexander and John Malcolm, who make their abode in Western Canada, three daughters, Mrs. Elmer L. Hodgen, Halbrite, Sask., Mrs. A. Gordon McCarvell, Boston, Mass., and Mrs. Stephen L. Hilton, Littleton, New Hampshire, a daughter, Mrs. Archie C. MacPherson, having pre-deceased him six months ago.

The deceased had been in perfect health and strength, and his passing away came as a shock to his many friends. The funeral which was largely attended was conducted by Rev. C. Younger-Lewis, B. A., Montague. The hymns sung were, "Take Comfort Christians", "Children of the Heavenly King", and "Abide With Me". The minister taking as his text, "Thou shalt come to thy grave in full age, like a stock of corn cometh in his season", dwelt upon the growth of life as shown by the deceased who through his deep faith and undying allegiance to the principles of his Master Christ, had lived a full life, reprived by time and service, he was ready for the sickle, and because of his belief we were able to say, that the hand that held the sickle was the hand of God, the all-loving Father. Though missed, John Gordon leaves behind him memories that will never die. A good parent, a kind father and helpful neighbor, honest and upright, a man of God, and though the passing of time may cause even his friends to forget his face and form, the life he lived has entered into the warp and woof of the life of the community and Cardigan North and the surrounding country is the poorer for his passing away, but he is not lost, he has gone home. The floral tributes were many and beautiful. The pall bearers were, Robert MacLaren, Sam MacPherson, Richard Greene, John Campbell, John Malcolm MacKenzie, and Henry Hayter. Interment took place at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Cardigan, of which he was a faithful attendant and supporter.

MR. T. H. SMITH

In the passing of the late T. H. Smith at his home, Tryon, P. E. I., on March 19th, 1934, the community suffered an irreparable loss. For not only was the departed one of the best known and most highly respected citizens but also one who was universally beloved and looked to as an outstanding example of wheat we mean when we speak of a Christian gentleman. In his home he was a faithful husband, a kind father, a patriarch ministering at the altar, and a prince of hospitality and geniality to all who crossed his threshold. In religion he was broad-minded and tolerant always in labours abundant in his church. From youth he had assumed positions of responsibility, having sat in council at District and Conference sessions; also at General Conference of the former Methodist Church. In the United Church he maintained his loyalty and on various occasions attended Maritime Conference. At the time of his death he was active as a member of the Quarterly Official Board, and the Trust Boards of both Church and Parsonage; also a member of the Session. In all these capacities he served with exceptional ability and fidelity.

Mr. Smith who was born at Crapaud, P. E. I., seventy-five years ago had travelled quite extensively, having thrice visited California spending some ten years there. this with his love for reading and his wide experience in various phases of life together with his tactfulness made him a man whose wisdom was often sought by the community on many matters, and his judgment was many times the deciding factor where differences of opinion were in evidence. In his contacts with life he was a rare spirit and his passing leaves a naked gap against the sky as where a lordly cedar had gone down. But his influence remains to be an inspiration and a challenge to many who will be better men and women because he passed this way.

Those left are two daughters Mildred and Winnie, and one son, Austin, all at home; also one brother, Isaac in California.

The funeral, which was largely attended was held from his late residence on Wednesday at 2 p. m. The service was conducted by the pastor Rev. J. L. Lund assisted by the Rev. G. N. Somers, Margate, and Rev. F. O. Crossman of Tryon Baptist Church. Music was furnished by the local choir, the hymns sung were "Rock of Ages", "Softly and Tenderly Jesus Is Calling", and "O Love That Will Not Let Me Go". A male quartette sang "Tread Softly". Those who bore the remains to their resting place were six young men, ushers in the church Messrs. Stirling Lord, Albert Callbeck, Burpee Carr, Kenneth McDonald and Archie Thompson. Interment was made in the People's Cemetery, Tryon, beside his wife Anna Wright who predeceased him some twelve years ago.

The sympathy of the community goes out to the bereaved family.

