Citizens of this community will be interested in visiting the Montague School to see its fine-looking appearance. During the past month painters have been at work on the building painting both the outside and inside. The roof has been completely fixed up to prevent leaks and painted. The walls have been painted an attractive gray with white trimmings, and even the flag-pole has been made attractive with a new coat of paint. All windows and front stoop have been re-encased so as to give a nicer appearance to the building. Inside each room and the main corridor has been painted a bright cream color, and the wainscoting newly varnished. At the present time the painters, Messrs. Ponce Larkin, Clarence Laney and Vernon Steele are painting the new Grade XI room which has been constructed in the basement by Messrs. Dan MacDonald and Ted MacLean. Mr. and Mrs. Peter Clary have completed the washing of the floors and woodwork so that the school is almost in readiness for the entrance of the students. The new Grade XI room has been provided with every convenience to make the students as comfortable as possible, and lighting is being provided by large windows and fluorescent lights. It is hoped that eventually a fence will be constructed along the front so as to prevent cars from passing over the front lawn. Unfortunately many have been using the south side as a parking lot with consequent ruining of the grass lawn. It is almost impossible to prevent this unless some obstruction is erected. The community school is always an attraction for sight-seers, and with the school newly repainted, an attractive lawn would add considerably to the appearance which it now presents.—Lan.

Fords Expansion

WINDSOR, Ont., Aug. 24 — Creation of a new merchandising division at Ford of Canada, to be known as the Tractor and Implement division, was announced today by Horace H. Greenfield, director of sales and advertising.

Sales manager of the new division is Weldon M. McFarlane, formerly assistant manager of the service department at home office. Mr. McFarlane has been with Ford company, specializing in field problems, since 1937 when he joined Ford of Canada at its Saint John N. B. district office.

Thomas J. Lee moves into the tractor and implement division as service manager. Transferred from the chemical laboratory into the home office service department in 1946, he has since then been devoting his time exclusively to tractor and implement problems.

Succeeding Mr. McFarlane as assistant service manager at home office is Harry H. Cook, who joined Ford of Canada in 1938. An honor graduate of Toronto University in Mechanical Engineering, he has spent the past 10 years in service work, two in the company's Toronto branch, and the last eight at home office.

Commenting on the formation of the division, Mr. Greenfield remarked on the growing role of machinery in Canadian agriculture. "During the war years more than 200,000 agricultural workers entered industry and the armed services," he said, "but only 1/10 of the number returned to agriculture in the post-war years. That trend is an acceleration of an occupational shift that has been underway for the last 20 years, or more. Yet at the same time, due to better methods of farming and increased mechanization, farm output has been going steadily up."

In 1947, for example, farm income in Canada was three times what it had been just before the war. Some idea of the growing part mechanization is playing in this record production may be gained from the fact that 32,854 tractors were retailed across Canada in 1947—an increase of almost 48% over sales in 1946. During the same period, Ford tractor sales reached an all time high.

It was obvious that, for some time to come, a hungry world would look to Canada as a potential source of foodstuffs, Mr. Greenfield continued, and Canadian farmers were going to demand more and better farm equipment and servicing to help them meet production goals. The company had formed the tractor and implement division with the objective of providing better service to Canadian agriculture.
