THEY HAD TO SEE PARIS

By Homer Croy

Pike came back into the stuffy baggage jammed compartment.
"Well, I'm ready to get back home," said Mrs. Peters comfortably, as the train began to gather speed.
"So'm I," said Pike.
They stopped in New York a few days. If it hadn't been for Clark they wouldn't have stopped at all, for the nearer home they got, the more anxious they were to get on, but Clark was coming to be more and more of a factor in their lives.
"He's really a splendid young man," said Mrs. Peters. "I like his sterling qualities—that's what always appealed to me about him. After all, those are the things that count. We must announce the engagement just as soon as we get back. Pike, where do you think we ought to build our new house?"
Pike was now going ahead with plans of his own. Almost as soon as he was on shipboard he had begun to send radio messages to his associates in Clearwater, and when he got to New York he called up by long distance, an event, even in that bustling city.

"Things are humming out there," he said to Idy, and joy dwelt in his eyes. "It's the finest place in the world—last week was the biggest week we ever had for the garage. I'm going to hang on to the Pawnee, but that's only a starter. Me for the oil game—that's where I belong. And I'm going to take Clark in with me. I want Ross to go to the state university and graduate, and then if he wants to come in and tell me how to run things, why, I guess there'll be room."

At last they arrived at a town which they thought was Clearwater, but when they looked out of the window they had a start. It was not Clearwater at all—at least, not the Clearwater they had known, not the small, rather dingy depot they had left. The old buildings had been cleared away and an edifice—there was no other word for it—had been erected in its place. It was the new Union Station. Huge automobile busses were backed up in front of it and drivers stood waiting for passengers from the train. These busses now connected with other towns and cities in this section and went whirling down the new cement and asphalt roads—where once

"The woman who has an attachment for dumb animals should use it occasionally herself."

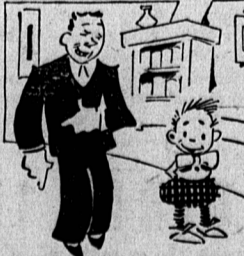

"That Miss Swift has completely lost her head over Fern."
"Well, that's good for Fern. If she lands him he'll save a lot of money on hats."

GOING DOWN

We all know just what happens
To man in a canoe
With a sweet girl whose lips are pursue
And cox a kiss or two.
But what will happen to the duck,
The ardent wooing swain,
Who makes a jump to kiss a girl
Up in an aeroplane?

"Well, it's impossible to please everybody in this world, isn't it?"
"Can't say. I never tried it."

"Did you know that I was to be your brother-in-law, Jimmy?"
"I expected it. Sis said she'd slap me if I didn't tell you she was sweet tempered."

WHOA!

WHOA!—Rotarians got away to a good start yesterday in selling Coupons for the Orpheus Eight Musical Revue in aid of Crippled Children. It certainly would be hard to say "NO" to such a cause.
2514-3-19-31.

The buffalo had roamed—on regular schedule trips. Along the freight and baggage section of the station, trucks waited to whisk away the supplies. Here it was that Andy Buck's horse had stood, but Andy's horse was no more. He had seen his last train come in. Possibly he had died of a broken heart, as they say horses sometimes do... or it may have been the fumes, everywhere there was bustle and the sense of life, of people coming and going, and the keen feel of prosperity. In the distance, which had once been that indiscriminate expanse of flat-lands known as "beyond the tracks," huge, white, round-topped tanks glistened in the sun. It was now a "tank farm" and here oil was stored until it could be put into the great oil cars on the railroad and hauled away. The bill-board sign which Pike had composed was no longer there. In its place was an electric one which said:

THIS IS CLEARWATER—THE CITY YOU ARE LOOKING FOR. GET OFF. THERE ARE 18,000 AHEAD OF YOU, BUT NEXT WEEK THERE WILL BE MORE

"Golly!" said Pike as he stared about him. "I make Rip Van Winkle seem as if he had just run out to the ten-cent store."

There was the excitement of driving home, of people shouting at them and rushing out to shake hands—and strange people they had never seen before staring at them in wonderment. They passed the Pawnee Garage. Never had Pike seen so many cars in front of it, nor so many people in the showrooms. Leaping out, he ran in, and there was the hubbub of greetings. He came back to the car.

"Say," he called, "you folks go on without me. I've run into some things here I want to look after. Go on," he commanded genially. "I'll be along in a minute."

And it was, as Mrs. Peters expected, supper-time when he got home.

Mrs. Peters, too, was pleased to get back home, and especially a few days later when she was the guest of honor at the Tuesday Afternoon Club at the most fashionable and most crowded luncheon the club had ever known, far eclipsing the ceremony and ostentation of the now dimly remembered Lady Wolvertree luncheon.

Mrs. Peters delivered what the Clearwater paper called an informal talk on her trip abroad. It dealt with the beauties and historic spots of France and with its museums and the Louvre and its wonderful and inspiring art treasures, and at least six women in the audience gazing at Mrs. Peters's new clothes, made up their mind to see Paris before another year rolled around.

But it was a half-down intimate friends, who remained after the others that Mrs. Peters really opened up and talked.

The boys of Union School met the boys of Elmsdale School on the ice at Elmsdale the afternoon of the 6th inst., and played a fast and stirring game of hockey. No score was made during first period and at the end of the game the score stood 1-1.

The community of Elmsdale was deeply shocked and saddened by hearing of the unexpected death on Saturday, Feb. 22nd., of Mrs. Frank McKenna, formerly Honora Walsh, at the early age of 32 years. The loss of her quiet but cheerful and kindly personality is felt, not only in her home where she was so much loved and needed, but also in the whole district where she is missed and mourned. Besides her husband and three little children, one an infant, there are left behind an aged mother, three sisters, Celia, Mrs. J. A. McDonald, Skinner's Pond; Mary, Mrs. J. McKenna, Rumbold, Me., Theresa, Mrs. Martin Kinch, Alma; also five brothers, William, residing on the Island; Hilary, West Belfast, Me.; John, Dorchester, Mass; Brother Amos, Albany, N. Y.; and Rev.