MISS VIOLA HAYES

It is with sorrow that we are called upon to announce the death of Miss Viola Hayes, daughter of Mr. George Hayes, Dromore, in the 20th year of her age.

Although she was ailing for some time there were hopes on account of her youth she would recover and her death, therefore, came as a great shock to the community.

She was a quiet good natured, unassuming girl much beloved by everyone with whom she came in contact, she bore her last illness with Christian patience and resignation to the Divine Will.

All that medical aid could do was done for her, but every care was unavailing and her pure spirit passed to her Maker on the evening of March 19th. She was visited all through her long illness by Rev. Father Croken who brought her the consolations of religion. She leaves to mourn her father, mother, one sister Mrs. Charles McLellan and one brother Theodore.

Her funeral was held to Fort Augustus Church on the morning of the 21st and was largely attended. A Requiem High Mass was celebrated by Rev. Father Croken who also performed the services at the grave. The pall bearers were, Messrs. Thomas O'Brien, Chester Hughes, Raymond Hughes, Fabian Hughes, Edwin Hughes, and Albert McGuirk.—R. I. P.

MR. JOHN ENMAN

In the death of John Enman on March 22nd the community of Grand View lost one of its oldest and most highly respected citizens. The late Mr. Enman was born in Grand View eighty-five years ago, on the farm now occupied by his brother Wellington Enman. In that community he spent his long life, enjoying the regard of all who knew him.

He leaves to mourn his loss a family of six children, Catherine and Louis at home, Stephen in California, Artemas in Western Canada; Florence, Mrs. F. E. Sloan, Boston and Rhoda, Mrs. Robert Spires, Boston. Three of his family predeceased him. A son, Wellington D., was killed in France. Mrs. Enman died on April 1st, 1924.

The funeral service was conducted on Saturday afternoon from his late residence by Rev. D. M. Sinclair. Mr. Sinclair spoke briefly from the text "Thou shalt keep him in perfect peace whose mind is stayed on Thee". Interment was in the former Methodist cemetery, Grand View. The pall bearers were Messrs Allan Finlayson, Peter MacQueen, John MacKinnon, Hugh Martin, A. N. MacPherson and Benson Carver.

Legend Grows Of Frenchman Gone African

(By Louis Roy)
(Canadian Press Correspondent)

DJIBOUTI, French Somaliland, March 25—Last of the Corsairs, Henry de Monfreid lives in that part of Africa where magic is orthodox and legends grow full-blown overnight. He scorned civilization that he might live as a native among natives in Africa, his "last sanctuary of primitive nature."

Almost a legendary figure along the coasts of the Red Sea and down to the equator, wherever native tribes and Arab traders meet, de Monfreid is now becoming a symbol of escape to the youth of France. Those who do not rush to the standard of the firebrand Leon Daudet, or Leon Blum, the irreconcilable, are turning to the de Monfreid tradition, seeing his picturesque life as more alluring, more dramatic, more primitive.

When he came to Djibouti the governor of French Somaliland told him: "You are not an Arab, you are French-born; are you not ashamed to be called native by coolies of the lowest class?"

"I am not ashamed. On the contrary what worries me is to know the opinion these natives hold of Europeans. I shall do my best not to be included in their number," answered the Frenchman with the eagle profile.

"The opinion of these savages is more to you than ours?" De Monfreid bowed. It was his farewell to civilization.

His prestige among the natives has become great. He frequented Somali cafes, spoke only Arabic or African tongues, went in the tropical sun without a hat, dressed like an Arab, lived like a native. Where the last of the waters of the Red Sea are sucked up in the onrush of waters from the southern hemisphere, he dived for pearls off the shores of Dahlac, the island of pearls.

Sorcerers, jealous of de Monfreid's influence over the natives, whispered the foreign corsair drank toasts to the angels of darkness. But when he strung electric lights across the palace of the King of Abyssinia last year, and built a power plant at Djibouti, the natives said, "white magician do magic," and let it go at that.

