Tributes To Late Senator B. C. Prowse

At a recent session of the Senate Canada eloquent tributes were paid the late Hon. Sir Edward Kemp, n. J. D. Reid, Hon. N. K. Lamme, Hon. B. C. Prowse, mems of the Senate who had passed ay since the last session.

Hon. Senator Dandurand after ing reference to the other Senrs spoke thus of Senator Prowse: e news reached us yesterday of e demise of Senator Prowse, of ince Edward sland. Senator Prowse d been a member of this cham- since 1911. He was born at Charttetown in 1862. His commercial reer was a successful one and he s one of the merchant princes of e Island .He served as councillor the City of Charlottetown and was one time mayor of his native city. was a public-spirited man, a man sound judgement and kindly heart. Senator Willoughby paid the folving tribute: 'Senator Prowse I ve known ever since my entry into s House. He had long preceded . The honorable leader of the vernment has recorded the steps his career. He was a man of a very dly nature, he had not an enemy the House; and if he could diffuse ray of pleasure he was only too d to do so. I sincerely join with honorable friend the leader of Government in extending to the milies of these gentlemen our sine sympathy."

Right Hon. Sir George E. Foster speaking generally of the loss susned by the Senate in the death these four gentlemen said: "There different kinds of ties that bind together in friendship. The ties t bind public men together are ser among those who belong to same side of politics, but extending beyond the bounds of party politics there is a sort of free masonry —shall I call it?—which unites all public men who are working for their country along their different lines of light and guiding. From my experience of public life—and I have had a rather long experience in that respect—I am happy to add my testimony, if testimony is necessary, of the strong conviction which I have no doubt I share with many others, that public men according to their lights are moved by a spirit of love and self-denying service for their country. The bonds of intimate personal friendship are not overlaid but strengthened by the work that public men undertake in common for the larger and less selfish interests of country, of empire and of humanity.

'It is in thinking over the long years we have spent together that just at this moment I have a sense of personal loss, and in expressing a sense of that loss I find a response in the hearts of many men on both sides of this Chamber, whether one or another strip of politics binds them together. We think of our old friends and miss them. One can almost hear the sound of their voices in this Chamber. One can shut one's eyes and almost see the familiar faces glowing with friendship; can feel the impulse and emotion of kindly thought, which, passing beyond the limits of party, distributes itself generally, | among confreres and companions in the work of public life.

"A ceremony like this, if we may call it a ceremony, brings thoughts to us all of the swiftness with which life passes, and of the certainty that an end shall come sooner or later. To those that are left it brings a reminder of their duty to take up the torch that lights the path that our young nation is travelling. Canada will have a greater and more prosperous future if we who remain bear the torch as it should be borne, with our sense of responsibility increasing as those who are companions along a part of the way slip off in the dusk and leave us forever."

Government

Constitution is that of subsidies from the Dominion to the provinces and that there is no greater undertaking upon which money could more justifiably or with greater benefit be spent than in the promotion of public health; and, before and after him, the Minister of Railways and the Minister of Justice commended the laudable purpose of the resolution but invoked the argument against overlapping of federal and provincial jurisdiction. Increase the dominion subsidies if necessary, they said in effect, but let the work which already is being done by the provinces, be continued by them without special contribution from the federal treasury for a particular purpose.

It was argued that such grants imply the exercise of control by the Dominion and that such control in operation limited the provincial jurisdiction.

Mr. Spencer's resolution really amounted to this: He pointed out that the Rockefeller foundation was prepared to bear one third of the cost for the first three years. He wanted the Federal Government to assume this one third after the foundation had withdrawn its funds in this connection.

Prince Edward Island Ineligible

Hon. P. J. Veniot, Postmaster General, stated that all the provinces could not receive grants from the Rockefeller foundation. Prince Edward Island was ineligible because it had no medical school.

The resolution was declared "carried" without a division, it involving nothing more in the way of Government responsibility, than taking the proposal into "consideration."

Veterans' Pensions

The resolution of Dr. J. H. King, Minister of Pensions, which contemplated the introduction of a bill whose provisions would render war veterans eligible for old age pensions at the age of 65 and at the same time extend this legislation to veterans who had become totally and permamently unemployed before that age, was debated in committee of the whole in the House of Commons today The minister outlined the scope of the proposed bill, and asserted that one of the great difficulties at present was that of the man who had seen active service and who could not work but whose disability was not pensionable. He believed that the government and the people of Canada wanted to [deal] generously with that [class] of country had accepted the principle of the Old Age Pensions, which granted a small allowance to persons at the age of 70. It was now intended that for the benefit of war veterans this age limit be reduced to 65. At the some time, he said "we quite realize that many veterans may reach the stage where they are permanently and totally unemployable before they obtain that age; and therefore we are asking parliamentary authority to extend the benefits of this legislation to men who saw active service in a theatre of war and are permanently unemployable no matter what age they may be, provided, of course, they are not already taken care of by war pension or otherwise.

