IN MEMORIAM

MRS. DON. McDUGALL DIES AT AGE OF 79

Mrs. Donald McDougall, wife of Captain McDougall, Whitney Pier, Sydney, died at her home on Tuesday.

MISS ANNA MCEWAN

Seldom are we called upon to chronicle the death of a citizen, under more distressing circumstances, than that which occurred at Mount Stewart, on Wed. Dec. 25th.

Miss McEwan lived alone, and on the afternoon of Dec. 22nd, in some unaccountable manner, her clothing caught fire, burning her person so badly, that death came a week later to relieve her of further suffering.

She was attended through her affliction by kind neighbors and friends. She leaves to mourn a number of brothers and sisters in this Province, and elsewhere.

MR. G. A. GANE

It was with sincere sympathy that the news was received in this city of the death of Mr. G. A. Gane, who passed away at his home in New York.

The late Mr. Gane was formerly of New York, and for years past, he and Mrs. Gane have spent their summers in Charlottetown at their residence on the Esplanade, and also at Brockley Point at their summer home there.

During the time that Mr. Gane had remained in this city, he won the respect of all. Gentlemanly in his bearing, courteous and respectful in his manner, and at the same time reserved, yet he formed many friendships here, and his death will be widely and sincerely mourned.

MRS. W. H. MORROW

The death of Mrs. W. H. Morrow took place on December 24th, at the age of 47 years.

The deceased, whose maiden name was Hannah Jane Dingwell, daughter of the late William Dingwell of Little Pond, P. E. I., was married to the late number of years in New York City.

Almost a year and a half ago she contracted a serious disease, which necessitated several severe operations from which despite the very best of skill and nursing, her recovery delicate constitution never fully recovered.

Some months ago, on medical advice, accompanied by her husband and nurse she returned to her old home, in hopes that the change to her native land, where she always loved to be, and among old friends and surroundings, would recover her, but in spite of all that could be done, she finally passed away.

Deceased was of a quiet retiring disposition. The soul of honor, it did not seem possible, for her to think of making a claim, or do an unkind deed. Modest in the extreme, but possessed with a most wonderful ability to make lasting friendships among all with whom she came in contact.

Her frequent visits to her old home were eagerly looked forward to by her old friends, and she always kept in sweet remembrance.

Her many deeds of kindness will never be known till the recording angel reads them out of the book of life. Thoughtful and generous beyond measure she had left a void in many hearts which can never be filled, but they have the assurance that some day they shall meet her face to face, and know her as she is, where there is no more pain, sickness or sorrow and where God Himself shall wipe away all tears from their eyes.

She leaves to mourn besides a husband, a heart broken mother, who will sorely miss a loving daughter's care, also three sisters, Mrs. Hestia Howlette, Mrs. William H. Jenkins, Mrs. Isaac Howlette and one brother Charles and Annandale and Little Pond, besides a large number of friends and relatives in different parts of the province all of whom deeply mourn their loss.

Her remains were laid to rest in the quiet little cemetery near her old home, where after life's fitful fever she sleeps well.

Warm summer sunshine shines brightly here, Soft summer winds blow lightly here, White winter's snow be light, be light.

Good night, good heart, good night, good night.

and mud, still seems a puzzle to me. As the ship was to sail for Jamaica at noon, we were all on board in due time.

I might add that the languages spoken by the negroes are Spanish and French.

Kingston, Jamaica.

After a one night's sail, we arrived off Port Royal, Kingston harbor, Friday morning, April 1st, a run of 227 miles. The usual jokes of the morning in honor of all the fools were in order in the early morning, but soon passed away when the Landing Officer and the health officer came on board. The American Consul also took a prominent part and gave the ultimatum that every person aboard had to submit to vaccination, and that any person who should refuse, would not be permitted to land in any American port, not even to return to New York. As this refusal would prevent us from landing at Colon, Panama, St. Thomas, Port Rico or New York, we had no alternative, only to take our medicine, so we were given time for the operation before we arrived at Colon.

Although Jamaica lies but 90 miles from the southern shore of Cuba, the traveller who comes to it after a visit to Havana, finds himself in quite another world. But yesterday he was among people who spoke Spanish whose architecture was Spanish and whose home life was modeled on that of Spain.

