Henri Verdoux strolls past a poster announcing a coming feature on Paris movie screens, "Monsieur Verdoux." The picture is based on the life of the French murderer, Landru, played by Charlie Chaplin. The fictional Verdoux is a bank clerk specializing in exchange work and has a 5-year-old son. The real Verdoux is a bank clerk specializing in exchange work and has a 5-year-old son. This coincidence in name, occupation and family has caused the real Henri Verdoux great embarrassment, he says, so he tried to get the film banned. Failing in this, he is now suing for damages.
