LONDON—Navy and white dresses with white details and black suits with piped jackets were among the smartest fashions at the morning private view at the Royal Academy. The younger element particularly, often completing the costume with white flower hats and white or navy accessories. Coats were more generally worn than suits. The types range from woolen redingotes, with deep violet blues registering second to navy, to collarless short-sleeved silk coats.

High Court Judge Now Grows Straw Grows Strawberryberries

Forced by the German Gestapo to leave their home in Salzburg, Austria, Kurt Soelling (RIGHT) and his wife (LEFT) are beginning life anew on a farm they bought near Minden, Ont. As chauffeur and cook, the two worked in Toronto a year to be able to purchase the farm for strawberry growing. Before Hitler came to power, Soelling was a high court judge. This view (CENTRE) through the window of his home in Salzburg shows the Obersalzberg hills, where Der Fuehrer has his hideout. The couple believe they were driven from their home because Hitler doesn't like close neighbors.

Three Women Honored By Dalhousie

HALIFAX, N. S., May 14 (CP)—Three women, distinguished in law, work, public affairs and medicine, were admitted to the honorary degree of doctor of laws at Dalhousie University's convocation today. The convocation broke University precedent, only one woman having been so honored before in Dalhousie's 122 years of continuous teaching.

The purple hoods of the honorary doctor of laws were draped about the shoulders of Mrs. Agnes Dennis, O. B. E., Halifax, and Dr. Jennie MacKenzie of P. Q., N. S. The degree was conferred upon Miss Catherine E. Carmichael of New Glasgow, N. S., in absentia. The only other woman to have been honored by Dalhousie was the late Dr. Eliza Ritchie.

More than 170 degrees and diplomas were awarded by Dalhousie. Dr. Carleton Stanley, University president, said in his address to graduates that now, more than ever, University men must assert the faith that is in them.

Freetown And Vicinity

Miss Doris Jardine spent some days in Summerside recently where she was the guest of her sister, Mrs. Frank Cameron.

Several of the school children have been confined to their home with a severe cold which seems to be prevalent in the district. It is pleasing to note that the young Misses Joan Seales, Edna Evans, Catherine Auld and Maester Robert Schurman are all recuperating and able to be out again after their illness.

All are glad to learn of Mrs. Clayton Smith's rapid recovery and of her return to her home.

It is to be hoped that Mr. Anstin Seales who is at present confined to his home will soon be able to be about again.

Miss Emma Alice MacLennan, Mrs. Arthur Haslam and Mr. Edilson MacLennan of Charlottetown were visitors to Freetown on Saturday.

Rev. Samuel Profit and Mrs. Profit and two children, of Sussex, New Brunswick, are the welcome guests of Mr. and Mrs. John Profit.

Mr. and Mrs. John Jardine were called to Bradabane on Friday. Mrs. Jardine's niece is seriously ill and her many friends in this community wish her a speedy recovery to good health.

Mr. and Mrs. Colby Lewis accompanied by Miss Edna Lewis were visitors to Carleton last week.

Mr. Everett Andrews has returned home from the P. R. County Hospital and he is much improved in health.

The many friends of Miss Margaret Stewart, and formerly of Freetown, will be glad to know that she is enjoying good health this season and hopes to be able to visit Freetown again this summer.

When ironing children's smocked dresses, the toe of the iron should be taken as far as the lowest garters, but never over the embroidery, thus the beauty and the elasticity of the work long outlasts the garment itself.

It has been estimated that fences on New York state farms alone require 100,000,000 fence posts.

Reports Record Sales Canadian Oil

John Irwin
President of Canadian Oil Companies Limited, who states that sales of this Company's products for the first four months of this year reached an all-time high. This increase follows a large-scale program of development initiated by Mr. Irwin on his election to the presidency a year ago.

or the girl friend on the safe side of the altar, on the other side you find you are married to a perfect stranger.

So marriage is bound to be a gamble. It is never a safe thing, and maybe that is one of the reasons why we all want to try it. The very uncertainty of it fires our sporting blood.

But you are right in saying that you can take a lot of the risk out of marriage by making out your mate with your head as well as your heart and taking a few of the hurdles beforehand instead of waiting to jump them all after marriage, when it is forever too late to find out that you and Sweetums think differently about everything under the sun.

