Dotted Line Honeymoon

By JOSEPH McCORD

INSTALMENT 23

Vince did not return to the hotel until nearly dinnertime. He was in a talkative mood, but Jacqueline could not escape from a growling conviction that he was attempting to keep their conversation in his own hands to a great extent. Several times she referred to his trip down to the city and, very promptly, he changed the topic.

Vince was more than willing to speak of his invention. But with an air of delighted secrecy.

"I'm not telling anybody what it is . . . except Larry, of course," he told his daughter. "It's the greatest wonder in the world that nobody ever thought of it before. It's something every home in the country should have. Those things will sell like wildfire!"

It was so pleasant to witness his glowing enthusiasm that Jacqueline tried to forget similar fervid accounts of the Anthony contribution to progress.

"I hope you won't find somebody has thought of it first," was all she said.

"Don't think there's any danger. Larry tells me he never has seen anything of the sort . . . and he should know. He's gotten in touch with a patent attorney in Washington he knows. He says this man is very reliable and can be trusted. So, it shouldn't be long until we hear something. I know an inventor can't count his chickens until they hatch. But you and I are good as rich this minute."

His words came back to Jacqueline when she saw him take what appeared to be a generous roll of bills from his pocket to pay for their meal.

"Shall we walk out to the apartment?" she asked when they were on the street. "It is not very far."

Vince hesitated. "I don't know. We've got plenty of time. What do you say to a movie? I haven't seen one I don't know when."

"Whatever you like, dear. There are several houses down this street. You pick out the picture you think you'd like to see."

Jacqueline was thinking of the movie she went to see . . . on her wedding day. She had wanted to go then to avoid conversation with Larry. She wondered if Vince, possibly, was not using the same device. Perhaps not. It must have been a long time since he had had any pleasure of the sort.

But her vague discomfort increased when her father selected a film of the gangster type. It proved to deal with the activities of a super sleuth, matching his cunning against the underworld. To Jacqueline, it was unpleasantly suggestive and she tried to pay as little attention to it as possible. And, to her heightened imagination, Vince seemed thoroughly absorbed in the performance. She watched him in anxious perplexity during the more exciting scenes. When machine guns went into action, Vince sat on the edge of his chair, drinking it all in like a small boy.

There was a time when Jacqueline herself would have absorbed such perils with shameless interest, but not tonight. She and Vince might have traded places, in a way. He seemed so utterly irresponsible now, in need of guidance. And she never had felt so old.

The antics of an animated cartoon gave her the evening's first relief. And Vince settled back in his seat, to all appearances, politely bored.

Later, in the Courtland street apartment, Vince admitted a tolerant approval of his daughter's living quarters. He conceded that everything was convenient and tastefully arranged. But it was entirely too small. When he and the Skipper were ready to settle down, they must have a larger place . . . much larger. Perhaps a small house would be more to the point. After his experience on the Brown farm, Vince was not at all sure that he would not prefer a place in the country. Trees and fresh air . . . nothing quite like that. Plenty of room.

"Guess you'd like that, Skipper. If you're anything like your mother, you'll want to grow flowers."

And, ever and anon, his glances wandered to the little clock on the mantelpiece.

Finally, when he buttoned his coat with a suggestive air, the girl could endure her suspense no longer. She must learn something about this night's excursion before she allowed Vince to get away from her.

"What time is your appointment with Larry?" she asked, trying to make the tone of her voice casual.

"Oh . . . late."

"How late?"

"Well, I don't have to meet him until about twelve. But I thought I'd start a little early, you know. It's quite a litle ways and I want to walk."

"Where are you going to meet him?"

"In a little restaurant where he eats sometimes." Vince was becoming more and more uncomfortable under this direct examination. "I guess I'll be trotting along, Skipper."

"Not yet. It's not eleven. I want to know something . . ."

"Well?"

"Where are you and Larry going?"

"Why, back to the farm . . . as far as I know."

"Direct?"

"Why . . . You're getting sort of curious, aren't you, Skipper?"

"Yes, I am, Vince," she said earnestly. "But I have a reason. Won't you please tell me just what you're going to do tonight"

"Sure! But I don't know. Larry asked me to meet him. Said he was going . . ."

"Where?"

"I don't know." Vince's voice took on a stubborn tone. "After all, that's Larry's business. I'm only taking orders."

Jacqueline was thinking fast now. Vince had shown his hand, in a way. He knew more about what was afoot that he was admitting; that, or he was following Larry in a blind fashion. "Taking orders." That didn't quite sound like Vince, easy-going as he was always. All the old fears came trooping back.

Theer was still some reason to believe that Larry was doing some things without the law, or intended to. There was some mystery about the old Cutter house and its owner. And, in spite of his easy assurances, she was convinced that his stay at the Browns 'meant that he was in hiding. He had misled Lieutenant Staples by a ruse that was as bold as it was clever. And he seemed to have succeeded.

