FARMERS

If you intend selling a few hens or exchanging them for this spring's chicks. Could you conveniently do it now? As the interior of my building has to be painted and disinfected shortly in preparation for spring work.

Please Remember

In a few days rains and melting snow will give you dampness problems. Cull out all unthrifty birds at once and save yourself a lot of trouble.

Erratic Laying

Your hens were all laying and without warning, practically quit in a day. It may have been the weather, a change of feed, unbalanced feeds, a partial moult or loss of weight. It seems hard to give you a definite answer.

But

I can tell you this. A lot of these birds have small, diseased, dried or putrid yolks in their system and the quicker they are disposed of the better.

Scandinavian Press Sees Finns On Verge Of Peace

STOCKHOLM, March 11—(AP)—Black headlines in Scandinavian papers proclaimed tonight that Finland was on the verge of peace with Soviet Russia and rising stock exchange quotations reflected general optimism despite evidence that rumors of agreement between the two warring nations were premature.

Conflicting rumors clouded the actual status of the peace negotiations.

There were reports that the Finnish delegation, headed by Premier Risto Ryti, already had left for home by way of Stockholm with the Soviet peace proposals, but as hours passed and the Finns failed to appear here Swedes concluded the talks at the Kremlin were continuing.

Canadian Troops Get Real Grub At Soldiers' Club

ALDERSHOT, March 11—(CP)—Canadian soldiers with a yearning for hot dogs, flap-jacks and "real" coffee have found a place where they can get them all. It's the Dominion Soldier's Club, opened here a short time ago.

The club was opened after Lord Milne, president of the Empire War Society, urged upon Lieut-General Sir Charles Broad, general officer commanding in chief at Aldershot, the need for a hospitality centre there for overseas soldiers.

A Canadian soldier cook was lent to the centre for several days to teach its chef how to prepare the dishes to which Canucks are accustomed. Now they can go into the snack bar and enjoy a T-bone steak, corn on the cob, hot dogs, flap-jacks, Canadian coffee and clam chowder.

The club includes bathrooms, games rooms, a writing room, library and lounge.

Southern Envoy Is No Stranger With Canadians

By J. D. HOLDSWORTH
Canadian Press Correspondent

SYDNEY, Australia March 11 — (CP) —Major-General Sir William Glasgow who will be Australia's first commissioner in Ottawa, already knows Canada and Canadians.

He led the Australian delegation to the Empire Parliamentary Conference in Ottawa in 1928 and fought alongside Canadians in the Boer War (1899-1902) and the First Great War (1914-1918).

During the big counter -offensive of August, 1918, when Sir William commanded an Australian division, the Canadians were on his right flank. These experiences, he said, filled him with admiration for the men from the oldest Dominion.

The high commissioner, who will be accompanied to Ottawa by his wife and two officials from the external affairs department, hopes to renew old acquaintances and make new ones in Canada.

"I shall do all in my power to make the relationship between Australia and Canada even more cordial than it is at present," he said before leaving.

Sir William considers the viewpoint that inter-Dominion diplomatic appointments are symptomatic of the empire's weakness is "absurd." 'Such apointments are fresh evidence of the wish of the Dominions to draw closer together and maintain the closely knit fabric of the Empire," he declared.

The new high commissioner has had a distinguished military and political career. He won the Distinguished Service Order in the Boer War. In the First Great War he rose from the rank of major to major-general. Later he was elected to the senate and served in the Bruce ministry as minister for home affairs and as defence minister until 1929.

N. St. C. Beauchamps is accompanying Sir William to Ottawa as his secretary, with the diplomatic rank of second secretary. G. S. Bridgeland will be assistant secretary, with rank of third secretary.

Amherst Wins Juvenile Title From St. John

AMHERST, N. S., March 11—(CP)—The Amherst Ramblers won the sime-finals of the first Maritime Juvenile Hockey Championship tonight when they defeated the Fairville Juniors of Saint John 11-4, and took the round by a total score of 14-10.

