It was always my favorite!

"You find REGAL best? So did I. It was always my favourite, and with six hungry children to feed I did a lot of baking in my day. Always gave them plenty of good home-baked bread, made with REGAL. They thrived, and I saved—for I never had a poor batch of bread all the years I used it."

Crowning of Queen Elizabeth

Many changes will be necessary in the arrangements for the Coronation at Westminster Abbey in May as a result of the abdication of King Edward VIII. For ten months preparations had been going ahead for the Coronation of a bachelor King—one set of regalia, one chair of estate, one crown.

Now the royal regalia for the new Queen Elizabeth, the Queen's chair of estate and the crown—with its famous Koh-i-noor diamond—are required and Peereses will have to wear coronets.

Head Anointed

There is little doubt that the Coronation of Queen Elizabeth will be in accordance with historic precedent and will follow on the lines of the coronation of Queen Mary a quarter of a century ago.

The solemn and sacred rite of anointing with holy oil will be performed by the Archbishop of Canterbury. The Queen Consort kneels before the altar to be crowned and anointed. She is anointed upon the head only, whereas the King is anointed on the head, breast, and palms of each hand.

If no changes are made in the usual ceremony, Queen Elizabeth will rise from her chair of estate, and, supported on either side by her two bishops, advance to her faldstool to kneel there while the Archbishop prays over her.

The Queen will then move to another faldstool for the anointing ceremony beneath the same magnificent golden pall which is held over the King during his anointing.

For the Queen the pall is held by four Ladies-in-Waiting. The Dean of Westminster will hand to the Archbishop the holy oil which has been poured from the ampulla—a vessel in the form of a golden eagle—into the anointing spoon, and the Primate will then anoint the Queen upon the crown of the head.

The Archbishop will then place the Queen's ring, encrusted with jewels, upon the fourth finger of her right hand. Next will follow the rite of placing the Queen's crown upon Her Majesty's head by the Archbishop.

At that moment the Peereses will raise their own coronets and place them upon their heads.

Return to Throne

Finally, the Archbishop will put the sceptre into the Queen's right hand, and the ivory rod—on which is a dove with folded wings—into her left hand.

Having been thus anointed and crowned, the Queen will rise from the altar, and supported by her bishops, and followed by her train-bearers, return to her throne, making her obeisance to the King as she passes him.

Their Majesties, after the anointing and crowning ceremonies, will return together to the altar steps, where, kneeling upon fald stools they will remain side by side throughout the Communion service, supported by their bishops, and their crowns held on cushions beside them.

A Man Who is Slovenly Dressed is Headed for the Down-and-Out Club, But His Wife Can Help Him Climb Back by Giving Attention to His Appearance

Dear Miss Dix—I notice that a number of your women correspondents complain of their husbands' slovenly personal appearance and ask what they can do about it. Well, here is a practical tip I hand them: The wife can take away her husband's soiled shirt at night, replacing it with a clean one with all the buttons on it. If she is a good budgeteer and does not spend all her income on her own clothes, she can get him an extra suit and keep it pressed and clean. Same way about buying him another pair of shoes which she can keep always shined and heeled. Women have for ages fought for a fifty-fifty equality with men, but many a wife who helps spend her husband's income does very little toward earning it. A wife who is a real helpmate should be able to keep her husband looking neat without nagging. Incidentally it is possible that the man, knowing himself sartorially perfect, will automatically gain self-confidence and succeed better in his undertakings.

Answer:

I agree with you that a woman who is married to a slovenly man will wear and tear on her nerves and temper by constituting herself his valet. There are two things that you cannot agree with. One is indolence and the other is the matter of refinement. If a man would rather wear a soiled shirt than go to the trouble of putting a button on a clean one, and if there is no inner urge in his soul toward cleanliness, there isn't any use in wasting words upon him.

All that such a man's wife can do is to be personally repulsed by his need of a bath, shave and a haircut and publicly humiliated by his looking like a scarecrow that she is ashamed to acknowledge belongs to her, or to take your suggestion and automatically prevent him from wearing the wrong things by providing him with what the well-dressed man is wearing.

