BRIDAL SHOWER—On Wednesday evening 3rd many friends gathered at the home of Mrs. and Mrs. W. M. Bowness, Bedouque, to tender Pte. Hammond and Mrs. Bowness a surprise shower in honor of their newlywed marriage. Miss Blanche Noonan and Mr. Arthur Murray were called upon to escort the bride and groom to the dining room which was beautifully decorated in red, white and blue streamers and flags. The many parcels were unwrapped by Mrs. Arnold Henderson and Hazel Jewell, and verses read by Miss Marjorie Newcombe and Blanche Noonan which were nicely arranged on tables set by Mrs. Ralph McCaul and Mrs. John Myers. The many gifts included china, glassware, linen, silver, pyrex, etc., showing the popularity of the newlyweds. The groom on behalf of his bride and himself thanked all for their lovely gifts. Then all joined in singing. They are jolly good fellows. A delicious lunch was served by the hostesses assisted by the ladies and the remainder of the evening was pleasantly spent and enjoyed by all present. Before departing all wished the young couple a happy wedded life. The groom has been stationed at Beach Grove Inn and expects to leave shortly for Ontario. Hammond has formerly been a popular clerk and assistant post master at the store of his brother Walter.

ROMMEL IN

One of the ways the battle was being fought. Both forces were still in this area south of Acromon. At the end of the day the British communicated after telling of the "severe fighting". The battle Saturday started slowly, gathering intensity. By mid-afternoon the fighting was a wild melee of tanks, infantry and guns as the two forces stood toe to toe slugging it out until sundown.

Dust Storms

Then local dust storms began swirling over the battlefield hampering vision, grounding the air force and bringing surcease to the battle-grimed warriors of both sides. Even as the main battle raged at the peak, one of Lt.-Gen. Neil Ritchie's mobile divisions once again moved south slipped behind the main Axis forces, disabling many tanks and armored cars and taking prisoners.

Caucasus. Without adding its own comment, the Berlin radio quoted the Madrid newspaper ABC as saying that while the "Caucasus landing" was primarily a diversion, it might well be the opening gun for a wholesale offensive.

25-Pounder Howitzers

The famed British 25-pounder howitzers were credited with routing the attacking Germans in the Acromon area. British troops in this sixth major Libyan campaign are equipped with effective artillery, manned by a well-trained army of gun-slackened veterans well schooled in desert warfare.

REDS HOLD ON

All military objectives escaped damage, the official Russian announcement declared. The two battles in the Ukraine and the Crimea thus reached a new peak in intensity. The Germans, because of terrific losses, constant lack of armor and fuel reserves, and an apparent determination to fold back the Russian left flank. The Germans achieved local superiority in numbers in both battles by concentrating enormous masses of infantry, tanks and aviation in narrow sectors of the south, where a hot sun baked the battle fields while a late spring made the northern rivers still unfit for large scale action.

Heat Intense

The heat was so intense on the western tip of the Crimea that dispatches carried some enemy troops were charging naked up the burning hills. Tass reported that two battalions of "drunken Rumanian troops" stripped themselves bare to the waist and staged a "psychological attack" on the Russians. Tass said the Soviet machine-gun and trench mortar fire stopped the Rumanians and caused heavy casualties.

Heavy Fighting

On Sevastopol Hill was reported bombed, shelled and attacked three times by enemy infantry holding a five-to-one superiority. The attackers finally rushed the crest of the hill but were driven out by a quick Russian counter-attack. It was said this hill now has changed hands four times, it was reported.

German Airmen

German airmen were reported dropping iron bars, rails, tractor wheels, plows as well as bombs in an effort to break the nerves of the Sevastopol population. But the Pravda correspondent wrote that the people of Sevastopol "refused even to shiver."

To conserve when canning use containers of a size to suit the needs of the household. This helps to avoid monotony in menu planning. When the water bath method is used for vegetables it is never desirable to can these in jars larger than one pint as the time taken for penetration of heat prolongs the life of the contents.

S' Side Air Cadet Unit Gets Ensign

A unique and impressive ceremony took place Saturday afternoon on the parade ground No. 53 S.F.T.S., Summerside when No. 53 squadron of the Air Cadets received their ensign from the hands of His Honor Lieut. Governor LePage who also inspected the cadets on the parade ground. The cadets who are pupils of Summerside High School presented a very smart appearance in their snappy uniforms and marched like veterans in the march past. The Air Force band turned out for the ceremony and were also inspected by the Lieut. Governor. As the Lieut. Governor accompanied by Group Captain Fullerton and others came on to the parade ground the band gave the Royal Salute.