The locals will now meet Summerside, P. E. I.

There were 17 penalties during the contest as the referees checked up sharply on the youngsters. A fight in the third period brought spectators on the ice but police and officials chased them off and untangled the two teams.

Although the Saint John team had an edge in speed, the Amherst players had more experience. Driscoll, McCormack, Collins and Cunningham scored for Saint John, while MacManaman and Brown counted nine of the Amherst goals with MacNeil and Mitchell getting the other counters.

R. A. F. Flights Over Germany

LONDON, March 11 —(CP) — When men of the Royal Air Force return from a reconnaissance flight over Germany their job is by no means complete. They submit to an examination by an intelligence officer who wants all the answers—and then some.

One plane had just returned from Bremen when the men were confronted by the man with his little red book. He wanted the "dope" for his report to bomber command headquarters Time of the plane's flight over Bremen and its height were recorded along with information about the German blackout and searchlight activity.

"Where were the searchlights?" he asked. "Where did you run into anti-aircraft fire?"

He got all his information but the crew waited around for a bomber that had taken off with it and had not returned from a flight over Hamburg. On the tarmac, an ambulance and the fired tender were parked side by side. A few minutes later came news of the plane and the squadron leader calculated time of its arrival.

The service doctor arrived. He or one of his colleagues is always present at the end of one of these flights. Forty minutes later the big bomber landed.

The men reported severe weather, ice on the propellors, difficulties in the pilot's oxygen supply. His hand had become slightly frost-bitten when he removed his glove to adjust the apparatus.

U-Boat Defeated:— Two Trawlers Battle Enemy

LONDON March 11 —(CP) —The story of a spirited fight between two British trawlers and a U-boat, in which the Nazi undersea craft was driven off, was brought to Britain tonight by fishermen who participated in the fight.

The fishermen told how the U-boat, poised to attack them, was caught in cross-fire from the trawlers and decided it would be more discreet to submerge.

This was the story told by the fishermen:—

At twilight Saturday the trawlers, only recently armed to resist Nazi air attacks, were fishing when a lookout cried:

"Submarine on starboard side."

"Our skipper immediately ordered our net cables cut so we could manoeuvre more easily," one fisherman said. "We rushed to our posts and our gunners were poised for action. We saw a waterspout caused by a shell.

"We answered with our gun while another nearby trawler also opened up.

"The submarine fired two shells and then found the fire coming from two directions too hot. It submerged and disappeared."

Germany's sea warfare took further toll among neutral shipping today. The 2,325-ton Netherlands ship Amor was blown up by a mine and sunk today five miles off the Fairbanks buoy. Thirty-three crew members were picked up by another ship and debarked at Flushing. The Netherlands. Hope was abandoned for the Belgian trawler Z-47 after another craft had picked up a lifeboat riddled with shell fragments. The ship carried four men.

The Greek vessel Niritos, 3,854 tons, struck a mine off the southeast British coast this afternoon and later was beached.

Commenting on the sinking of the 1,097 -ton British freighter Borthwick Saturday, shipping circles recalled that its captain, picked up along with 20 of his crew, had survived three separate Nazi air attacks on his ship since the war began. In the first great war he survived the sinkings of two ships.

The admiralty tonight announced that 101 naval officers and seamen not previously reported had been killed, wounded or lost while serving in the ranks. The announcement said the casualties had no connection with any specific naval engagements. The warships to which the men were attached were not listed.

Colonials Come To Aid Britain

LONDON, March 11 —(CP) —Side by side with the Dominions, the colonies are playing their part in the Empire's war effort. Like their "big brothers" the participation is both military and economic. Because of increased expenditures in the last few years, the colonies were better prepared for war than in 1914. Trinidad's force was six times as great and Hong Kong's five times. In addition, local defence forces have been established for the first time in a number of the smaller colonies.

