LOOKING FOR A HAT

I went down town to buy a hat—
Something smart and gay, at that;
I looked and looked in ev'ry shop;
I walked and walked, and thought I'd drop;
I never saw the one I'd wear,
But oh! spring was in the air—
The spring was in the air, my dear,
And ev'ry living thing 'twas clear
Was putting on a whole ensemble
To swagger forth with great aplomb.
"A hat!" I cried, 'What good is that"
"The world is mine—who wants a hat?"

SHEEPISH LOOK IN HAIRDOS

The Shaggy Sheep-Do that tumbling coiffure sponsored by Veronica Lake the movie actress who attended Villa Maria here for a short time, is shagging its way into the affections of 15-year-olds, displacing the pompadour, it is said. For proof, we cite the case of a high school friend of ours who begged her mother for a permanent wave this spring so that her pompadour would stay up better. Now her leisure hours are spent in plastering said pompadour down, slicking her front hair over in approximation of the sheep-like haircut of Miss Lake.

HOME MODERNIZERS NEED EXPERT HELP

Importance of good design in the modernization of an existing house is equally as important as in new house construction.

For this reason, it is pointed out by authorities the advice of an architect is often valuable in modernizing old houses. Working with a carefully planned design, the property owner can be assured the layout and outward appearance conform to basic conceptions of good taste and that the interior is best adapted to the needs of those who will live in it.

Authorities also remind property owners that structural limitations may make impractical desired modernization, and all knowledge of this beforehand will save the owner considerable expense.

Development of sheers through latticework flanges of crin, milan, sheer materials like maline or crganza; inserts of Valenciennes lace in felt. Venice or thread lace or broderies l'Anglais; cutwork in felt; toyo woven with fringed, ribbon-like sections in brims. These are the dressmaker touches to link with the feminized fashions in costumes.

Face-revealing silhouettes will continue important especially in wide brims, but also in small pompadour hats.

Newest of effects is a shiny red apple pinned on the shoulders or a pair of limes or ripe red tomatoes.

Newest silhouette for the hat of width, interpreted in brim or beret, is the shallow front and deep-descending - toward - the-shoulder back — a movement in line with sloped shoulders of dresses.

Maline, yards of it for every hat, on the hat and in trailing scarfs around the neck, forms the "glamour" touch this season.

Wide taffeta ribbon in sashes tied under the chin or at back, puts the early date-line on a number of little flowered toques.

Hatpins and turban-bandeaux both ornamental are the assurance of hats staying-on this season. Goodbye to all back-straps.

SOUND ODDITY

If a person were able to yell loud enough to be heard from the United States to Australia, it would take about 15 hours for his voice to travel that far.

During high altitude flying, going without food increases the flyers' oxygen needs, and it is found that carbohydrates such as sugar and plain chocolate bars require least oxygen in digestion.

Although it cannot swim the man-o'-war bird lives largely on fish, snatching them from the surface or catching flying fish in the air.

MONOGRAMS PAINTED ON AWNINGS OF HOUSE

In many communities the idea of painting the home owner's monogram and house number on the awning above the front door is becoming popular. This is particularly recommended in towns where house numbers are applied to the street curbing and consequently are often obscured by passing traffic.

Any skilled painter or decorator can easily apply the letters either with house paint and a hand-brush or by means of a stencil and special stencil paint.

Your paint dealer can show you how to prepare the latter from japan colors or other materials. Use letters about 5 inches high and apply them to the lower right hand corner of the awnings.

SAUCE ADDS VARIETY

A Morning Smile

NOT WHAT HE WANTED

A recruit was trying to dodge military service.

"I'm afraid my shortsightedness will prevent me from doing any actual fighting," he said.

The M. O. replied cheerfully: "That's all right, old chap. We've got special trenches for the short-sighted ones. Right close up to the enemy — you just can't miss seeing them".

"Are you intending to make a purchase, madam?" asked the exasperated assistant.

"Certainly," replied the customer, acidly.

"Well, I'm glad to know that, madam. I thought you were stock-taking!"

IF BABY IS CROSS FIND OUT WHY

HEALTHY BABIES are not cross. Your baby should not be cross. If he is, then something in his little system is "out of order". Probably Baby's Own Tablets can promptly "put it right". Mrs. H——, of Fenelon Falls, had the experience. She writes: "My little girl was irritable, feverish and sometimes sick at her stomach—what a relief it was, after giving her Baby's Own Tablets, to see how much better she was."

No matter how delicate your baby may be, these little sweet-tasting tablets cannot harm him. Easy to take. Promptly effective in clearing up simple fevers, diarrhoea, colds, constipation, simple croup, colic, teething troubles and other minor ills.

