

Rheumatism no Part of Nature's Plan

She offers her healing herbs to stop suffering
When America was wilderness, Indians were using herbs successfully. From the Redmen, 50 years ago, James Gallagher learned the art of the Herbal Remedy. His famous Kidney Remedy has helped many a sufferer from Rheumatism.

SMILES

"Cold water is the most effective remedy for fire in the lumber region."

"Brown is always boasting about what his car can do on a hill."

He: Ma looks on me as a hero. She: That may be, but it strikes me zero would be better.

NOT TO BLAME
"What do you mean by coming home here half drunk?"
"That's my fault dear. My money ran out."

Men Marooned

By George Marsh

THE STORY
"Oh, yes! We're heeled, if you people should take the notion to try to run us out of the bay."

"Why, man! you've got as much right here as we have, but if you don't play straight, we'll run you out—that's all."

"That's what he claims. It's none of my business, but he's got it in for you, so don't blame us. He's working for us, of course, for the fur."

"A girl he claimed as his daughter came to Elkwan in June dying with typhoid," said Garth quietly.

"She couldn't travel—we took care of her till she died. He tried to hold me up—for stuff, I kicked him out, so he wants his revenge. Just tell him, Mr.—" "Skene," prompted the other.

"Just tell him for me, Mr. Skene, that I'll give him the dog if he shows up at the post. He knows that."

"Looks like a tough old veteran!" commented Skene, admiringly, glancing at the airhead, tense as a statue, hair and tail up, bristling at his stake.

"He is. He's an overseas man. He'd tear that Indian's throat out in one snap."

"There's another matter, too," continued Garth. "When your people came to Elkwan when we were down the coast, one of them—fellow with a black beard—tried something that will get him knifed if he shows up at the post again."

"Oh, you mean Black Breathe. He's sailing master—owns the schooner. I'm the mate. He's a bit rough, I'll admit, but don't make any mistake about who's boss. McDonald's running this party."

"That's why I'm asking you to tell McDonald that we won't stand for manhandling women on this coast," insisted Guthrie.

"Right-o, I'll tell him. Well, we'll be off," said the big sailor, offering his hand, which Garth shook. "I'm glad to meet a reasonable Hudson's Bay man and one who wasn't sitting snug on the bay when we had our backs to the wall in front of Amiens."

And as Garth stood pondering the remark, Skene turned and joining his men, walked to his boat with a limp. He, too, thought the man who watched, is wearing his service stripe. The sailors launched their boat in the rising tide, and poling it out to the deeper water, rowed away.

So the memory of Ninda was to be mumbled on evil tongues? The story was going out among the Crees that the factor of Elkwan had taken her from her family. It was the kind of tale only too readily believed. Judging from the coolness of Swan, the missionary, Quarrier, without doubt, had published it in Albany; soon it would be the property of the whole west coast. Poor, loyal Ninda! Then, the thought of one who had seen and understood came like a breath of clear air from the spruce. He saw her again, her heavy hair touched by the moonlight, her fine, dark eyes with the questioning look, as she said: "Good-by, Mr. Exile!"

The winter wood out, the geese sailed and cached, the whitefish platform groaning with the spoils of the news, which would not be lifted until the ice, Guthrie and Etienne sat in council of war.

"How many of our people are wintering on the island?" asked Garth. The half-breed closed his small eyes, his face contracted into a network of lines as he counted the families which had, through the summer, crossed the strait to hunt on the great island, instead of taking the river trail for the forest and muskies of the Elkwan headwaters. "We got twelve-fifteen hunter dere. Atawaplat and Kapiakau got more dan dat."

"That means a lot of fox pelts if the mice and rabbits are plentiful, and the litters came through the summer."

Etienne scowled. "We not get mooch of eet," he muttered. "Dem peopl, geeve de hunter bees price."

It was true. Cut off from the island until the ice set hard, as the post was, while the hunters could reach the schooner wintering at Seal Cove and get more for their fur, the outlook was indeed gloomy. But Garth had no idea of allowing these strangers to come into his territory and take the valuable fox trade of Akimiski away from him without a struggle.