Larry was marking time, waiting for any suspicion to die down before he . . . did what? Perhaps this was the night he had been waiting for. And he was taking the unsuspecting Vince into it with him. The possible danger that he would be embroiled in some crime did not appeal to Jacqueline as much as the terror of some physical peril.

Vince was all she had. She must risk anything and everything to keep him out of trouble. She would! Cost what it might!

"I want to talk very plainly with you, Vince," she began steadily. "It won't take but a minute. We'll have to be pretty frank."

"Well . . .?" Vince was the picture of uneasiness.

"Tell me, dear, just what you know about Larry. You have spoken about his coming down here, and other places. Just where does he go? Just what does he do?"

"Why, I don't know. That's his business."

"All right. Did it ever occur to you that he might be . . . be doing somethiug he didn't want anybody to know about? Something . . . . wrong?"

"Of course not! You or nobody else would ever make me believe that Larry Cutter was a crook! You're talking nonsense, Skipper."

Jacqueline launched her most effective shaft. This was no time to think of the future, to count costs.

Then perhaps you can tell me," she offered quietly, "why the police are so interested in him."

"What!" Vince sat bolt upright in astonishment. "Police," he echoed unbelievingly. "You're crazy, Skipper! You must be!"

"I happen to know it's true. I think we should know why."

Vince settled back in his chair, still staring. It was very evident that all this was news to him. Then he leaned forward to ask excitedly, "Are you sure? Does Larry know it? Somebody's got to tell him!"

He knows. I was the one that let him know."

Vince looked at his daughter skeptically. "How did you find out?" he demanded shrewdly.

"By accident. A detective I know was in the office. He described Larry and called him by name. He asked if he ever had given me any letters and if I remembered to whom they were written."

"Had you? You didn't tell, did you?"

"I said that they were business letters. That I couldn't remember what they weer about. Then I told Larry because . . . well, it seemed only fair."

Vince did not seem to hear this halting explanation. He was deep in thought. When he roused himself, it was to declare, "I've got to see Larry right away."

"You can't, Vince!"

"Why?"

"Because I won't let you."

Instead of the outburst Jacqueline expected, her father looked at her in silence. When he spoke, it was with almost a subdued air.

"It's all right, Skipper. There's nothing for you or me to worry about. Larry's able to take care of himself, I guess. Maybe I can see you tomorrow and tell you what it's all about. If I don't, I'll write."

"It isn't all right!" Jacqueline burst out. "You may think so, but I know better. You don't know what you're running into and I tell you I won't let you go! You can't! You're all I've got now . . ."

"There, there. You musin't get excited. And I've got to go, I'll be late, first thing I know. You go to sleep and forget it." He picked up his hat.

With a spring, Jacqueline was out of her chair. She placed her back against the door leading to the hall. Her face was pale, but determined. Her dark eyes wide, dry.

"Vince, you're not going to meet Larry Cutter!"

"Who's going to stop me?" There was a brittle edge to his voice now.

"I am. I have the right to!"

"Right?" He stared at her wonderingly. "What right?"

"I . . . I'm Larry's . . . wife!"

Magistrate: "Did you say that the culprits used high words?"

Witness: "Well, their voices were pitched high—but the words they used were extremely low."

Harrington: "He didn't even ask me to take a seat."

Carrington: "He probably looked upon you as a standing joke."

... Quick Relief for Stuffy Head

Electors of the City of Charlottetown

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,

At the solicitation of many citizens I have nominated for the office of Chief Magistrate of the City. A long experience at the Council Board as representative of Ward 4, an intimate knowledge of Civic affairs, the chairmanship of important committees, including that of Finance, have afforded me greater insight into Civic problems and greater opportunity to serve you.

In addition to the general duties pertaining to Council activities, it has been my privilege to devote much thought and time to several matters vitally important to all citizens.

For EIGHT years the REDUCTION of rates for ELECTRICITY to City users has engaged my constant attention. The present reduction is the result of an unrelenting fight in which all will agree I have takne a leading part. If honored by you, my efforts for a still further reduction will be vigorously continued.

During the years of distressing depression my service has been freely and gladly given in connection with Civic Relief.

My objective during tenure of office will be a BALANCED BUDGET. I will strenuously insist that there be no excess in expenditures over budget estimates. The utmost economy, the elimination of unnecessary expenses, a thorough and general collection of taxes and taxation arrears, a complete investigation and scrutiny of Relief rolls will aid in obtaining a balanced budget.

Believing that LENGTH OF SERVICE, KNOWLEDGE OF CIVIC MATTERS, FIDELITY OF PURPOSE are factors which appeal to all fair minded electors, I solicit your endorsement on February 12th. If elected it will be my aim to earnestly devote my energies and talents to the best interests of the city.