Never be without a full box of Baby's Own Tablets. Sickness so often strikes in the night. 25 cents. Money back if you are not satisfied.

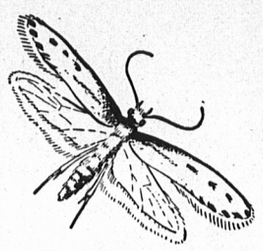
Common Pests and Ways to Destroy Them



The Clothes Moth An Expensive Destroyer

Scientists estimate the damage to clothing and household furnishings by clothes moths at more than $200,000,000 annually. While not disease-carriers, moths are among the most destructive pests in the home and in stores and warehouses. There are several species of clothes moths, the most common bein the case-making moth, the webbing moth and the tapestry moth.

The adult "millers" or moths do no damage, and are believed to subsist without food. It is the offspring —the moth worms, properly called caterpillars, or larvae—that destroy. These larvae feed on a wide variety of materials—woollens, rugs, furniture, upholstery, furs, silks feathers and many other articles. They shear fibres from deep-nap fabrics, scarring them beyond repair, and the familiar "moth hole" is a common household complaint.

As the moth eggs usually are deposited in dark corners, on the kind of goods favored as diet, the undisturbed clothes in closets or unused stored pillows and blankets are favourite breeding places. Moth eggs are tiny, but are usually laid in clusters and, being white, can be seen when on a black material. The destructive larvae are a sixteenth inch in length when full grown. The larval period varies in its duration with conditions and food; development of this stage may last from eight weeks to nearly four years. The housekeeper who postpones moth-killing efforts until time to store winter woollens gives the pest a head start.

One of the best methods of protection is to spray closets thoroughly with a good household spray, at least twice each month, being careful not to neglect crevices where wool fluff from garments may have settled. Spraying clothes or other woollen fabrics will destroy eggs or larvae that are present but does not immunize the fabric since household sprays kill by contact and should not be relied upon for permanent moth-proofing.

Woollens and furs, if infrequently worn, should be packed away in mothtight bags, trunks, chests or closets with sufficient amounts of paradichlorbenzene or napthalene.

Was It Montelli?

By LESLIE GARGILL

"Friend nothing! Give us the low down on this double business."

Jerry began at the beginning feeling like a parrot repeating a well worn phrase that was totally devoid of meaning.

To his surprise Manuel listened respectfully, with something that might indicate dawning indecision. "Sounds screwy," he retorted, "but maybe there's something in it. Tony's up to all the dodges. What about my trade marks?"

"Trade marks? Oh, if you mean scars, I haven't any." With an overeagerness that aroused doubt as to his intention, Jerry stood up to move closer. An unpleasant swish halted him in his tracks, just as a neatly thrown knife plunged into the door behind him, where it hung quivering.

"I got the knack," Manuel proudly commented.

From the trussed up Mintey came gurgling sounds, and his eyes positively goggled.

Jerry sat down again, quickly. "Why didn't you use the pistol?" he asked, more concerned with details than danger.

"'Cause we don't want the patrolman bustin' in. You an' me got to finish our conference. I could a' pinned yer if I'd a mind ter. So watch yer step, big boy. Let's pipe the flapper."

Apparently this referred to the indentifiable ear which the gunmen inspected with all the professional care of an expert who knew his job from A to Z.

"Can you beat it!" he ejaculated. "Reckon it's up to you to give me the low-down on this stunt."

Jerry started all over again. By now he was beginning to know the story. Many repetitions had brought word perfection so he was able to boil it down to essentials without sacrificing quality.

Manuel swallowed it whole, revelled in it, slapped his knee in appreciation and seemed convinced that Tony's cleverness was directly responsible for the situation, though how, or why, was not very clear.

Equally obvious was the regard in which one gangster held another. Circumstances might demand the "rubbing out' of Tony Montelli, but it was more in the way of business than mere malice.

"What a charming party!"

Dago Manuel's automatic swung round to cover Elise Dallas, who had slipped silently into the room. Being one of nature's gentlemen at heart he looked sheepish and tried to tuck away the weapon out of sight.

"Is it loaded?" she asked calmly.

"Sure, lady. What's the good of a gun without slugs."

"Be careful it doesn't go off, then."

"That's all right I got it under control. Never bumped a dame yet."

"How on earth did you get here?" Jerry broke in.

"Somebody carelessly left the key in the lock, so I thought I'd surprise you. Instead it seems to be the other way round. Aren't you going to introduce me."

"This is D—— Mr. Manuel, that is to say."

"Dago to my friends," the gangster said courteously. "Pleased ter have yer know me."

