Worried By Pimples And Eczema

Complexion Unblemished after 6 Weeks of Kruschen

"For the past two years," writes a woman, "my face was covered with hard pimples and red blotches, and I also had eczema on my neck and fore-arms. I tried lotions, creams and ointments, without the slightest effect. I was so worried. Fortunately I decided to give Kruschen a trial, and without any exaggeration, within six weeks my face was without a blemish, and I have not had a sign of eczema since. I take Kruschen regularly every morning, and would not be without it."—Mrs. J. A.

Pimples and eczema are frequently due to impurities in the blood—irritant poisons which sluggish body organs are failing to expel from the system. Kruschen Salts help to keep the body organs functioning normally and healthily, thus preventing the accumulation of impurities in the blood.

Expect 325,000 Nova Scotians To Go To Polls

HALIFAX, June 14 (CP)—Approximately 325,000 people will cast their ballots when Nova Scotians go to the polls to record their choice of a provincial government, June 29—if the voters show the same interest as in 1933.

A total of 313,000 persons voted at the election of 1933, when the population of the province was about 522,000; almost 62 per cent of the entire population including those of non-voting age. The Dominion Bureau of Statistics estimate placed the population at 537,000 at the end of 1936.

To be eligible to vote, a person must be 21 years of age, a British subject and must have resided within the province at least one year preceding the date of the writ of election. Wards of the government or of cities or towns within the province have no vote, nor have Judges of the Supreme or County Courts or returning officer in the election.

The term "wards of the government" refers to those who are permanently dependent upon the government or upon the cities or towns in which they live for support; it does not include those who accept relief from the government or of civic institutions are not enfranchised, but those on temporary relief have a vote, as have receivers of old age pensions.

Women will vote, exercising the franchise they have held for the last 18 years.

HALIFAX, June 14 (CP)—Candidates in the forthcoming Nova Scotia elections represent a wide variety of walks in life, but the law profession is dominant. At least 100 are expected to be candidates are lawyers.

Both Liberal and Conservative party leaders, Premier Angus L. Macdonald and opposition leader Gordon S. Harrington respectively, practised law before becoming active in politics and several of the most prominent supporters are members of that profession.

Minister of Highways A. S. MacMillan is a contractor; Attorney General MacQuarrie, a lawyer; Mines Minister Dwyer, a former Works Superintendent with the Nova Scotia Steel and Coal Company; Minister of Agriculture John A. McDonald, a farmer; Health Minister F. R. Davis, a medical doctor and Minister without Portfolio Comeau, a fish dealer.

Four candidates are medical men, and four others are merchants when the House is not in session. Farming and business each claim three.

F. W. "Casey" Baldwin, first British citizen to fly an airplane, is the only engineer in the running so far, said Harold Connolly, in Halifax North the sole newspaperman. The Civil Service is represented by John M. Campbell, a retired lighthouse keeper in Inverness, and railwaymen by N. C. Munro of New Glasgow, a former station agent; John Allie MacGregor of Stellarton is an insurance salesman, while George B. Murray, son of a former Nova Scotia premier, who is running in Cape Breton North is a retired bank man.

Advance polls are held a week before election day for fishermen, travellers, railway employees and other classes who find it impossible to be in their place of residence June 29.

In cities and towns of more than 5,000 population, preliminary lists of voters are obtained by "enumerators," a new departure in Nova Scotia elections. The enumerators go from house to house obtaining the names of all those eligible to cast a ballot.

The enumerators work in pairs, one each being chosen by the two main parties, Liberal and Conservative. Their lists are subject to challenge and revision after being posted in public places.

Statesmanship Of Life Insurance

From the standpoint of the individual, life insurance is the finest, wisest and safest investment that a man can make. It gives him security, a greater self-respect, a higher reserve of character. It confers upon him what the world most needs today—a sense of individual human responsibility. In those black, bitter years when fortunes and savings were swept away, life insurance was the one mooring—the one sheet anchor that held—for hundreds of thousands of families.

I am in favor of it because it gives a man an estate; because it purchases security, increases confidence, removes fear, and establishes credit. More than that, and from a national standpoint, it is a check and balance against periods of inflated prosperity and of extreme depression.

But I am in favor of life insurance for one other reason—to my mind the greatest reason of all. I am in favor of it because it is one of the greatest factors in our national life today in the creation of a sense of individual responsibility. That, to my mind—the sense of responsibility in the individual himself—is one of the great needs of our times.

The old idea of thrift, the old notion of our fathers that a man must make his own way, that he was responsible for himself and for his family, that he must depend upon his own energy, his own foresight and his own courage—these things have begun to give way to a leaning towards paternalism, toward a tendency to have the state or the government do for us what we should be prepared to do for ourselves.

That is why we are turning to such things as old age pensions, state control of this and that; is why we have talk of state old age insurance, talk of scores of other things, the responsibility for which, in an individualistic society, should fall upon the individual, and upon no one else.

Life insurance does make for the personal responsibility of the individual. It makes for self-dependence, independence, self-respect and self-reliance. It gives to the individual a stake in the community, a stake in his own country; and because it does this, it constitutes itself into one of the greatest of all bulwarks against communism, socialism and all other isms.

I want to stress what life insurance means for the state. Last year in 1936, life insurance companies paid out to Canadians in death claims, maturities, annuities, dividends and other benefits the colossal sum of $150,000,000. Add that sum to the payments made through the years of depression, and we have the tremendous fact of $1,135,000,000 paid out in Canada by life insurance companies since 1929; this taking no account of national, provincial, municipal—have paid out in relief equals, or begins to equal, the tremendous sums paid out by our life insurance companies. What it meant, and at this time, to the national wellbeing, to the encouragement and steadying of the national heart, can hardly be overestimated. In a word, life insurance, as an institution, has stood during these years as one of the mightiest factors for good in our national life; a pillar of the state; a buttress of our capitalist civilization; a challenge in itself to all enemies of individualism.