From pearl diver he became slave trader, dealer in contraband arms, and finally confidante and counsellor of the King of Abyssinia. The destiny of this strange country became his destiny. "Africa is the last sanctuary of primitive nature. Let it remain pagan. Let it escape the contagion of civilization. I would give my soul to keep it so," he said.

He has already in a sense pledged his soul, the manner of it he tells in his confession, "The Secrets of the Red Sea."

"While the stars pass slowly above my head I think on all the unknown towards which I am sailing. . .The monsoon rises and drives as swiftly towards Bab-el-Mandeb, the Port of Lamentations."

Becomes a Mohammedan

There follows a titanic struggle between the wit and will of man and the fury of nature. A wind from the north closes in with the furious monsoon whipping the sea into a whirlpool of contending currents. These seize like pitiless serpents on the little boat.

"The Mussulmen are resigned, knowing that Allah is all-powerful. What will come to pass is written. Nevertheless to gain an adept to his faith Mahomet can work miracles. I announce therefore to my men at the moment the ship is about to sink, that I will become a Mussulman if we are saved.

"At once a mysterious force snatches us from the whirlpool. It is the miracle. At this strange juncture I became a Mohammedan and take the name of Abd el Hai."

So he pursues his way, a mystery to the natives, an enigma to the European, living a life varied and dramatic and developing more and more the power to communicate the fascination of those sudden and terrible struggles of man with nature. In the vertigo of tropical oceans, shaken by the wind of typhoons, beaten upon by the tropical rains which break like glass against the rocks, his love for Africa grows.

"The isolation of nature fascinates and draws me irresistibly," he confesses. "I feel born again within me those profound forces which the oppression of life in the herd holds captive."

ESTIMATES BEFORE HOUSE

House of Commons Will Adjourn Wednesday For Easter Recess.

(C. P. by Guardian's Special Wire)

OTTAWA, March 26—Parliament will sit only three days this week, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, then adjourn for the coming Easter recess. When the House rises Wednesday evening it will not assemble again until the afternoon of Monday April 9.

While the holiday will give the majority of the members of both Houses a chance to spend a short time at their homes, the Ministers of the Crown will no the so fortunate. Cabinet councils will be in full swing during most of the recess.

Council In Session

Yesterday council was in session throughout the morning and afternoon but no official information was disclosed. Some indication of the nature of the ministers deliberations is expected to be given at tomorrow's session of the House.

It is anticipated that Hon. E. N. Rhodes, Minister of Finance, will announce the Government's decision with respect to the 10 percent deduction from the salaries of civil servants. The general belief is that for the year commencing April the lower paid civil servants will have their salaries restored to the level existing at the time the cut was put into effect two years ago.

Dividing Line?

Just where the dividing line will be is not known, but it is believed those getting salaries in excess of $1,500, or possibly $2,000, will continue to suffer the 10 percent deduction for another year.

The House will be asked tomorrow to vote supplementary estimates amounting to something over $52,000,000, practically all of which is for the deficits of the Canadian National Railways.

The Stevens mass buying committee continued to be a centre of interest through the week and will continue on Tuesday. The house banking and commerce committee, dealing with the central bank and bank charter revision legislation, attracted record galleries last week when it had before it for questioning such notables as Prime Minister R. B. Bennett, E. W. Beatty, K. C., President of the Canadian Pacific Railway and J. I. McFarland, general manager of the Canadian Co-operative Wheat Producers, Limited, central selling agency of the wheat pools.