Thanking you, I am sincerely,

B. R. HOLMAN

To The Electors Of Ward Two

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

I respectfully solicit your votes and support for me as candidate for the City Council for Ward 2. If elected, I shall do my best for the interests of the city in general, financial and otherwise, and for your ward in particular.

J. A. MACDONALD.
L-881.

Peters Road And Vicinity

Following the unusually fine weather of December and greater part of January the rigors of real winter are now in evidence and the Frost King with his accompanying monuments of white reigns supreme.

In the early part of the season much wood and lumber were cut and hauled and are now being prepared for fuel or as material for building.

The popular and ever-increasing fox industry is becoming more and more general throughout the province, as the rank and file of our citizens realize the profitable results accruing therefrom, especially during the uncertainties of general farming operations.

The serious illness of Mrs. Mary Johnston, an aged and esteemed resident of Peters Road, is much regretted by her many relatives and friends in this vicinity. Her daughters, Mrs. Lillian McFadyen, Mrs. Ida Merrill and Mrs. McMillan who were located in different centres of the Eastern States on being informed of their mother's illness, speedily prepared for the trip homeward. In order to make connection with the Charlottetown-Murray River train, they came by 'plane from Moncton, but were detained in the City overnight, owing to the train being stalled by snow drifts. We are pleased to report that Mrs. Johnston, although weak is holding up well against the disease.

Her many relatives and friends also regret the continued illness of Mrs. W. A. Johnston, Peters Road, and are pleased to know that at times, slight improvement is noticeable.

Mr. Percy Johnston, Peters Road, and Mr. Fred Johnston, Murray Harbor North, have taken a trip to Boston and other centres on the recent excursion.

Mr. John McLean, until quite recently resident in Charlottetown, is now located on his farm at Peters Road.

Our mail courier, Mr. Thomas Murphy, although opposed by rough weather and bad roads, is giving good service on his long route—Montague-Murray Harbor North.—P.

FARMER RAISES FITCHES

VICEROY, Sask. — Edward George's principal occupation is farming, but as a sideline he raises fitches and is reaping a good reward. The fur of the weasel-like little animal sells for $3. Fitches become quite tame and are used to kill gophers in the summer.

RIVERSIDE, Cal., Feb. 10—Maude Williams wants $800,000 for taking care of dog and horses.

She set the figure yesterday in testifying in her suit against Lois Keller of Palm Springs that she lodged as many as 117 dogs at one time for the wealthy dog fancier. The animals are wolfhounds. She said only a part of the cost of the services had been paid.

Attention, Ward 5!

I have nominated as Councillor in the belief that I can serve you faithfully in that capacity if elected.

If you think so too, give me your support—it will be appreciated.

Yours faithfully,
HENRY LAPTHORN.

L-883

To The Electors Of Ward 4

Ladies and Gentlemen:

I am a candidate for the position of councillor representing Ward 4 on the City Council. I am not attempting to make any personal canvass of the electors, but will appreciate sincerely any support which I may receive. I have not had any previous experience in civic administration, but have been a resident of Charlottetown, actively engaged in business for a number of years, and I incline to the belief that many of the probelms with which the next council will be confronted may prove easier of solution to a new-comer than to any who played a part in their creation.

If elected I will serve all citizens of Ward 4 to the limit of my ability.

Yours sincerely,
R. C. CHANDLER.

L-851.

To The Electors Of Ward Five

Ladies and Gentlemen:

It is my privilege once again to offer my services to Ward Five to the citizens in general as Councillor.

Having been your representative for the past six years in the City Council, I have endeavoured to give you the best services within my power. Everything in connection with the betterment of the City, consistent with our revenue will receive my hearty approval. It is not my intention to make a personal canvass, my record is before you, and I take this opportunity of soliciting you.

With gratitude in anticipation of your kind support,

I remain,
JAS. E. BLANCHARD.

L-862

To Electors of Ward Five

Having nominated for Councillor to contest Ward 5 at the forthcoming Civic Election and being unable to make a personal canvass, I take this opportunity of soliciting your support.

I served as a member at the Council Board for eight years previous to 1932, the last two of which I was chairman of the Finance Committee. During that time I endeavored to give good, honest, faithful service and in the light of what has transpired since then, I have no hesitation in appealing to you for election on my past record.

Several matters of grave importance to the citizens, such as Relief, Light, Labor and Finance, need very careful consideration at the present time, with a view to improvement in their administration and to this end, if elected, I shall apply myself with my utmost ability.

Trusting you will approve of my past efforts by casting a vote in my favor as one of your representatives in the new Council and assuring you that I will endeavor to safeguard your interests on every occasion, I am

Yours truly,
E. A. FOSTER.

