Livestock Market

(Canadian Press)

MONTREAL, Oct. 31.—There were only 104 cattle, 63 calves, 138 hogs and 343 sheep and lambs, for sale on the two markets today. Common butcher cows sold from $5.00 to $6.00, canners and cutters $3.50 to $4.50 and bologna bulls $5.25 to $5.75.

There were no good cattle, one small lot of pail fed calves averaging 290 pounds sold for $8.00, the bulk of the calves were veals and were sold for $12.00 to $13.00 ungraded. The lambs were all in one consignment were of fair average quality and were being held for $10.75 with $10.40 big, hogs sold for $10.00 with sows from $8.00 to $8.50.

FLYING OVER LAND IS PRACTICAL NOW

OTTAWA, Ont., Oct. 30.—(By The Canadian Press)—"While fearless men continue to lose their lives in attempts to fly the Atlantic and experts debate over the practicability of dirigibles, the public is apt to lose sight of the fact that air services over land are becoming a reality," says the Ottawa Morning Journal in an editorial entitled "Air Mails a Reality."

The Journal continues:

"There is a well-established air mail service in the United States; an international air mail service be- and the whole of the Dominion will soon be linked up in the same way. The latest announcement to this end is that a regular air carriage of mails is to be begun between St. John, N. B., and Montreal.

"The truth is that, regardless of what fate or science may have in store for the future of air traffic between continents, flying over land has passed the realm of experiment, has been established as a reality of commerce and communication. In Government, in industrial, in mining, and in several other activities, airplanes today are playing their part, and no one who knows anything of their value can at all believe that they are a passing phase. They have, indeed, become as much a reality as railways or automobiles."

Pension May Be Restored

(Special to the Guardian)

OTTAWA, Ont., Oct. 26.—Negotiations are proceeding between Hon. Phillippe Roy, Canadian minister to France, and the French Government in connection with the matter of having the pension of Justin Duran, former reservist of the French army, restored by the republic. This question loomed large during the last parliamentary session of parliament.

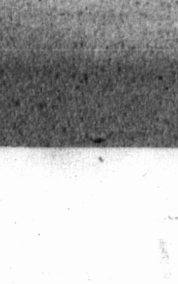
What Is Equality in Matrimony? — Describes Marriage of Future

The Ideal Marriage Is the Fifty-Fifty Marriage, in Which the Husband and Wife Bear an Equal Load of Responsibility in a Partnership Founded on Justice and Fair Play.

A GIRL asks: "What is a fifty-fifty marriage?"

A fifty-fifty marriage is the ideal of which every woman dreams and of which men—but men don't think about it at all.



IT IS the custom to describe matrimony as an equal partnership into which a man and woman enter, but this a mere figure of speech. Nine marriages out of ten are not partnerships. They are grafts in which one or the other of the high contracting parties has got a rotten deal.

SOMETIMES it is the man who gets the hot end of the bargain; sometimes it is the woman. There are just as many trifling, no-account wives who lie down on their jobs and let George do it all as there are lazy, loafing husbands who dump all of the domestic burdens on their wives' shoulders. There are just as many grasping, greedy husbands who take all and give noting in return as there are gold-digger wives.

NEITHER sex has a monopoly on meanness. When it comes to rock-bottom selfishness and the desire to get the best for one's self, male and female are both in the running. And few there be, either husbands or wives, who can resist the temptation to trample on a human doormat if he or she happens to acquire one by marriage.

SUCH being the case and to meet a long-felt want the idea of the fifty-fifty marriage is being put forth, and its design is to give both the husband and the wife a square deal. It is intended to abolish alike the parasitic wife and the serf husband and the slave wife and the Simon Legree husband.

AS IT is now many a man spends his life toiling to support a wife who makes absolutely no return for what she receives. He makes the money, she spends it. He can never afford to take a holiday, she takes nothing else. He is nailed to his desk the year round, she spends her summers in the mountains and her winters in Florida. He laps her in luxury, she never even gives a thought to his comfort.

IN A fifty-fifty marriage the woman whose husband is able to support her so that she does not need to follow any gainful occupation after marriage feels that she is only being honest when she gives him a fair run for his money.. He supplies the house and the raw materials, and it is up to her to take them and make them into a comfortable home. She feels that she would be as much defaulting on her part of the contract to be a poor housekeeper as he would be if he were a poor provider.

SHE considers that it would be more shameful for her husband to neglect his business and let it go into bankruptcy while he played golf that it would be for her to devote so much time to her clubs that she had none to make the beds and sweep the floors or to feed him on delicatessen messes and out of paper bags because she stayed so late at the bridge game or the matinee that she couldn't get him up a decent dinner. In a word, she goes fifty-fifty with him. He brings home the bacon and she fries it to his taste.

IN THESE days it is necessary for many young wives to continue to be money-earners after they are married. Very often these marriages are called fifty-fifty marriages because the wife contributes her share of money to the upkeep of the home, but in reality they are nearly always twenty-five to twenty-five marriages, with the woman putting in the most.