When the war was declared all local defence forces were mobilized and they carried out such essential duties as coast watching. The cardinal principle was that the first call upon manpower must be for local defence, es ential government services and local industries.

The home government assumed a greater degree of control over the colonial empire's financial and economic policy to mobilize the full resources. Measures of import and export control and control of foreign exchange were introduced.

Steps were taken to make available for other empire countries and for the allies some of the more important colonial crops. The whole sugar crop up to Aug 31, 1940, apart from supplies for domestic use, was bought by the British government.

It also decided to buy the entire 1939-40 Gold Coast and Nigeria cocoa crop and part of the crop from certain other colonies at agreed prices. Elsewhere Britain is buying part of the crop of oil seeds, nuts and vegetable oils. The remainder is available to neutrals, provided there is no resale to Germany.

INTERNED WOMEN PAYING "GUESTS"

LONDON, March 11 —(CP) — Around dusk, dressed in her backless evening gown, Grecthen, who is classed as a "dangerous enemy alien," steps out for her nightly stroll in the yard of Holloway Prison, women's jail in North London.

Across the corridor she stops for a visit with one of her many wartime neighbors. They smoke Turkish cigarettes with their coffee, discuss the war and chat about home.

Gretchen's existence is typical of the 210 German and Austrian women who have been detained for the duration of the war. By special instructions of the Home Office, Gretchen and her compatriots are treated as "guests, not prisoners." Those who can afford it have furnished their cell with curtains, carpets and cushions, and pay ordinary British short-term prisoners a weekly fee to wait on them at meals.

Interned aliens are classed in two groups: those who can pay for their keep and those without means who are maintained by the government.

"Girls in silk pajamas flit out and in different cells paying visits," a released British prisoner reported. "Many of the women wear trousers, all shapes and colors. They are allowed to smoke. Their cells are filled with flowers and fruit. They all have trunks and cases in their cells."

Statistics show that of 74,233 enemy aliens in Britain, 42,814 were women, mostly domestic servants. Of more than 70,000 cases heard by aliens 'tribunals only 528 were interned ,and 8,356 placed under police restrictions. The remainder were given complete exemption.

All Occupations Represented In Candidate List

HALIFAX, March 11— (CP)— Just about any profession you could mention offhand would be represented among the 631 candidates looking for the Maritimes' seats in the next House of Commons.

While there isn't a fisherman among those contesting the 26 seats in these seafaring provinces, the 27 professions of the candidates make up a fair cross-section of life in Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island.

The occupants of coal-mining, lumbering, farming and shipbuilding—all basic industries in the Maritimes—have their representation among the men fyling nomination papers today. There is one soldier (who used to be a newspaperman), a radio announcer, a clergyman and the usual sprinkling of lawyers, doctors and merchants.

The lawyers, as usual, predominate. Nineteen are in the running, with nine apiece in the two larger provinces and Finance Minister Ralston the legal man in Prince Edward Island.

Each of the major political parties has nominated 26 men, one for each of the 12 seats in Nova Scotia, 10 in New Brunswick and four in Prince Edward Island. The Co-operative Commonwealth Federation has named six in Nova Scotia and one in New Brunswick, and each of the latter provinces has an Independent Liberal in the field.

In all Prince Edward Island constituencies, straight two-party fights are the prospect. Nova Scotia and the Island returned Liberals for all their seats in the 1935 election. New Brunswick sent one Conservative to Ottawa.

This time, the electors of these provinces have the choice of electing C.C.F. representatives for the first time in history. The party got its first political foothold in the Maritimes just recently with the election of a member of the Nova Scotia Legislature in a bye-election.

Two of the C.C.F. men are miners, and they include a Universalist Minister, electrician, clayworker and a clerk. The one soldier candidate is James Cameron, a Lieutenant in the 9th Anti-Aircraft Battery, who is running as a National Government candidate in Pictou.