I'll admit that having to lay out all of papa's clothes every day—and wash behind his ears, comb his hair, shine his shoes and see that he has a clean handkerchief is going to add considerably to the work of a woman but at any rate it will make papa a lot easier on her eyes and give him a better standing in the community.

Perhaps save his job for him, for slouches don't rate high with the beholders who rightly conclude that a man who is too lazy to polish his shoes and press his trousers wouldn't display much energy about any work that called for effort.

However, I hate to think of wives having to become valets in addition to being cooks, nurses, scrub women, laundresses, seamstresses, social secretaries, purchasing agents and whatnot as they already are.

For unlike my correspondent, it is not my observation that the average married woman does little toward earning her board and keep and had just as well add keeping her husband clean to her repertoire as not. All the wives of poor men and of men in moderate circumstances that I have known have worked twice as hard as their husbands. No thirty-hour weeks for them. No Saturday and Sunday holidays. And they didn't have time even to keep their own hair curled, to say nothing of fussing with hubby's.

But about one thing my correspondent is right. It does pep any man up, give him fresh courage and more self-confidence to be shaven and shorn and properly dressed. The man who looks like a down-and-out is headed for the scrap pile.

Dear Dorothy Dix—I am a girl of 19. I have been going with a boy for about five months with whom I am very much in love, but he has tired of me. He still comes to see me as often as he used to, but he has changed. I can see that he doesn't love me any more. He only calls me on the phone because I ask him to. Judging from the way he acts I can see that he wants to be rid of me, but is ashamed to do so and is waiting for me to make the break. Every time I ask him what is the matter all he says is, "Nothing." What should I do? BONNIE.

Answer: Break the affair off at once. The boy is giving you a chance to save your face. Take it. You've lost him anyway, so make the best of your bad bargain by giving him the air instead of waiting to be openly jilted.

No woman ever commits a greater folly than trying to hold on to the man who is tired of her and wants to be rid of her. It is a hopeless undertaking and only prolongs the agony, for sooner or later he will go anyway and the quicker and cleaner she makes the break the better for all concerned.

Why a man ceases to love the girl he has once been crazy about, he does not even know himself. It is nothing she did or left undone. It is just that he loses his taste for her. The little tricks and manners that he thought so cute pall upon him. Her chatter that he thought so fascinating bores him. Her caresses leave him cold. Once he thought her beautiful. Now he doesn't even look good to him. What he felt for her is all over. Done. Finished.

It is just one of those inexplicable changes of taste that we have all experienced—when the dishes of which we could once never get enough sicken us, when the amusements we were once so keen about lose all of their thrill and the people whose society we used to enjoy become tedious beyond all bearing.

Nothing is so dead as a dead love. Bury it and forget it. Beat the boy who is tired of you to the parting of the ways and be comforted by the fact that at 19 broken hearts heal without even leaving a scar.

Dear Miss Dix—A man of 73 and his wife have lived happily together until a few weeks ago when his son-in-law asked the wife to come and live with them, leaving the old man alone out on a farm. The son-in-law has a nice car and puts it at the disposal of his mother-in-law and she refuses to stay in the country with her husband any longer. The old man blames his son-in-law for breaking up his home and claims that his wife took all of their furniture except a bed and a stove. What should he do? A FRIEND.

Answer: Evidently it is the automobile that was the lure that seduced the old wife away from her husband. If he wants her back he had better buy a car. Life in the country is dull for a woman without any way to get about, but in any event she will come home if he will just wait. Women who have had their own homes get mighty sick and tired of living in another woman's home, even if it is their daughter's.

The HOUSEWIFE and HER ACTIVITIES

THE NEW YEAR

A flower unblown; a book unread; A tree with fruit unharvested; A path untrod; a house whose rooms Lack yet the heart's divine perfume;

Oh, may this flower unfold to you Visions of beauty sweet and new; This book on golden pages trace; You sacred joys and deeds of grace; May all the fruit of that strange tree Luscious and rosy-tinted be; This path through fields of knowledge go; This house with love's content o'er-flow;

This landscape glitter with the dew Of blessed hopes and friendships true; This fountain's living crystal cheer As fall the springs that once were dear; This casket with such gems be stored As shine in lives that love the Lord.