FOR almost always she contributes not only her part of the money for running the home but does the work as well. She buys the food and cooks it while husband lies on the couch and reads the paper and tells her to hurry up. She spends her evening scrubbing and cleaning while he puts on his hat and steps out to the movies to get out of the confusion.

IN A real fifty-fifty marriage, where the wife contributes half the money for the support of the home, the husband does half the housework. There is no mystery about performing on a gas range that any man who can tune in on a radio can't fathom. There is no esoteric rite about tidying a house that a man can't perform. As a matter of fact, the best chefs and cleaners are of the masculine persuasion, and it is up to husband's to strut their domestic stuff in the cases where their wives are also Tired Business Men. If the wife helps make the money, the husband should help with the housework.

IN THE fifty-fifty marriages the husbands will feel that the marriage contract is as binding on them as it is on their wives and that they are just as much married as their wives are, and that it is just as much their duty to try to make their homes happy as it is their wives'.

HERETOFORE men have felt that if they support their families in reasonable comfort they have done all that could be expected of them. They felt that they had the right to bring home all of their temper and nerves and dump them on the hearthstone, and if wife didn't like it she could lump it. If they were bored they considered it their privilege to sally forth in the evening in search of livelier and gayer company than that found at home.

BUT the fifty-fifty husband realizes that he must be a little ray of sunshine in the home also if there is to be cheer and brightness there; that he must consider his wife's tastes and whims and peculiarities as much as he expects her to adapt herself to him; that it is just as necessary for him to remain the lover as it is for her to continue to be a vamp, and that she gets fed up on domesticity and needs her night off just as much as he does.

FURTHERMORE, in the fifty-fifty marriages the husband is a 50 per cent father instead of being a total loss, except as a bill-payer, in the way of most American men. He doesn't turn over the entire rearing of the children to their mother. He doesn't deliberately half-orphan his children because between his business and his golf he has no time for them.

HE HELPS his wife take care of them when they are little. He plays with them when they are adolescent. He molds their characters when they are plastic, and when they are grown they are an honor to him instead of a disgrace.

THAT is what the fifty-fifty marriage is going to be. And it is going to make the old fairy tale come true: "And when they were married they liver happily ever afterward." Because the ideal marriage is founded on justice and fair play, and that always works out successfully.

Canadian Clubs Unite Dominion

Edmonton Journal Heartily Commends Club's Speaking Tours.

EDMONTON, Alta., Oct. 30.—(By the Canadian Press)—In editorial on Canadian Club tours and speaking tours of public men at Canadian Clubs in various parts of the Dominion the Edmonton Journal says:

"The Association of Canadian Clubs last year initiated an experiment that brought good results and that is now to be expanded it arranged speaking tours of public men through sections of the dominion other than their own. By this means a close bond is established between the provinces and they obtain a better knowledge of one another's problems. In November three members of the Federal Parliament from Nova Scotia are to start on journeys through to the Pacific coast in the course of which they will address a thousand clubs. We cannot have too many such interchanges of visits and the Nova Scotians may rest assured of a hearty welcome in Alber-

Conservative Convention

TORONTO, Ont., Oct. 30—(CP)—A program bristling with subjects of interest to all Canadians is assured for the annual meeting of the Liberal-Conservative Association of Ontario. The meeting is scheduled for November 21-22 and includes in the subjects for discussion matters not only of political import, but of social welfare also. The forenoon on the second day will be devoted entirely to the place of women in politics, the state and the home, and 17 women from all over Ontario will discuss problems intimately related to the general good of the community, and particularly as they affect women and the growing generation.

SUCCESSFUL TEA.— Hallowe'en decorations, carrying out an entirely new idea in ornamentation, greeted the visitors at the annual Hallowe'en tea and sale in St. James' Hall yesterday afternoon, under the auspices of the Young Ladies Guild of which Mrs. William Brehaut is President. The main hall was centered with a large umbrella hung from the middle light, to which was attached streamers of black and yellow crepe paper and spooky novelties, while around the walls, were other Hallowe'en decorations which caused much amusement and made a pretty background for the candy, pumpkin pie and fancy work table. In the lower hall similar artistic decorations were carried out in black and yellow. Here the cake and salad tables were cosily grouped around the dainty tea tables, set for four, while in another corner tea was poured. A number of bright young people served and altogether the affair reflected with credit on all those who took part, over $300 being realized.

STURGEON STUDY GROUP.—The second meeting of Sturgeon Study Group, which consists of the following schools: Sturgeon, Gasperaux, Cambridge, Panmure Island, Murray Harbour, Pembroke and St. Mary's Road West, was held at Pembroke School on Monday afternoon October 22nd and attended by seven teachers. The meeting was opened by a few well chosen remarks by the President. The minutes of the last meeting were read and adopted. Mr. MacPhee, Inspector of Schools, was then called upon and very explicitly he taught a lesson on "Assignment of Lessons." The teachers freely presented any apparent difficulty he or she had in mind pertaining to the "Assignment of Lessons" and Mr. MacPhee, in his capable manner, made everything quite clear. The teachers feel that they have derived great benefit from this interesting lesson and resolve to carry out those helpful suggestions. Assignment plans are to be prepared by the different members for the next meeting which is to be held at Murray Harbour School, November 14th.

