Eyes of World Focussed Upon Northern Area

OTTAWA, July 8.—(CP)—Canada's land of the midnight sun is receiving public attention unprecedented in recent years as summer sets in over the 1,300,000 square miles of the Northwest Territories. Developments are combining to make this a banner year in the north.

Science is prepared to scan the Arctic in sub-Arctic areas closer than ever before, entering in the wake of achievements that have given the world fresh interests in the geography of the territories, stretching from the northern boundaries of the three prairie provinces to the North Pole.

At the last census, in 1931 the territories had a population of 2,221—1,007 whites, 4,046 Indians and 4,670 Eskimos. Even men familiar with the Arctic would scarcely hazard a guess as to the population when the 1941 census is made.

The north has many an outstanding development this summer. Here are some: Promising reports from gold explorations in Gordon Lake, Yellowknife River and Outpost Island on Great Slave Lake; base metal discovery at Pine Point, also in Great Slave Lake vicinity; expansion of pitchblende recovery at Great Bear Lake from which radium and silver are obtained.

Expansion in flying facilities, carrying passengers to hitherto inaccessible points. Scheduled trip of the general inside the Arctic Circle early in August when he will visit Aklavik at the mouth of the Mackenzie River on Beaufort Sea.

Visit of 10 distinguished British and United States scientists to the territories at various points while seven British scientists come out having spent the winter in far-north investigations.

Sailing of the steamship Nascope from Montreal, July 10, with which will conduct an extensive program in the Arctic Archipelago. Tests are also to be made from the Nascope of the possibility of broadcasting from deep in the Arctic over a national hook-up.

Fight of the Soviet airmen across the north and over the Northwest Territories which focussed world attention on the geography of the territories.

The experiment of transplanting reindeer from Alaska to the Mackenzie River delta, likely to prove as great a success as the establishment of the wood buffalo park some years ago.

The territories are therefore becoming mighty enterprise administered by the Territorial Council with headquarters in Ottawa. This council is composed of experts in the needs and possibilities of the north. They are all civil servants holding other responsible positions and serve on the council without additional pay.

The council acts under the Dominion government and more particularly under Hon. T. A. Crerar, minister of mines and resources. In organized provinces the Dominion, province and the municipalities all play a part in governing, but in the unorganized Northwest Territories the council does the entire job.

To see how this job is being carried out by officials under the council will be one of the objects of the East Arctic patrol expedition going north on the Nascope, headed by Major D. L. McKeand, secretary of the council and superintendent of the Eastern Arctic. It will go as far as Craig Harbor on Ellesmere Island and visit most of the posts in the Eastern Arctic Archipelago.

Head of the Territorial Council with the title of commissioner is Dr. Charles Camsell, deputy minister of mines and resources and himself a native of the north. He was born at Port Lorne, Mackenzie district. His father was chief factor of the Hudson's Bay Company, Dr. Camsell has travelled extensively in the Arctic and sub-Arctic.

Rev. A. Gibson, deputy commissioner and director of lands, parks, mines and resources, has been in close touch with northern development as assistant deputy minister of interior for many years.

Major-General Sir James H. Macleod, a councillor, is head of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police direct taxation, establishes territories where members maintain law and order. Sir James has also travelled extensively within the Arctic Circle.

Dr. Harold W. McGill, a councillor, is director of Indian Affairs and is therefore familiar with the needs of the Indian population. He is a former mayor of Calgary. Kenneth R. Daly, senior departmental solicitor and Austin L. Cummings, superintendent of the Mackenzie district, are councillors. There is one vacancy.

The council has wide power over the vast territory. It levies direct taxation, establishes territories, maintains law and order, appoints men to order. Sir James has also travelled extensively within the Arctic Circle.