"The proposal was, he said, to supplement the income of those eligible by an amount not exceeding $40.00 a month in the case of a married man and $20.00 in the case of a single man.

The resolution brought forth vigorous criticism from the Opposition in as much as while it purposed to be the result of representations made by Sir Arthur Currie and others, it had a different object altogether, and had thrown a delicate question which should be dealt with in an impartial way into the political melting pot. The proposed measure represented a most objectionable form of procedure. It was not right or fitting that the administration of the pensions and the decisions to be arrived at should be left in the hands of a Minister of the Government as proposed.

The Prime Minister stated that the proposed legislation would come before a committee of the House and it would have the greatest latitude in its inquiry.

The Prime Minister, said Hon. R. B. Bennett, Conservative leader, had undertaken to redress complaints of soldiers indicated in the letter written by Sir Arthur Currie, the resolution now before the House did not, however, touch the cause of complaint at all. The country had assumed that the Prime Minister, in implementing his promise, would introduce legislation amending the pensions act with respect to the matter of deferred disability. It was supposed that provision would be made that when a man was accepted for war service as physically sound, it would be presumed, unless proof to the contrary was produced, that his disability was due to war service. It must be remembered, said Mr. Bennett, that the sole control of expenditures rested with the government. Members of the Opposition, and private members could not introduce legislation which would have the affect of increasing pensions; that was the duty of the government.

In addition to the returned soldiers, there were the dependents of men who had died either during the war or since the conclusion of peace. Some of these dependants were now in a state of pauperism. They should be taken care of. He denounced the proposed measure as the worst piece of political manouevering on the eve of an election that had ever been brought before parliament. The debate was continued in the evening.

ISLANDER

Tory, is the chairman of the National Research Council of Canada, and is recognized as a man of outstanding ability.

J. W. Boulter, in addition to being Deputy Minister of Agriculture for P. E. Island is also secretary of the P. E. I. Potato Growers Association, a co-operative organization which has met with great results since it was organized in 1920.

Dr. M. M. Coady, who has served on a number of commissions, is the man to whom the Dominion Government has entrusted the task of organizing the fishermen of the Maritime Provinces.

Geo. A. Boggs was recently elected President of the Nova Scotia Fruit Growers Association and is well informed on the Growers' problems and was, it is understood, the unanimuos choice of the growers as their representative on the Commission.

Prof. W. S. Blair, who it is stated, will act in the capacity of technical advisor to the Commission is Superintendent of the Dominion Experimental Station at Kentville, and is generally acknowledged to have a more complete insight into all phases of the fruit industry in this Province than any other one man.

It is also stated that H. Percy Blanchard, of Ellerhouse, will act as Secretary of the Commission.

The decision of the Government to enquire into the fruit industry following representations from the Nova Scotia Fruit Growers Association, the Department of Natural Resources, the Kentville and Lawrencetown Boards of Trade and individual growers and shippers.

In announcing the Government's decision last Wednesday, Premier Rhodes said, "The critical situation which has developed and now exists makes it imperative that the whole situation be investigated without delay. The importance of the fruit industry to the Province as a whole, and the urgency of the present situation has prompted the Government to take immediate action."

Commenting on the fact that the Commission was to be appointed the Kentville Advertiser, which has consistently urged that there be an investigation, stated in part, in an editorial on Friday, as follows. "By its action the Government of Nova Scotia has answered those who insisted that Government could render no assistance whatever at the present juncture. The appointment of a Royal Commission with the backing and sponsorship of the Government of Nova Scotia, and with full power to summon witnesses and to examine them under oath, is in the opinion of this paper, the best if not the only way, to get down to hard pan and find out exactly what is what in this most important of our valley industries.

"It remains to those closely identified with the several phases of this industry to place before the Commission at its hearings, all the information they are able to give in the faith that the Commission will be able to weigh opinion against opinion and evidence against evidence to the end that a definite growing and marketing policy may be mapped out and the production of apples in this Valley be brought up to a decent standard of modern business."

plicating results and which if continued would have caused much difficulty for themselves and their friends.

"In order however to work this backward pass, it was essential to perform numerous legal and financial irregularities, but the least of which was the paying of this elusive sleuth.

"The Provincial Government disclaimed all knowledge of the affair (which may have been true as an official body). The Prohibition commission apparently would have nothing to do with him and still his bill for upwards of $1500.00 had to be paid or there would be dangerous counter-plots to handle.

"If the Provincial Treasury paid the bill just think what a lot of explaining that would take to an inquisitive opposition, if the Prohibition Commission paid it they were paying a bill they claimed never to have authorized or incurred and refused to use the information procurred by the expenditure when presented and all arrangements set to go in this own court.

"But now persistent rumor has it that is the way the deal has been ararnged and that the Prohibition Commission threw away approximately $1500.00 destined for the Provincial funds of this province for services they apparently never ordered and would not accept (which is very questionable procedure), to cover the tracks of some of their back sliding friends who found themselves in uncomfortable and untenable positions.

"What a really independant body this Commission would appear to be."

Two Special Boats To Take Lobsters To Boston Market
