The Pictured True Story of the Sole Survivor of Half a Million Armenian Girls

AURORA MARDIGANIAN HERSELF

She is the Armenian beauty who escaped to America after two years of unspeakable adventures in the hands of Kurdish Raiders, Slave Markets and Turkish Harems. Although the newspapers have given her story pages of space, the National Committee chose the screen as the most vivid medium of bringing home to the American people what their Christian sisters endured in ravished Armenia. The resultant screen epic has been truly called Chubson was very keen on his newly purchased farm and wanted to increase his stock. So he bought some pigs before his new sty was quite ready.

time and do something. But I told him in no time as on Saturday afternoons there wasn't nobody where to do nothing now. He said in that case he refused your acceptance of the job he's not giving you, cause he makes nothing of any one who does anything when never expected

Have you noticed how high it is? Ellen shook her head. "I don't know as I have." Medora moved away, leaving Ellen alone with the red poplin. A salesgirl who had an eye on the bargain table, came forward.

because you were so crazy about it. You've bought every red remnant this town has sold for the last dozen years. You know you have, mother and I've worn them. And I look like a sick cat in red. Meddy Moffet always says so. It takes dark of Mr. and Mrs. Norma Chapman, who was almost instantly killed when he fell off a wagon driven by his father.

"Now," said the house decorator to his new and young assistant at noon on Saturday, "you have finished your work for the week. But if you'll stay and mind the shop for a minute while I go out I'll give you an extra quarter. Don't forget any messages or orders and be sure you understand them."

Among the many amusing stories told by Sir Thomas Lipton is one concerning a Scotsman who went to a horse race for the first time in his life. The old fellow was rather feeble-minded, and his companions who took him to the race meeting presently persuaded him to stake a sixpence in the third race on a forty-to-one shot. By some miracle this outsider won. When the bookmaker gave the old man his winnings he could hardly believe his eyes.

"All the way home she planned the making of the dress. Ellen's hair was small and gray, on a quiet street, a neat house outwardly which was as her husband would have it but within her love of decoration made it seem a trifle messy.

Ellen was not a shrewd woman, but when she looked at the window Olive it came to her that Medora was still up to her old tricks, and that she as manipulating her daughter's affairs with the same adroitness with which she had manipulated her own. She drew a deep breath and something began to burn within her.

ANCIENT ORIGIN OF MODERN TOOLS Much Neglected—Mechanical Side of Human History. The story of the mechanical aids of human history has been much neglected. The ancients have described the implements of the primitive, yet no one has mentioned the tools that curved these flinty columns. We naturally suppose that our present day tools have the better forms than those of past ages. There is true in this, but not always.
