Schools And Empire Brought Into Touch

LONDON, Sept. 16. (By the Canadian Press)—Schools and the Empire are again being brought into touch through the Public Schools Empire Tours Committee, which, with the support and encouragement of the High Commissioners for the Union of South Africa and for Southern Rhodesia, is organizing a party of schoolboys for a tour of South Africa and Rhodesia this coming winter. The boys will be between the ages of 17 and 19, and will start for Africa at the beginning of January next. The proposed tour has the warm support of the Dominions Office here as well as the Governor General of the Union of South Africa, the Earl of Clarendon.

M. J. Remdall, Chairman of the Public Schools Empire Tours Committee, a well known educationist and traveller, in a letter to the Times tells about the proposed tour as follows:

"The boys will cover more or less the same ground as the party which visited South Africa at the end of 1927, going and returning by the Union-Castle Line. After exploring Capetown and the Cape Province they will proceed to Pretoria, Johannesburg and Bulawayo running up to the Victoria Falls and Zim-babwe in the North and returning by Ladysmith and the Drakensberg Mountains in the east. They will stay on farms, getting an insight into country life as well as town social, political, financial and agricultural, with which South Africa is faced. They will return in April, 1932. The cost should be well within $750.

"The party will, it is intended, be in the hands of a public school master, assisted by an Army officer. The great attractions of South Africa should attract a group of boys who are worthy representatives of the best public schools."

Bishop Would Rebuild Church

(Canadian Press)
LONDON, Sept. 14—Bishop Bidwell, formerly Bishop of Ontario and now vicar of Sellinger, near Ashford, Kent, an agricultural parish consisting almost entirely of farmers and weekly wage earners, is appealing for help in raising $3,000 needed for essential structural repairs, including the re-roofing of the church, which has an early Norman tower and a late 13th century chancel. Dr. Bidwell says: "Possibly some of my old pupils at Leamington and Peterborough would be willing to come to the assistance of their old master. Also perhaps some of the many thousands of motorists who pass the church, which stands right on the London-Folkstone road between, Ashford and Hythe, and must know it by sight, will stop and visit it and give us some help."

Necklace Sewn To Back Of Evening Gown

NEW YORK, Sept. 15—Necklaces are used a great deal on afternoon dresses this season. They are sewed to the neckline at the back and are left free in the front fastened in this fashion, one of One dress features two necklaces white, the other of Chinese red carved beads. Heavy antique silver or gold chains are also used in this manner as the sole decoration of a costume. Sometimes a matching buckle is featured on the belt.

Suits and gowns this year are either classically plain or orientally rich in trimming. The former are enhanced by self drapings, intricate sleeve effects, cowl or scarf necklines, gathered or pleated fullness in the skirt. The latter feature incrustations on the bodice, deep fur collars, cuffs, hip and hem edgings, or silver embroidered crepe. Clips, buckles, buttons, ruchings of lace, edgings of fringe, and bows and sashes aid in enriching these garments.

Most of the coats are luxuriously trimmed with fur. One smart wrap has a scarf collar of three genuine sable skins. Another has two pointed fox scarfs for a collar and is worn with a huge square fox muff. Long evening wraps of velvet have cape collars touching the waistline of ermine or chinchilla.

One lace evening dress has mink hemming the skirt. Another of white satin has a deep brown fur hem and still another has great black fox cuffs on a matching satin jacket.

The separate blouse and skirt idea is as modish for evening as for informal occasions. A Parisian couturier uses crisp white taffeta for a saucy evening blouse worn with full black velvet skirt. White silk crepe, molded to the figure, is another, and the sheerest of chiffons with raised velvet figures, or with gold and bead embroidery, are also shown.

Even the little blouse worn to complement the new dinner suits of velvet or velvety-wool materials are designed of satin or crepe with puffed, bishop or leg-of-mutton sleeves, shirred ruffles, or fancy stitching. Lace blouses, too, are worn.

Black and white, still good for fall and winter, is presented in a new way in several evening gowns seen recently. One of shaded georgette has an entirely black bodice, but the skirt passes through every shade of grey until white is reached at the hem. A gorgeous lace frock has only the grey shading from smoke and pearl to a violet. A chiffon velvet gown with grey bodice shades to cream at the hem.

TRADE WITH ORIENT SHOWS BIG BOOST

OTTAWA, Sept. 15—A six fold increase in Canada's sales to Japan and a four fold increase in the exports to China all inside the last nine years, is reported by the ministry of trade and commerce. The world depression reduced the trade in 1930-31 but there is still a substantial balance of the trade in Canada's favor.

In competition with the United States for the Oriental trade, Canada has been steadily gaining ground. A decade ago American trade with China was fifty times that of Canada. Now it is not any more than 15 or 20 times. The trade with Japan was 23 times as great as Canada's and is now only 12 times.

In competition with the world Canada is also gaining ground. Ten years ago China only imported three tenths of one percent of her import goods from Canada. Now this is a full three per cent. Taking the whole of Asia, the former even balance of imports and exports has swung round so that Canada now has a favorable balance of trade of $12,000,000 while in 1929 when trade was normal, it was $54,000,000.

Toronto, Ont., Sept. 15—Hunters in Ontario may be allowed to bang away at ducks for the usual three months season this year. Ottawa has not yet notified the province of any decision to shorten the period. Information has come to provincial department of game and fisheries purporting to show that the supposed scarcity of ducks in the west was seized upon merely as an excuse for urging the authorities to cut down the season. According to this report ducks are more plentiful in Ontario than ever before. The season could not be shortened unless the provinces act in concert, officials say.
