CROCODILE JEWEL BOX die, formed the walking costume of a missing native woman. The huge inside a crocodile, 15 feet long shot reptile had also swallowed a pair of K. Lee Guinness, the racing motor-tyres earrings, a bead of a pattern knit, in the Gambia River, West Africa which had been out of fashion for years, were found eight long rows of 150 years, a jam jar and the neck leads, which, when worn with a girl of a bottle.

The Imported Registered Clydesdale Stallion Craigenflower 25395—21194 will stand for service at the Agricultural Hall, Charlottetown, for the season of 1930.

This big, stylish, brown horse has the quality, substance and action necessary in a high class sire.

At the Ottawa Show, shortly after an ocean voyage, Craigenflower stood next to Lascelles, the grand champion at the Canadian National Exhibition, 1929. Expert horse judges pronounce him one of the best stallions in Canada.

This splendid stallion, sired by the popular Auchencroft (12007) and out of a dam by the World famous Baron of Buchlyvie (9958) proved a successful sire in Scotland where he commanded a wide patronage at fee of $25.00.

The breeding and quality of this horse is of the very choicest, and owners of mares should give him an inspection before breeding.

Terms $12.00 cash or $15.00 on approved notes due November 15th, 1930.

—SUDDEN DEATH OF CAPTAIN SUTHERLAND—Captain Sutherland of Starley Bridge died very suddenly on Monday morning at 81 years of age. The deceased had risen that morning apparently in his usual health. He went out into the yard shortly afterwards and dropped dead. Death was due to heart failure. Captain Sutherland was born in New London and belonged to a Scottish family who settled down in New London many years ago. He was a retired sea captain and had travelled round the world in the old sailing days many times. After he retired he settled at Starley Bridge with his nephew, Mr. Ernest McEwen, and became an outstanding farmer and rancher. He was a very fine citizen of irreproachable character. His sudden death has cast a gloom over the community. There are left to mourn his widow, who is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. William McEwen, to whom The Guardian extends a sincere sympathy. The funeral was held on Tuesday afternoon