STERLING INSTITUTE.—On Thursday evening Oct., 25th. Twelve members and three visitors met at the home of the President, Mrs. Thomas Bolger, Hope River, where a most enjoyable evening was spent. The meeting was presided over by the president and opened by singing the Institute ode, followed by the roll call, and minutes of the previous meeting was read and adopted. The different commitees gave their reports, and a number of discussions took place. The members are considering buying a clock for the school and also giving of prizes in the different grades for the higest marks in certain studies at the end of the term. Studies and prizes to be decided later. Mrs. Wilbur Hiltz, Mrs. Thomas Bolger were appointed on this committee. The members decided in favor of the district convention which is to be held on Nov. 22 nd., place of meeting not decided; Mrs. Thomas Bolger and Mrs. James Hiscott were appointed on the committee to meet with other districts at the home of Mrs. Willard Nicholson's Mayfield. Friday evening, Nov 22nd., to farrange about the program and Etc. It was decided that Mrs. John McGuigan, write the History of Sterling Institute which is to be read at the district convention. Sterling Institute has been very active this summer. The interior of Stanley school has been cleaned and redecorated and 6 new blinds have been purchased for the school, and Eight dollars given towards school fair expenses. The redecorating of the interior of the school called for a lot of hard work as well as expense, but the women of the Institute Courageously undertook the task themselves and not only curtailed expense but the school room now presents a very cheerful appearence. After the close of the business part of the meeting a very delightful, Sing, Say, Playor Pay, program took place of musical selections, readings and Etc. A reading by Mrs. Thomas Reid, Sr., was very much enjoyed by all present. This lady although advanced in years still retains her charm of manner and excellent ability. The next meeting is to be held at the home of Mrs. John Quinn, Stanley, and is to be the annual meeting of the Institute. This will be an interesting meeting as some important decisions are to be made, and all members are requested to be present The meeting was brought to a close by singing the National Anthem. A delicious lunch was served by the hostess. After which the members left for home thanking Mrs. Bolger for her kind hospitality.

Britain Preparing For 1930 World's Poultry Congress

LONDON, Oct. 29—The interest created throughout the 40 countries which participated in the last congress at Ottawa, Ont., indicates the expectation that Great Britain will not fall short of her predecessors in the part of host to the World's Poultry Congress when it is held in this country in July, 1930.

The Congress assumes more importance than functions of this nature ordinarily enjoy, because it follows upon such events in Holland, Spain and Canada, which were given a national character by the Governments of those countries. It was at the invitation of Mr. Baldwin, on behalf of the British Government, that the decision was reached to hold the next Congress in England. Already plans are being prepared in Canada and the United States for organized parties in connection with the Congress; and it is believed that some thousands will avail themselves of this opportunity to visit England.

Bring Many Visitors

In undertaking the organizaztion of the Congress the Ministry of Agriculture attaches much importance to the occasion which, it is anticipated will not only bring a great number of people to this country, but will provide a much-needed stimulus to the extension and development of the egg and poultry producing industry. It is understood that the King and Queen and the Prince of Wales have consented to become patrons; and it is expected that the Ministers of Agriculture for England and Wales and Northern Ireland, with the Secretary of State for Scotland, will be the official presidents.

Preliminary activity has necessarily been devoted largely to arrangements for the great exhibition, which to the general public will be the chief feature of the Congress, and there can be little doubt that the Crystal Palace will eventually be chosen as the most suitable site for the most com- staged. This, it is anticipated, will be mainly of a demonstrational character though a competitive element will doubtless be introduced.

A number of committees, representative of every branch of the poultry and allied industries, will be appointed, and the secretarial and directorial duties will be undertaken by the officials of the Ministry of Agriculture.

British Artists Wood Engravers

OTTAWA, Ont., Oct. 30—(By The Canadian Press)—A good deal of interest is being manifested in the exhibition of British wood engravers' work now being held at the National Gallery here, the exhibition embracing about 130 works of artists and illustrating the trend among wood engravers and color print makers in Great Britain at the present day. The selection of the prints was made by Herbert Ernest Augustus Furst, author, associate and member of the Council of the Faculty of Arts, London, England, who, according to a writer in the Citizen, "has made the selection with a view to revealing tendencies rather than to displaying any particularly outstanding work of the artists represented."

With reference to the woodcuts, the writer in question says: "They stand out conspicuously from the rest and indicate a return to the methods of the early wood engravers, and the abandonment of the polyglot medium of nineteenth century illustrators. And they give more than a hint of the rich possibilities there are in the woodcut used as a form of artistic expression. The contrasts of black and white, mass and line, give to the genuine woodcut a beauty all its own."

As to the colored prints, they are more decorative and have a greater literary appeal, he says, most of the examples shown being charming.

The exhibits will be shown in Montreal, Toronto and other cities in the Dominion.

The estate of Mr. Scouloudis, former Prime Minister of Greece,