The main thing to consider in marriage is congeniality. As long as you are sure of the same tastes and habits, like the same kind of cooking and enjoy the same jokes they are safe.

The subject of mixed marriages is certainly one that should be set aside. It is never a safe thing, and maybe that is one of the reasons why we all want to try it. The very uncertainty of it fires our sporting blood.

I think that people of different religious faiths should never marry if either one is particularly devoted to his or her own church. If they do, they are sure to trouble over the children, if not over one trying to force the other one into his or her creed.

It is much better, as a general thing, for people to marry in their own faith. There are plenty of other things for married couples to fight over besides religion.

Of course, there are exceptions to this rule and there are many mixed marriages that are peaceful and happy, but this only happens when both parties are broad and tolerant, just and fair. It is certainly ironical that religion, which is the gospel of love, should be one of the bitterest controversies in the world.

Lonely Widower Always Pathetic

Dear Miss Dix—When a middle-aged man's wife dies, the greatest loss—the husband or the wife?

Answer: I think that in such a case the one who suffers the most is the one who loved the most. Sometimes the death of a husband or wife is not a tragedy, but the emancipation of the one who is left.

There are many men who have endured with heroic fortitude the nagging and tempers of wives who have made their lives hell on earth.

There are many women who for twenty-five or thirty years have been ground beneath the heels of tyrannical husbands, who have been humiliated by unfaithful ones and who have been bedeviled and insulted by tightwads. We all know plenty of cases like these, and we have seen these wretched widows and widowers suddenly regain their youth and cheerfulness and even their health after their tormentors passed away.

However, I take it you are speaking of the husbands and wives who loved each other and were happy together, but even in such cases one kisses and one permits himself or herself to be kissed, as the French say. And so it is the one who kissed who is left desolate when the lips he or she loved are cold in death.

The money question also figures in this discussion. If the couple are poor and their only income consists of the earnings of the husband and if the wife has no trade or profession by which she can support herself, then her loss is greater than the man's, because she often has to add dire poverty or dependence to her grief, whereas the man still has a job and his income and his usual comforts.

A man also finds it easier to re-marry than a woman does. The Bible is full of promises to widows, but none to widowers, probably on the ground that a widower can console himself if he wants to do so.

But, somehow, a lonely old widower always seems more pathetic than a widow, because a woman seems better able to fit herself into other people's houses than a man does and because women have their little activities and knitting and clubs and church work that fill up their time and give them interests when they are retired from active life, whereas men in such circumstances never seem to know what to do with themselves. Canadian Oil Sales Record Sharp Gains

MONTREAL, May 15—Showing sharp increases over last year, sale of products of Canadian Oil Companies Limited, were higher, both in dollars and in volume, during the first four months of 1940, than in any corresponding period in the company's history, according to a statement made by John Irwin, President of the company, in an interview here today.

"Business to date this year has been excellent," said Mr. Irwin, "and as we are now in the process of introducing several new products to the Canadian public, we look for further increases as the year progresses."

Quoted as to construction activities with which the company is at present proceeding, Mr. Irwin replied that these include large scale improvements and alterations to the refinery at Petrolia, Ontario; the erection of additional storage tanks for the storage of crude oil and gasoline; and the laying of a new 17-mile pipe-line from the refinery to Froomfield from the company's water-port on the banks of the Ottawa River.

"To the best of my knowledge," said Mr. Irwin, "this is the first pipe-line construction undertaken in Eastern Canada in many years. The money which we are spending on this and other projects indicates our confidence in the future of the oil industry in this country. I might also add that work on the modernization of our marketing outlets, laid out according to a well defined plan, is steadily going forward."

Turning to the company's sales promotion programme, Mr. Irwin stressed the fact that the bulk of the company's advertising appropriation for 1940 will be spent in newspapers.

"While all forms of advertising have their merits," he said, "it is my opinion that newspapers must always play a leading role in any well-rounded advertising and sales promotion plan. After taking over the direction of this company last year, one of my first decisions was to make every advertising dollar work as effectively as possible. A result of this decision is the newspaper advertising campaign on which we are at present embarking."
