BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

(By Thornton W. Burgess)
 What's in a name? That's up to you. Depending much on what you do. —Old Mother Nature.

He was a young Coyote who looked quite grown-up and felt as grown-up as he looked, even more so. Young folks just starting out for themselves in the Great World often do feel that way. Often it is the quickest way for them to learn how little they do know.
 He left the home where he was born because there no longer was room for him there. Not yet having found a place to suit him wherein to make a home of his own he was what is called foot-loose. Just wandering about with no one to tell him what to do or how to do it. When he was hungry there was no one to bring him food. He just kept right on being hungry until he found or caught a meal for himself. It is Old Mother Nature's way of teaching the young quickly the things they must learn in order to live.
 He was hungry now, the more so because he had just had a good dinner that he had been too sure of. It was Longfoot the Kangaroo Rat. Longfoot didn't mean to be anybody's dinner, but he had come very near to being the young

FALSE CARDS

Since, as a rule, a false-card has little, if any, effect on the opponents who over-indulge in this respect neither win nor lose. There are cases, however, in which the false-card is a vital maneuver. Today's deal is an example.

South dealer — Both sides vulnerable

♠ A Q 5 4	♥ 7 2	♦ K J 9 2	♣ K 4 3
♠ 10 7	♥ A J 9 5	♦ 6 5	♣ J 9 8 6
♠ 3	♥ 8	♦ 10 8 7 4 3	♣ A 10
♠ K 8 6 3	♥ 2	♦ Q 10 6 4	♣ 7 5 2

The bidding:
 South West North East
 1 ♠ Pass 3 ♠ Pass
 5 ♠ Pass Pass Pass

North would have been wiser to answer the opening bid with one spade, and South might have reached the lay down contract of three trumps.
 West hit upon the spade ten as his opening lead, and when the dummy appeared, declarer saw that his contract was in jeopardy. It was inconceivable that West would have led the ten from such a holding as king-ten with or without lower cards; thus, the spade king was marked off side, and if East got in he would very likely shift to hearts. Then, if the heart ace was wrong, the contract would be lost.
 South did what every fine player would do in his position — he put up dummy's spade ace and unhesitatingly dropped his jack on the trick! Then, without giving the enemy a chance to "get set" and appraise the situation too closely, South led a low spade from dummy.
 Perhaps East should have sensed what was going on—but he did not! There was no way of his knowing positively whether declarer's spade jack play had been honest or not—whether West had led the ten from 10-9-7. So East ducked—and declarer took the trick with the nine.
 Observe that if South had played the spade nine on the first trick, he would have marked himself with the jack, and then East could not have been in doubt when the second spade was led from dummy.