Elise found a comfortable chair from which she was able to survey the scene in all its bizarre completeness. She sympathized especially with the unfortunate Mintey and drew attention to the inconvenience of being deprived of an experienced cocktail server.

Manuel's ears positively flapped, not in any metaphorical sense, but by the exercise of that primitive dexterity which occasionally raises the aurally adroit schoolboy above his less gifted fellows. Everybody watched this exhibition with fascinated attention.

"Aw, that's nothing," explained the exhibitor modestly. "A little trick that goes down well in the dives. Say, I didn't know that guy was your private bartender. Thought he was a strong-arm thug—bodyguard—you know what I mean."

Elise, complete mistress of the situation, assured him that everything was most clear, that the mistake was perfectly natural and the logical conclusion could be fully reached by drinks all round. Under her direction Mintey was released, his dignified disapproval taking the form of complete silence.

ABSURD OR PERILOUS?

Jerry had the feeling that it was all an absurd dream yet a surreptitious pinch assured him that he actually was offering hospitality to a notorious character whose original intentions had been anything but friendly.

Caught off-duty Dago Manuel set out to become the life and soul of the party. His determination to make amends was almost pathetic.

"I got to watch my step," he affirmed solemnly. "Bumping off the wrong feller would ruin my reputation. Tony wouldn't like it either."

"Neither would I," Jerry mildly pointed out.

"Sure! Sure! Guess yer got a natural grouse as well. We gotta do something about it. Shucks, tattooing! Somewheres it'll show up good and plenty."

"Nothing doing!" Jerry was still firmly opposed to being turned into a perambulating picture gallery. "That's what the police suggested," he added.

Manuel was pained to think he had been so much in agreement with his natural enemies. Simultaneously he was reminded of his own insecurity. Apparently he knew all about the watch being kept on the house and had made an entrance by entirely unorthodox methods to avoid being seen. There was something of disappointment, too, at having come on a wild goose chase. According to his story, Jerry's public appearance had been responsible for the visit, Manuel having caught sight of him by accident and devoted considerable time to following up the trail.

On the whole he bore it very well. Some men might have bitterly resented wasting time on a mirage. Not so Dago Manuel, who had no hesitation in acquitting Jerry of any ill intent. His determination to avoid future errors was gratifying, although there was no doubt that it would cramp his style to a large extent if he had carefully to examine an intended victim to make sure it was the right man.

"Maybe I'll be gunning yer another day, imagining I've got the drop on Tony," he said. We better have a password. Just yell out Carrickm'huilish an' I'll know it's you."

Jerry objected vigorously. For one thing he couldn't pronounce it properly even if he recollected the word in a moment of peril.

Manuel thought it a crying shame. "Me old man came from there," he remarked. "'Tis the place of my boyhood. The family was well liked and respected by all."

"At Carrickmahoo—whatever it is called? Surely that is in Ireland?"

"Right behind the eight ball."

"Er, quite so. The—er—eight ball."

"One of the real bhoys, that's me. Dago Manuel's a trade name. Yer have to be a Eyetalian or a Spanyard to get over big in the rackets. 'Tis all right for an Irisher in the police, but not on the other side. Keep that under your brown derby. I wouldn't tell anyone I didn't trust."

"Many thanks for the compliment and the confidence."

"Yer all right, buddy. Now all yer got to do is to memorise Carrickm'huilish and you'll be sittin' pretty with my pals."

"Suppose you write it down for me," Jerry hazarded.

Dago Manuel froze. "What yer driving at?" he snarled. "Think I can't write?"

FOR WAR PURPOSES

OTTAWA — (CP) — Since the war began the Canadian and British governments have underwritten capital advance of some $426,000,000 for construction of war industries and enlargement of existing plants.

Dorothy Dix Says—

BACHELORHOOD IS REALLY NOT DESIRABLE STATE FOR MEN

It May Have Certain Compensations, But A Wife Overweighs The Scales In Favor Of Marriage

What price bachelorhood? Statisticians have figured out that under the new income tax rates it costs a man more than one dollar a week to remain single. The difference in exemptions between a single man and a married man without children. Well, of course, the bachelor can say that personal liberty is worth it, and that to be free of being nagged, of having one's diet regulated, of wearing some one else's taste in clothes instead of one's own, of having to punch the time clock on the dot, of having to ask permission to stay downtown for dinner, of having to do a million things that one does not want to do and leaving undone those things one is dying to do is a down-right cut-rate bargain at a dollar a week. Also the bachelor might add that even if his freedom does cost him a dollar a week he saves on not having to pay for beauty treatments and gowns and hats and other feminine fripperies, and for supporting a home and baby specialists, and for having adenoids out and teeth straightened, and paying the various and sundry other bills that keeps the married man's nose to the grindstone. So it is still money in his pockets to be single. Bachelorhood has always been esteemed a luxury but, in rality, it is not the graft that it is popularly supposed to be. The single man, for instance is not free to live his own life in his own way, as one would think. On the contrary, he is the victim of all the meddlesome people he knows who feel free to advise him about all of his personal affairs, and so instead of being nagged by one wife he is nagged by dozens of them.