While he remained in the employ of the company, he would give the best that he had of loyalty and service. His pride was involved; and as he searched for a solution of the problem with the presence of this schooner presented, the desire to beat this free-trader in his bold try for the priceless silver and black fox of Akimiski obsessed his thoughts.

OUCH! SIXTY THOUSAND FOR A SINGLE GEM
An emerald the size of a half-crown, was sold to a rich peeress by a Bond street London jeweler for $60,000. Henceforth this huge gem will glow on the ladies corsage, and in time become an heirloom.

Sixty thousand dollars for a single stone! A 120 carats of transparent green mineral. What display! What folly!

That is the snap opinion. But it is the practical truth that this great emerald has earned money for a hundred of simple workers and their dependents before slipping into her ladyship's jewel casket.

Many an office boy, clerk, typist and manager have already been drawing dividends from this scrap of treasure, should they be employed in one of the great insurance companies. Not only the dealers and the staffs who have dealt in the valuable stone or the cutters and polishers in the lapidary have already shared in the $60,000 paid by the lover of beautiful things, but all those excellent people who depend on Bond Street and its prestige for a livelihood.

LARGE GIFT TO NATIVE CITY

(Special to the Guardian)
GUELPH, Ont., Feb. 20.—Cities rear sons and send them out into the world to conquer. Often they do and sometimes the memories cling to the community of their youth. Guelph has been more than successful in rearing men who left home to go to fame, and has been especially well remembered by her sons who have become great. She has two great sons, now, Arthur W. Cutten and Edward Johnson, tenor. Both these men are perhaps known the world over, have held kindly thoughts towards the town of their boyhood. But nothing has been more munificent than the rumored gift of a million dollars in developments, a new municipal golf course and hotel to be built by Arthur Cutten whose spectacular career in the Chicago wheat pit has made unparalleled history in the world of finance. His total gift to the city will be thought total a million dollars or more.

It is thought probable that the first public announcement of Mr. Cutten's plan will be made today in connection with the visit to Guelph of members of the Ontario legislature. Four buses carrying M. P. F.s and members of the Ontario cabinet left Toronto this morning for the royal city. While the purpose of their visit is to inspect the Ontario agricultural college and the Ontario reformatory, it is understood the opportunity will be taken to look over the prospective golf course property which lies between the college and the reformatory grounds. The visitors will have luncheon at the O. A. C. Premier Ferguson is not with the party but it is thought that Hon. John S. Martin, minister of agriculture will make some official statement regarding Arthur Cutten's intentions.

Felt Different After Taking Two Boxes

Mrs. D. T. Wagner is Very Satisfied With Dodd's Kidney Pills

Nova Scotia Lady Was Bothered With Pains In Her Back.

Bear River East, N. S., Feb. 22.—(Special)—"For three years I was bothered with Kidney Trouble," writes Mrs. D. T. Wagner, a well-known resident of this place. "My back would get so lame and tired I could hardly straighten up. I decided to take Dodd's Kidney Pills and can say I felt very different after taking two boxes. I recommend these pills to all who suffer with their kidneys."

Ninety per cent. of the ills from which women suffer come from weak or diseased kidneys. They are the organs that strain all the impurities out of the blood. If they fail to do their work, the impurities remain in the blood and are deposited all over the body.

Weak kidneys are not confined to grown people. They are too often found in children, sowing the seeds of future ills unless the kidneys are strengthened and put in condition to do their full work.

Insidious Eye Strain

We use this adjective advisedly. Sufferers from Eye Strain may have perfect vision and therefore do not suspect the presence of any eye defect.

The motive power of the entire human organism is Nerve Energy.

Normal eyes, it is computed utilize about 20% of this Nerve Energy, but when Eye Strain is present, a much larger proportion is required. Hence defective eyes, through their consumption of an excessive amount of Nerve Energy may seriously affect the functioning of other organs of the body and produce ill health.