Nova Scotian candidates include the Mayors of two towns—W. E. Landry of Antigonish, contesting Antigonish-Guysboro as a National Government candidate, and Mayor James M. Walker of Yarmouth, National Government, Shelburne-Yarmouth-Clare.

Mayor Landry's candidature was not made public until today, when he fyled papers. There was no National Government convention for his riding, which was not contested by the Conservatives in 1935.

French Minister To Canada Is Named

PARIS, March 11—(CP Havas) —Rene Ristelhueber, French Minister to Bulgaria, a distinguished diplomat credited with having been the first to tip off Paris that there was a possibility of a German - Russian understanding, was named tonight to be France's minister to Canada.

He had been minister at Sofia since December, 1937, and will replace at Ottawa Count Robert de Dampierre, recently named French Minister to Sweden.

M. Ristelhueber is credited in the French yellow book, which outlines events leading up to the war, with being the first French diplomatic envoy to inform Paris of the impending understanding between Russia and Germany.

Soldiers Parcels Go Astray Through Careless Packing

Persons shipping food parcels overseas would be well advised to hear what the post office has to say before sending another gift to soldiers across the Atlantic. Already, thanks to bad packing, food is rotting in the Montreal post office that was supposed to go overseas. It cannot be shipped any further. A large number of soldiers will be getting letters soon telling them about parcels coming and will wonder why they nevre arrive. The post office knows the reason. The officials have given the following useful information:

PROPER PACKING

First, a little advice is sent out in a communication from the Administrative services of the Post Office. It states: "The need for proper packing cannot be too strongly emphasized. Filmsy cardboard boxes and thin tissue are entirely inadequate . Strong containers and thick wrapping paper are essential. The parcel should be firmly wrapped and well bound with strong cord."

Since butter, coffee and bacon seem to be popular among senders, the following advice was given by Luodovic Germain, director of Postal Services in Montreal, to get some advice on the subject.

Butter should be packed in compliance with the laws, and placed in hermetically sealed tin boxes, bearing a conspicuous mark indicating the nature of the contents. Five pounds of butter should be the maximum. If this is going to friends in England or Scotland, the rate via parcel post is 24 cents for the first pound, and 18 cents for each successive pound.

If the butter is for soldier, the rate is 12 cents flat per pound .

The butter cannot be shipped by a butter firm or merchant and it cannot be sold; it must be a gift.

CUSTOMS DECLARATION

All such parcels must be accompanied by a Customs declaration, properly filled out and pasted outside the package. (Form 91 B.)

As regards bacon, the post office suggests that it be shipped in air tight containers in the same way as butter. The same quantities of postage rates prevail as in the case of butter.

There are no restrictions on the maximum of coffee sent and the post office does not insist on tin cans hermetically sealed. Coffee also travels at 24 cents per pound, for the first pound, and 18 cents for each successive pound, if it is going to non-military people. If the coffee is a gift to a soldier the rate is 12 cents a pound parcel post.

In the matter of parcels for soldiers the limit for packages is 11 pounds, at the cheap rate of 12 cents a pound. The maximum weight of any parcel going overseas under the higher rate is 20 pounds.

FORM OF ADDRESS

In addressing a soldier serving overseas, the formula is:
Regimental Number,
Rank and Name,
C.A.S.F.,
Full name of regiment or unit,
c-o Base Post Office in Canada.

The post office again emphasizes that in addresses, abbreviations of the names, units or services should be avoided. The names of these should be spelled out in full.

The post office has on hand now rotted food shipped from Vancouver and Prairie points, addressed to soldiers overseas. This food was improperly wrapped. Butter melted and spoiled other mail. Bacon and other foods have also spoiled in transit. This occurred during a four-day train journey or less. Since parce's shipped overseas take three weeks sometimes to reach their destinations, it can easily be seen that a great deal more food is going to spoil in transit if senders do not take to heart the Post Office suggestions.—Montreal Star.
