Decide That Loss Of Novadoc "Act Of God"

(By The Canadian Press)
OTTAWA, Oct. 14.—A formal investigation into the sinking of the Canadian merchant vessel Novadoc off the coast of Maine last March with the loss of all 94 hands, has pronounced the tragedy an "act of God." C. P. Edwards, Deputy Transport Minister, announced today.
The investigation was undertaken by Mr. Justice W. F. Carroll of the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia and Judge in Admiralty for Nova Scotia. The report was concurred in by the three assessors: Capt. Rowland Forbes of Barrington, N.S., Capt. Robert A. Goudy of Yarmouth, N.S., and Mrs. A. S. J. Hall of Toronto.
The formal investigation, carried out under the provisions of the Canada Shipping Act of 1934, reported that the hull and machinery of the Novadoc were in satisfactory condition, that the vessel was equipped with all necessary fittings to ensure safety, and that the vessel was properly manned.
The ship was lost "during a very heavy gale of hurricane force with heavy seas running, and whether she sank or ran on a shoal, there was no control the master could exercise and the loss must be considered due to an act of God," the report said.
It added that "the loss of the Novadoc was not caused or contributed by the wrongful act or default or negligence of her owners, charterers or any other persons."
When the ship sailed from Deep Brook, N.S., on March 1 bound for New York with a cargo of 3,860 tons of crude gypsum, the winds were light and the weather fine.
At 11:18 a.m. March 2 storm warnings were broadcast by radio to all shipping. At 2:17 a.m. March 3 when off the coast of Maine the vessel sent out a message to the effect that one of the hatches had been stove in and that the vessel had shipped quite a bit of water and was running before the wind to keep it down. U.S. Coast Guard vessels went to the rescue, followed by diligent air and surface operations but no trace of the vessel or her crew was ever found.

Sixty-two 'Witnesses' Begin Terms In Jail

(By M. N. Negru)
MONTREAL, Oct. 15.—(CP)—Sixty-two men and women, adherents of the Witnesses of Jehovah, today gave themselves up to the custody of the recorder's court and went to the cells so their bail bondsman could be freed of his surety for eight of their number.
The bondsman, Frank Roncarelli, wealthy former restaurateur, earlier had been turned down by the court when he sought lifting of a $10,000 bail bond lien against his mid-town Crescent Street property, in order to complete sale, by surrendering the eight Witnesses.
Recorder Roland Paquette ruled that Roncarelli, whose liquor licence was cancelled early this year because of his support to the sect, had freely and voluntarily subscribed the property bond. To cancel it now would be to diminish guarantees in more than 300 other cases in which Roncarelli had furnished personal bond.
The cases, involving more than 100 Witnesses, are part of about 1,200 similar ones before the municipalities in which the charge of distribution of literature without a permit from the city.
Recorder Paquette, however, granted a subsequent motion presented by A. L. Stein, counsel for Roncarelli, to render into custody all the Witnesses for whom the restaurateur had gone surety or provided cash bail for those not surrendered.
Of these, 62 disciples of the sect, including the original four men and four women, lined up against the wall of the courtroom as their names were called. Mr. Stein said they all voluntarily had shown up on a phone call from Roncarelli, who described himself to newspapermen as a Jehovah's Witness and a Bible student.
Recorder Paquette ordered them admitted to the cells and declared the property and personal bond subscribed by Roncarelli in all their cases wiped out.
The men and women, about evenly divided in number, filed calmly out of the little courtroom. The men were taken to Bordeaux Jail and the women to Fullum Street Jail for women.
Among them was a one-armed man; another carried a bandaged arm in a sling and a third wore a hearing-aid apparatus.
The ages of all ranged from the early twenties to the fifties. It was expected new bail arrangements would be made tomorrow.

W. Crawford-Frost Sale Outstanding

The following article will be of particular interest to stock breeders here as W. Crawford-Frost is the son of the late Rev. Crawford-Frost, for some years rector of St. Paul's Anglican Church, Charlottetown. His mother was formerly Miss Constance Ings, sister of the late Col. A.E. Ings of Charlottetown.

On the broad acres of the historic old "25" ranch west of Nanton, Alberta, where the foothills start reaching for the Rockies more than 700 stockmen from all parts of the country gathered yesterday for the purebred Hereford cattle auction held by W.A. Crawford-Frost, one of Alberta's foremost breeders of white-faces.

A record aggregate of $42,320 was set as 77 head of purebred Hereford cows, heifers, and calves went under the hammer in a four-hour event which saw the big crowd stay to the finish despite the chill breeze which swept down the coulees, bringing with it traces of snow and sleet.

Only a percentage of the large crowd in the ring was spirited on every offering—but many of them came for a glimpse of the magic behind the meteoric rise of Arthur Crawford-Frost, the Alberta breeder who is recognized as one of Canada's leading livestock men.

They had scanned the record which showed that for the past three years, his best three bulls have topped the dollar sale at the famous Calgary spring bull show.

They wanted to know how he did it, and they got the answer in part when they saw the finely-bred top quality cows and heifers which were led through the sales ring yesterday. There was 26 years of intensive and sagacious breeding behind development of the Crawford-Frost herd of Herefords, and those who bought breeding stock at yesterday's auction, were purchasing not only quality livestock, but the years of study and labor which had resulted in the herd reaching the top-flight of Canadian livestock endeavor.

The crowd was not confined to Hereford cattle breeders by any means.

There were breeders of pure-bred Shorthorn cattle and Aberdeen Angus cattle at the ringside, and there were many there who had never owned a cow in their lives and never expected to own one.

There were bankers, lawyer, doctors, insurance agents, wheat farmers, sheep breeders, hog raisers, horse breeders in the crowd and one party of four drove all the way from Edmonton, "just to see the cattle."

Mr. and Mrs. Crawford-Frost made everyone welcome whether they came in the role of a prospective buyer or spectator. They were hosts to the huge crowd at a barbecue luncheon which included prime roast beef and beans, two kinds of salad, pie, cake, and coffee, and appetites, sharpened by the cool weather, soon made short work of the big spread.

The weather was below the freezing mark when Auctioneers Allen Baker of Cayley and Warren Cooper of Nanton knocked down the first offering at 1:20 o'clock, but from there on until 6 o'clock, there wasn't a dull moment.

Highest price of the sale was recorded when L.L. Atkinson of Claresholm paid $1,669 for a two-year-old heifer and royal breeding and then W.C. Scott of Nanton paid $1,675 for an upstanding young 4 re.

A March calf by Silver Standard out of Fanchion who was by Prince Domino the Ninth brought $1,300 and the cow then sold for $800.

Jim Cole of Drumheller then paid $1,125 for a yearling feisty by Pine Coulee Real Domino 12th out of Allsa Standard who was by Silver Standard.

Ed Hehr of Midnapore paid $1,025 for a bull calf born on April 3 and sired by Pine Coulee Real Domino 12th out of Blossom Stanway D sired by Pine Coulee Real Domino 12th out of Marlene, a famous breeding cow, went for $1,900.