No Economic Advantage

Nor is there economic advantage in a man not being married. The bachelor is the foreordained prey of his family. Because he hasn't any children of his own to send to college and launch into society and buy cars for and pay out of scrapes, his sisters and his brothers unload their youngsters on him and think he is a meanie if he doesn't come across.

So, since the single estate is not all cakes and ale for a man, it does seem that it is gross class injustice to tax him a dollar a week for not being married, as you will perceive if you will consider some of the other disadvantages of his lot:

He loses, to begin with, the companionship of a wife, which in its higher brackets is the greatest felicity that can come to man. To love and be loved; to go through life with one at your side whose tenderness and sympathy and loyalty never fail; to have the society of one with whom one never talks out, is to have found a little bit of Heaven on earth.

And even if a wife doesn't come up to all of a man's expectations, it is self-evident that a god scrapping partner puts some punch in life for her husband, or else the widowers of shrewish ladies would not be so quick to remarry.

Then the unfortunate bachelor has less chance of reaching old age than the married man has. He, poor soul, has no wife to look after him and take care of himself, and watch his calories and see that he gets his vitamins and eats what is good for his stomach instead of what he likes.

Doctors agree that it is wives nagging their husbands about putting on their rubbers and muffling up their throats and changing their socks when they get their feet wet, and going to see their physician about that cough that keeps innumerable men growing at home instead of lying peaceful in the cemetery

Bachelors Have No Alibi

And another great advantage that the bachelor misses is in not having his right hand an ever present unassailable alibi. Think of the ready-made excuses of the married man—If he doesn't succeed it is his wife's fault. If he drinks his wife drove him to it. If he takes to philandering in his old age it is because his wife got fat and lost her figure. If he wants to step out at night his wife drags him to night clubs. If he gets to be a stick-in-the-mud his wife is a fireside-sitter, but the poor bachelor has to roll his own.

Also, the bachelor has to tell his own lies, make his own excuses for not going to the Boreums, write his own letters of convention, all of which is wear and tear on the constitution that the married man escapes.

Thus it may be seen how a bachelor is overtaxed for his few privileges. For if the husband sometimes seems like a dog on a leash, at least he has somebody he belongs to, and that is a necessity for the happiness of dogs and men.

Why Mothers Sacrofice Sons

Dear Miss Dix—Why does a mother sacrifice her four sons to a fifth who is a black sheep? I know a mother who has driven her youngest son from her home, who has made her oldest son go into debt to pay the bad son out of trouble, who has made her other two sons work to support this lazy loafer and drunkard. Why are mothers like that? BILL.

ANSWER—Because they ae mothers. Did you ever read the parable of the prodigal son? That goes double for mothers. Perhaps it is pity. Perhaps it is shame. Perhaps it is a mother's recognition that she is to blame to a certain extent for the sins of the prodigal son, but always he is the one for whom the fatted calf is killed and to whom the good sons are sacrificed. It is always the black sheep who is mother's pet lamb.

MADE IN CANADA

Your Individual HOROSCOPE
By Frances Drake

For Friday, August 1

MARCH 21 to APRIL 20 (Aries)—An unusualy interesting and diversified day. Accomplishment is within your grasp now. Both business in general and vacation interests favored.

APRIL 21 to MAY 20 (Taurus)—Not listed, planetarily speaking, as a money-making period but certainly one for gains in whatever your field of endeavor. Rebuilding new industries, expansion, shipping interests, produce and dealing in government projects favored.

MAY 21 to JUNE 21 (Gemini)—A sort of in-between day, likely to entice you to useless pleasure-seeking. This is all right if you are on vacation but not if work is the order of the day.

JUNE 22 to JULY 23 (Cancer)—Ingenious ideas and methods and the most modern, helpful equipment and devices should bring excellent advancement and results if put to good use. Friendly gatherings, vacations highly favored.

JULY 24 to AUGUST 22 (Leo)—Should be a very inspiring day to you and your interests. Do make the most of every favorable angle showing on your horizon. Sports events, amusements, inventions favored.