—Horatio Nelson Powers

Woman is a sieve for secrets. Forget yourself and other people won't. If a man wasn't chicken-hearted, he wouldn't be henpecked. The girl dying to be loved prefers being squeezed to death. Those who always demand their own way don't weigh much with other people. It's all right to begin at the bottom provided the bottom doesn't drop out. Little business hates big business until little business grows in to big business. Confess on might be good for the soul but few people care to try the experiment. The fellow who looks for a girl who is hungry for love usually finds one who is just plain hungry. Perhaps the diva's Slumber Song is too effective when the audience goes to sleep during the first verse.

BRIDE'S VEIL OF SAME MATERIAL AS HER GOWN

Recent Paris brides have discarded the traditional tulle veil for one of the same material as the wedding gown itself. The new tendency in bridal gowns is toward severe, nun-like simplicity in line. Dresses of maroon crepe are cut like a robe with a high, unadorned neckline that comes well up on the throat. The simple bodice is fitted closely to the figure, the waist is well defined, the hips are moulded. The bias-cut skirt, however, swoops out from the hips in full folds that flare outward in back to a long train that is a part of the dress itself.

GLOXINIA CULTURE

Gloxinia bulbs may be started from a leaf? The bulb will form just where the leaf is separated from the plant. Take the leaf and stem and put in a thin glass (in soft water), and place in a well-lighted window; and plant when the bulb is the size of your finger. The process is so interesting and the gloxinia is such a beautiful plant!

THIS AND THAT

The Astrology Prediction for 1937 is as follows: The general economic outlook for America during the year 1937 is good. The average citizen is going to fare well. There will be a boom in real estate. There will be no recurrence of last year's disastrous drought, which star-augurs believe was caused by an excess of ultra-violet radiation from the sun. There will be no European war for at least one year. Not bad eh?

A Morning Smile

She (trying on fur coat): Isn't it just too sweet, dear? He: No—it's just too dear, sweet.

Old Lady: "I want some cigarettes for my nephew." "Certainly, madam," said the tobacconist. "What particular brand does he smoke?" "Oh, dear," said the old lady. "I really forget the name, but it's the one advertisements speak of so highly."

FINE GADGET, OPINES SCOTTY, AS HE RIDES HIGH AND DRY

An ingenious way to keep her underling Scotty out of the mud is that adopted by this fair Parisian, who totes him in a hand-grip rig across the city's slushy streets. And he seems to enjoy the ride, too. Once out of the mire, Scotty is set down and trots along dry shod until they reach another muddy crossing.

THE COOK'S CORNER

COCONUT MACAROONS.

Macaroons—just the old-fashioned kind that are nothing more than a very sweet meringue with coconut and flavoring folded in—remain ever popular members of the great group of little cakes people like to serve at parties or to round out family meals.

Yet long as these dainty bites have been offered at tea parties and made by mothers of households who believe in giving pleasure in such simple ways to their family, there are still new enrolments in the great roster of cooks, people who wouldn't know just how to set about making coconut macaroons themselves.

To them we dedicate the following recipe:
3 egg whites
1-8 teaspoon salt
1 cup powdered or fruit sugar
1-2 teaspoon vanilla or almond extract

For Bad Winter Coughs, Mix This Remedy at Home

Quick Relief. Big Saving. So Easy. No Cooking.

This well known recipe is used by many thousands of housewives, because they have found that it gives them a much more dependable remedy for distressing winter coughs. It's so easy to mix—a child could do it.

From any drugist, get 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex, a compound containing Norway Pine, in concentrated form, well known for its effect on throat membranes. Then make a syrup by stirring two cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments, until dissolved. It's no trouble at all, and takes but a moment. No cooking needed. Put the Pinex into a 16 oz. bottle and add your syrup. This gives you 16 ounces of cough remedy, unusually quick-acting and dependable, and you get four times as much cough medicine for your money. It never spoils, and is very pleasant—children love it. You'll be surprised by the way it takes hold of severe coughs, giving quick, satisfying relief. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes, and helps clear the air passages. Money refunded if it doesn't please in every way.