In Jamaica the visitor finds himself in an outpost of Old England stationed in the midst of the northern Caribbean, where all the population, black and white (there is no middle ground) speak English with an old country accent that seems foreign to Americans.

From its situation Jamaica takes on the importance of a strategic base for it dominates the approaches to the Panama Canal.

The largest harbor is that of Kingston, the finest in the West Indies. Kingston is a very beautiful city, and the streets have a clean and sanitary appearance. It has an area of 18 square miles, of which about seven square miles has a depth of from five to seven fathoms, or enough to accommodate large ships.

Physically the island, with lofty peaks and heavily wooded slopes, with bold shores, high vegetation, deep harbors and snow white towns, is as striking as one might wish to see in a year's voyaging.

Vegetation is luxuriant, and beautiful, with a profusion of ferns, feathery bamboo and similar subtropical growths bordering tag many streams, and coconut palms in abundance. There is also teeming bird life and numerous humming birds are to be seen flitting about amidst shrubs and flowers on every hand. Mocking birds may be heard in full song here, and there is an endless variety of more ordinary species.

Jamaica is the third largest island in the West Indies, Cuba and Hispaniola being larger. It is a peak in a mighty chain of submerged mountains, which measured from the deep-sea plain on which they stand, are higher than any range in North America or Europe.

The island is 144 miles long by 19 wide. It is very mountainous, its highest point, Blue Mountain Peak, being 7360 feet above the sea. Naturally there is a copious rain fall, the distinctly wet months being May and October. In the winter there are no continuous downpours, although there may be heavy showers, sometimes of several hours' duration. But they usually give ample warning of their coming and travelers can find shelter. A wetting is always to be avoided by persons who are unacclimated.

Climatic conditions vary in the island with each particular district or altitude, but as a rule the variation in temperature is neither violent or great.

"Broadly speaking," says a local authority, "fine, cloudless mornings, chequered cloud at noon, fine sunny evenings and bright nights constitute the daily weather with regularity all the year round, interrupted only by the rainy seasons."

Tropical fruits of all kinds are in abundance, and business is brisk. The languages are Spanish and English, and a great number speak French. The predominant race is negro, while there are a great number of Spanish. The government is ruled by English officials, and they are a contented people.

On all sides of the roadways we see planted different kinds of palm trees. Such fruit as cocoanut's, grape fruit and bananas all grow on palm trees which are rather tall (except the banana palm) and the trunks are bare of branches or leaves until near the top, where a thick growth of palm leaves crops out. At the base of these leaves is where the fruit forms in thick clusters. Sugar and cotton, tobacco and coffee are the staple crops, and as they usually have about three or four crops in one year in all those tropical countries, and all those produced with a small amount of labor and living so cheap, you can have a little idea as to the quantities that can be produced. I have noticed that the negroes in the sugar industry, live to some extent on the raw sugar waste, which is quite sweet and palatable.

The natives are neat and fairly well dressed, and the girls have adopted the bunches-of-hair-style over the ears as much as the curls will permit. They have a fairly good system of education and the pupils who acquire some ambition are as bright as other boys. One school which was given great praise for the good it was doing, is the convent school run by the colored nuns. I do not know what supports them, perhaps the government, but they are continually, as far as they can accommodate them, picking up boys from the street and also the little girls, and they always turn them out as good examples for the others of their race.

The product of rum is one of their industries, and I might here say that although every place of business, every saloon and restaurant and hotel has it exposed for sale, and you can buy it at 80 cents a quart, in all my travels in those countries, I never saw but only one man whom I noticed staggering on the street. We stayed in Kingston 38 hours and started for Colon on Saturday, the 2nd of April.

Murdock Gives Marching Orders to Unemployment

OTTAWA, Jan. 14.—Unemployment parades, "originating through the misunderstanding of workmen out of employment of the suggestion of concern of interests who desire to force upon contracts will not bring any 'chasty or improper' either in the matter of recommending the issuance of contracts, or in awarding what may be necessary and improper contracts during the closing days of their authority," on the part of the Department of Labor, says a statement issued tonight by Howard Murdock, Minister of Labor.