Councillor Turner's Appeal As Mayoralty Candidate

To the Electors of the City of Charlottetown—

Ladies and Gentlemen:

When I offered my services as Councillor representing the Citizens of Ward 5 it was with the earnest hope that my presence at the Council Board would be of some benefit to the deliberations of that body. With the knowledge I possess of the unfortunate conditions existing, and a sincere desire to improve them, I am now seeking election as Mayor.

The story of the past two years makes sad reading, and is one that should cause every citizen to pause and wonder just what the future has in store. The Financial Statement has appeared in the press. Read it, and ask if it is not time that a sincere businesslike attempt was made to balance the budget at the earliest possible moment, if we are to avoid financial disaster. It is on this issue that I appeal to you for support. Every effort should be made to eliminate all unnecessary overhead and expenditure. New avenues of revenue should be explored. A determined effort to procure our just and fair percentage of the C. N. R. Grant of $40,000 paid the Provincial Government in lieu of taxes. An equitable proportion of the Gasoline Tax, Car Registration, etc., collected in the City by the Provincial Government. A thorough check up of the present method of assessing properties with a view to correcting existing inequalities, and in conjunction with this, a system of tax collections on the installment plan.

RELIEF. This is one of our major problems. A thorough survey of the method of administration, purchasing and distribution, and the elimination of all unworthy applications. In brief, a systematic operation of the entire relief system. It is not more money for relief that we need, but more employment. It will be my purpose to urge upon our Governments, Federal and Provincial, the absolute necessity for a programme of work, such as harbour improvements, the building of the North and West River bridges, projects which have been advocated by some of our representative citizens. A careful examination of the Housing Scheme, and if practical, its adoption. The enacting of such laws as will protect our laboring men from outside competition, and the establishment and maintenance of a proper scale of wages.

ELECTRIC LIGHT RATES. An honest and sincere attempt to investigate and definitely determine, if at all possible, the situation with regard to this vexed question.

PROPER BUILDING AND ELECTRICAL REGULATIONS. Encouragement given our Property owners to paint and improve their properties, without the fear of increased valuation. The protection of residential sections from the erection of unsightly buildings. In short all those things which tend towards a more efficient administration, and a more beautiful city.

May I say that if elected, I will in every way endeavor to work in harmony with the Council towards the building up of a bigger, better and more prosperous City. The problems are many and difficult. Most careful consideration, and complete co-operation, is essential; but with a united Council, working in peace and harmony for a common purpose, much can be accomplished.

As itelligent citizens, realizing the serious financial condition of our City, it is your duty to support the man you think best qualified to find a way out. Use your franchise and your own good judgment. Do not be swayed by other influences. If I have the honour of receiving your endorsement, I will dedicate my next two years to your service.

Respectfully yours,

PERCY W. TURNER

To the Electors of Ward 5

As your representative for the past two years in the City Council, I am again appealing to you for your support at the coming Civic Election. I have served six years at the Council Board and have always tried to do what is fair for the tax-payer and the citizens at large. If you see fit to give me your support and elect me, I pledge myself not to betray your confidence.

ARTHUR H. MacDOUGALL

To The Electors Of Ward 2

Ladies and Gentlemen:

Having served six years at the Council Board I am again soliciting your support as Councillor for Ward Two in the forthcoming Civic Election.

Serious problems with regard to finance, unemployment relief, electric light rates, labour, etc., face the civic government at this time, to the solution of which I shall endeavour, if elected, to devote my best efforts in the interests of the Ward in particular, and the City in general.

Yours respectfully,
DR. F. CHARLES DOUGAN

L-835

To The Electors Of Ward 4

Ladies and Gentlemen:

In appealing for your support, as Councillor, in the forthcoming Civic Election, I do so in the hope that my services may be of benefit to the Ward, and to the City generally.

It was my pleasure to represent you at the Council Board for seven terms. The experience thus acquired will, I feel assured, be of value in serving you again in the same capacity if you favour me with your support.

Thanking you in anticipation for this expression of confidence.

Yours respectfully,
R. B. RATTRAY.

L-833.

Electors Of Ward Five

Ladies and Gentlemen,—Having nominated for Councillor to contest your Ward 5, I respectfully solicit your support and if elected assure the taxpayers of my best efforts for a careful and economical administration of civic affairs.

I am firmly of the opinion that in these strenuous times the most efficient and satisfactory manner to handle the situation would be by a civic commission of management.

Respectfully yours,
M. VINCENT BLAKE.

L-834

Electors Of Ward Five

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN.

Once again I appeal to you for your support at the forthcoming Civic Election, as Councillor.

It was my pleasure to represent you, at the Council Board for six years, during which time I endeavoured to, work in the City's best Interests. If you favor me with your support at this time I shall, as in the past, give of my best.

Thanking you in anticipation for same, I am,

Yours Respectfully
GEORGE W. MacLEOD.