Before presenting the flag His Honor Lieut. Governor LePage directed the cadets briefly. Present at the ceremony were Mr. W. E. Darby, chairman of the civilian committee for the Air Cadet League, Lidstone and Messrs. Peter G. Clark, E.P. Foley, R. H. Leck, J. Frank Arnett and Neil R. Durant. Accompanying the Lieut. Governor was Mr. G. G. Spencer, secretary and secretary. Before the Lieut. Governor left the parade ground the cadets gave him three rousing cheers. There are 35 pupils in the squadron their officers are Pte. Robert R. Brennan, P.O. Ernest Pineau, P.O. Davis Lidstone, Warrant Officer Patrick Ryan, Adjutant Spindle. The non-commissioned officers are Pte. Sgt. Wm. Durant, Sgt. J. Merriam, Corporals William Ramsay, Grant Mollison, Dick Merriam and Wendle Calbeck. Worthy of note is

DECLARES

Huge flames licked 200 feet into the air and the ship staggered under the impact. It began to settle at the bow and the smaller craft tossed lighters into the air, spilled men into the water, and shattered to splinters the wooden auxiliary vessel. Two torpedoes struck the grounded tender and the three destroyers. When the smoke cleared, one destroyer already was under water. A second was turning over and the tender was seen to be in trouble. This fiercer said.

An alert scout plane pilot, having dropped his little bomb—the scout carried more fuel than the heavy bombers and consequently could not carry the heavy bombs—saw a Jap seaplane fighter take off from one end of the harbor. Diving to sea level, he loosed 100 rounds of bullets. The enemy went into a slipping dive and crashed. Then the same pilot noted five other seaplanes moored in a series of runs up and down the line.

Days later we learned by comparing information from several sources that the pilot destroyed 14 out of 15 warships and transports. The toll included three light cruisers and one heavy cruiser, three transports, one seaplane tender, one destroyer, four gunboats, and the seaplane fighters. The 15th ship was the destroyer caught by the fighter pilots.

We did not escape entirely unscathed. The fact that the pilot or plane due to Japanese action. Two of the fighter pilots and one torpedo bomber overstayed their fuel limits in their enthusiasm. All three crashing-landed on Guadalcanal after reporting their intentions by radio. Friendly natives assisted the two fighter pilots to build a fire on the shore and they were rescued that night by a destroyer.

Thus was the curtain raised on the Coral Sea conflict, which was to continue with rising intensity of action during the next four days of the two most striking prongs of the Jap invasion fleets' pincer movement closed in on us.

Throughout the following night long the flotilla knifed its way at 25 knots northward. There was moonlight and a brilliant starlight from the milky way, now and then obscured by big floating clouds.

I stood on the flight deck and looked at the fleet, drawn in close and moving northward. There was moonlight and a brilliant starlight from the milky way, now and then obscured by big floating clouds.

As Mrs. Kenneth Mutart played the fact that the bride and groom were to be married at Carleton, the guests of honor to a decorated chair under a white marriage bell. Misses Hattie Ross and Fernie Bell carried in a large pink and white basket, heavily laden with interesting packages, which were presented by Hattie Ross. Miss Evelyn Bell read the accompanying verses which produced much merriment. Miss Fernie Bell received the gifts from the bride and arranged them on a table. Mrs. Gordon Ross then read a complimentary address from the Carleton Women's Institute, of which the bride-elect was a faithful and valued member, and on their behalf Miss Hattie Ross, proxy, uttered a word of congratulatory wishes with silver stand and cover. The shower gifts were exceptionally lovely, comprising silver, china, linen and other including some substantial cheques. The high esteem in which the young bride is held, in a few well-chosen words Thelma thanked her friends for their gifts and good wishes and invited any who could come to Halifax to visit her there. Her singing of "For She's a Jolly Good Fellow" she was bounced. Music and a sing-song were enjoyed with Miss Fernie Bell at the piano. Refreshments were served with the evening closed with God Save the King.

Amazing Story Of Submarine's Bold Attack

"The narrow channel leads into the harbor. Miers' submarine entered from the east, submerged and proceeded slowly.

"By nightfall Miers was some distance from what he thought was the target. He began to rise to that point the submarine had to come to the surface to charge the batteries.

"There was a brilliant moon and the sea was glassy calm.

"After charging the batteries for a couple of hours, Miers spotted a target approaching and had to cut the operation. He submerged and moved toward the supposed position of the anchored convoy and then found he could not see the ships. He had to await the dawn to attack.

"Throughout the night he had to avoid patrol craft and dawn brought disappointment.

"Miers saw that the big convoy had sailed in the harbor there were two supply ships of about 5,000 tons each and an Italian destroyer. He decided to fire torpedoes at all of them.

"He ran the submarine close to the anchorages and on a swinging turn fired torpedoes at each, turning around and began going out of the channel. Both supply ships were torpedoed and almost certainly sunk but the torpedoes missed the destroyer.

"The submarine submerged deeply but came up to periscope depth as the destroyer passed almost directly above her and enemy aircraft skimmed the water. Forty depth charges exploded around the submarine.