Anita Webb conducted the service which opened with a service of song. Eric Bell read the Scripture lesson which was followed by a trio "The Wayside Cross," beautifully rendered by George Clark, Ernest Dunning and Jim Warren. Rev. W. A. Patterson then led in prayer and a congregational hymn "Dear Lord and Father of Mankind" was sung. The 86th Psalm was read responsively, various announcements made, and, following the offering Irene Wyand sang "One Sweetly Solemn Thought," in her especially lovely and expressive manner. The capable President, Sadie Johnston, gave an address choosing as her topic "Peace." This was particularly enjoyed by everyone present. The beautiful quartette "Just Outside the Door," was then sung by Herb Wyand, Jim Warren, George Clark, and Lowell Wyand. This was suitably followed by a congregational hymn "O Master Let Me Walk With Thee." Mr. Paterson then spoke briefly but in words that contained particular encouragement for the young people. Irene Wyand then led in prayer. A duet "Have Thine Own Way Lord" was especially effectively sung by George Clark and Jim Warren and accompanied by Ernest Dunning. "Abide With Me" was the closing hymn and Mr. Paterson pronounced the benediction. Marion Webb was the organist for the evening.

Owing to the abundance of the European crop, world production of rye last year was largest since the war- 1,014, 000, 000 bushels.

Poor Boy Became Swedish Magnate

(By The Canadian Press)

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, March 26—A man who came from the country in 1876 as a boy of 16 to make his fortune has just died the head of a great Swedish store.

At his death head of the concern, popularly know as PUB from his initials, Paul U. Bergstrom had started business on his own account after he had saved a little money opening a shop with no other employee than an errand boy. He specialized in ready-made hardwearing clothing and was the pioneer of this branch of men's tailoring in Sweden.

Eleven years later he removed to the old square known as Hotorget is building finally spread over a block. The cost of one corner of the block worked out at more per square yard than had ever been paid for ground in Sweden up to that time.

Bergstrom always declared he owed his success to unswerving devotion to the old proverb "honesty is the best policy." He attributed his success also to the fortunate accident of his name which made the short easily remembered title of PUB for his store. The U represented the unusual name of Urbanus and his disposition was said to be as urbane as his name.

Margaret Crang Member Council Barrister at 23

EDMONTON, March 25—Possibly the youngest woman to be elected alderman in all Canada, Miss Margaret Tryphena Francis Crang, 23 years of age, has been admitted to the bar.

Before Mr. Justice Frank Ford in Supreme Court, Miss Crang, slender and attractive, in her flowing gown, took the oath of allegiance to His Majesty the King, and of truthfulness in her profession.

"Miss Crang, this occasion becomes more pleasant as time goes on," remarked his lordship, who said it was a matter of great satisfaction to admit her.

She first established herself in the public eye here when she ran for alderman in the November, 1933 civic election; and despite head shakings by veteran campaigners who insisted no woman had a chance of success, romped home with 10,853 votes, second from head of the poll.

It was a daring thing to do, but her friends say she is like that. Quiet and unassuming, but a forceful personality for all that, this girl won for herself the distinction of being the youngest woman ever to be elected an alderman in Edmonton, and, as far as can be learned, the youngest for that civic office in Canada.

Like her father, Dr. Frank W. Crang, veteran school trustee here and in whose footsteps she is closely following, Miss Crang is a staunch member of the Labor Party.

Born in Edmonton, she matriculated from Strathcona High School and went on to a lengthy and brilliant academic career. At University of Alberta she graduated in arts in 1930 and two years later received her LL. B. The following year she received her high school teacher's diploma.

The young lawyer has had considerable practical experience in her profession, too. First in the summer of 1930 she served in the legal offices of Parlee, Freeman, Smith and Massie. Of more recent years she has been in the offices of Newell, Lindsay, Emery and Ford.

The papaya is one of the most widely diffused fruit trees in tropical regions. One species is a native of Mexico, although, curiously enough, it is no longer found in a wild state in that country.

Burning Rash on Hands. Itching Severe. Healed by Cuticura.

"A burning rash started on my right hand and spread so that my left hand was affected. The skin was red and the itching and burning were so severe I could tear my hands. It broke the flesh and came out in small blisters. My hand was so painful and sore to look at that I kept it out of sight.

"I sent for a free sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I had immediate results so I bought one cake of Soap and a box of Ointment and my hands were healed before I had used them all." (Signed) Mrs. John Bell, 52 Clarence St., St. John, N. B., Nov. 28, 1932.
