There were two sessions. The afternoon session opened with a devotional period in charge of the Bedeque Union, taking part in this service was Mrs. Henderson, Mrs. Frizzell and Mrs. Davidson.

The roll call was answered by 26 members and one county member. The delegates were from five unions, namely, Charlottetown, Freetown, Cornwall, Bedeque and Cavendish.

Greetings were received from Mrs. (Rev.) Boothroyd, Mrs. W. A. Thompson and Mrs. John MacNeill.

The address of welcome was given by Mrs. (Rev.) Paterson of Cavendish, and was replied to by Mrs. Hazen Howard.

A memorial service was conducted by Cornwall Union for members who had passed away during the past year.

The officials and heads of the various departments submitted their reports, which were all approved.

A solo and recitation was given by Miss C. Simpson.

Afternoon tea was served by the Cavendish Union.

The dedication prayer for the newly appointed officers was said by Rev. Mr. Paterson of Cavendish.

REV. W. H. HARDING
 Rev. Mr. Harding was the special speaker and in a forceful address urged the need of more action on the part of the W.C.T.U. and also of the churches in a program to educate the young people on the evils of strong drink.

The speaker stated he made his first public speech in the cause of temperance fifty years ago at Dartmouth, N.S., and was at the meetings in Halifax when the Union was organized there 50 years ago and the prohibition law was placed on the Statutes of Canada. But there is greater need today for education in temperance in the three Maritime Provinces than ever there was since the temperance movement began.

The great difficulty, Mr. Harding said, is that not only have the store international trade; inquiry, under the auspices of the League, into the question of access to raw materials.

The main problems involved in the future of the League, he said, were its machinery and the will to work that machinery. The latter he termed infinitely the more important.

ITALO-ETHIOPIAN SITUATION
 Failure of the League in the Italo-Ethiopian situation he blamed principally upon the organization's lack of universality and its failure to play a more effective part in the earlier stages of the crisis.

The British Government contended machinery could be devised facilitating effective intervention of the League in any dispute earlier than it can intervene at present.

Eden linked his suggestion for separation of the Versailles Treaty from the Covenant with League efforts to spur world recovery. "We must not forget," he said, "that close bonds exist between economic and political factors."

Regarding armaments, Eden said: "By our signature to the League of Nations Covenant and every nation by its signature to the pact of Paris, almost every nation repudiated war as an instrument for the settlement of international disputes. Civilization has to put its promise into practice or perish."

LEAGUE'S TASK
 The standard of living was being sacrificed to the standard of armaments. But it was still possible for nations to live and work together, regardless of their forms of Government. The League's task was to determine how they were to do this.

"We entered upon the re-equipment of our defences because we thought it a national duty," said the Foreign Secretary. "We shall persist in it unless and until the nations reach an international agreement for the limitation and reduction of armaments.

"If disarmament is to be real, it must be not only military but mental, not only weapons but war mentality must be laid aside."

Britain could have no part, he emphasized, in a standstill in armaments giving the advantage to nations which had been concentrating on the most intensive rearmament.

"We believe in democracy and in its survival," Eden told the Assembly. "Its ideals lie too near the spirit of the British race ever to be questioned. For us no other system, of whatever extreme, would ever be acceptable if it brought in its train suppression of our liberties and destruction of our traditions."

BRITAIN'S POLICY
 Britain's policy continued to be based upon membership of the League, he said. She would cooperate to the full in seeking to strengthen the League by enlargement of its membership and by more confident loyalty to its members.

Declaring that more modification of League procedure was insufficient, he said: "It is for that reason that His Majesty's Government sought in accord with the terms of the London Communiqué late in July to reunite representatives of certain governments to see if it is possible to take the first steps toward a European settlement. We are persisting and will persist in this effort.

"His Majesty's government believes it would be advantageous to negotiate regional pacts," he said later. Such pacts would be publishable in advance and would definitely outline the conditions surrounding their eventual application, he pointed out. "The British Government is ready," he added, "to negotiate such regional pacts if they are in conformity with the Covenant."

Crown Evidence Is Completed In Preliminary Hearing

Just before adjournment of the preliminary hearing of Judge Duffy charged with manslaughter yesterday a controversy arose between the defence counsel and the Crown as to the strength of evidence required at a preliminary hearing before commitment of the accused for trial might be justified.

Crown prosecutor D. Edgar Shaw, K. C., claimed that when evidence taken was sufficient that a petit jury "might" base on it a verdict of "guilty" then it was the duty of the magistrate to commit the accused to higher court for trial.

Senior defense counsel H. P. McPhee, K. C., maintained a preliminary hearing magistrate "must be fully satisfied" there was evidence upon which a petit jury "could" find a "guilty verdict" before there was justification for committing an accused for Supreme Court trial.

Criminal code, cases described as "parallel," and several text books on law were referred to before presiding Magistrates John P. Whear of Charlottetown and L. B. Mellish of Montague called for adjournment. It was expected that as a result of the contention Judge Duffy would take the stand when the hearing resumes this morning at 10 o'clock.

Evidence for the Crown was completed yesterday morning when John Russell, Covehead, and Constables C. F. Deakin, L. M. F. Strong, W. Swindell and Sergt. N. J. Anderson of the R. C. M. P. gave evidence. At the afternoon session defense counsel H. P. McPhee, K. C., and R. R. Bell reviewed the evidence for the defense. Crown prosecutor Shaw was summing up the case for the Crown when the controversy with the defense counsel arose over the evidence required to commit an accused to the higher court.

Constable Swindell in his evidence yesterday told that the bulbs in the Horgan car were of 32 candle power. Investigation after the fatal collision had revealed the "bright" filament in the left headlight was burned out although both "dim" filaments were in good order. Mr. Bell in reviewing the evidence for the defense told that under the Highway Traffic act 21 candle power was the maximum illuminating power permitted in each headlight.