AUGUST 23 to SEPTEMBER 23 (Virgo) — The least unnerved you are, the greater your achievement. Some excellent influences for building, reconstructing, engineering, improving inventions working with metals, tools, machinery.

SEPTEMBER 24 to OCTOBER 23 (Libra) — "Make haste slowly" is a wise motto for today. Steady careful management and plans will secure better results and less errors. Confer, if in doubt, with those whose judgment and information fit them for counseling.

OCTOBER 24 to NOVEMBER 22 (Scorpio) — Inactive period as far as star aspects are concerned. Keep up the tempo of your work to agree with the demands made upon you. Curtail any desire to be careless or neglect necessary details.

NOVEMBER 23 to DECEMBER 22 (Sagittarius) — Particularly auspicious now for heart and personal interests. Maintain a steady, calm activity. Charge each day's effort up as an integral part of your long-range campaign to attain your objective.

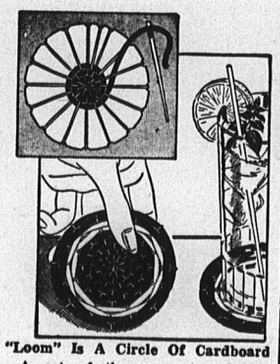
DECEMBER 23 to JANUARY 21 (Capricorn) — Your influences coincide with those of Scorpio natives. Don't be distracted from your tasks by outside, unworthy interference. Clean up unfinished work, then fully enjoy your holiday.

JANUARY 22 to FEBRUARY 20 (Aquarius) — A fine day, say your stars. Of course, you must cooperate. Nothing is handed to you on a silver platter these days. Reward comes to energetic DOERS. Be one of them.

FEBRUARY 21 to MARCH 20 (Pisces) — Vibrations identical to Aquarians'. Bar any thoughts detrimental to the prompt and efficient completion of your routine. Cut corners to eliminate red tape that hampers really productive ability.

A CHILD BORN ON THIS DAY is a vast storehouse of vim, vigor and vitality. This must be properly controlled lest it be wasted, expended in wrong activities. Religion is your great stabilizer and director. Don't permit misuse of your exuberance to alienate friendly cooperation by others. And be careful not to let your spending habits exceed your income.

Set of Cheery Coasters You Will Enjoy Weaving



"Loom" Is A Circle Of Cardboard

A set of these smart red-and-white coasters is so delightfully easy to weave!

You use soft cord on a "loom" which is really a 3½-inch circle cut from heavy cardboard. To prepare this "loom" for weaving you divide its edge, with pencil marks, into 16 equal sections. Cut V-shaped notches at each mark and a 17th notch between any 2 notches.

Then paste one end of the red cord to the centre and carry it across the loom, through a notch, and through notch across loom to opposite notch.

When you have wound through every notch, you've set up what's called the warp threads. Then bring cord back to centre where you start weaving with it, going over and under warp threads as in darning.

When your circle's 2¼ inches in diameter cut the red cord and tie white cord to it, weaving with the white for 2 rows. Then go back to red, finishing by slip-stitching cord to the nearest loop.

You can easily make yourself doilies, belts and purses, too, on cardboard "looms." Our 32-page booklet tells how, in detail. Also explains simple methods of weaving lovely place mats, pillow tops, knitting bags, other useful novelties.

Send 20c in coins for your copy of How To Weave Useful Novelties to The Guardian Home Service. Be sure to write plainly your Name, Address and the Name of booklet.

THE COOK'S CORNER

LEMON MAYONNAISE

Combine 1 egg, 1-4 cup fresh lemon juice, 1 teaspoon mustard, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 tablespoon sugar, and a dash of pepper or paprika. Then beat 1 pint salad oil in slowly, using a whirl-type beater. Continue beating until dressing is thick. Makes 2 1-2 cups.

CORN AND BACON LUNCHEON DISH

One can whole kernel corn; 1 cup cracker crumbs; 1 1-2 cups milk; 2 eggs, yolks and whites beaten separately; 1 green pepper, chopped fine; 8 slices breakfast bacon. Mix together the corn, cracker crumbs, milk and egg-yolks. Saute the chopped pepper in 2 tablespoons butter, then add this to the corn mixture. Season well, add stiffly beaten eggwhites and pour into well-greased casserole. Lay bacon slices on top. Bake at 350 degrees about thirty minutes, or until well-heated and bacon brown and crisp.

Serve from the casserole, with a green salad.

GOOSEBERRY FOOL

Head and tail 1 quart of gooseberries, put in porcelain pan with 1 pint of water and cook until fruit turns yellow and swells; drain well press through a colander and let cool after adding 2 cups of sugar. Beat the yolks of 2 eggs light, adding 1 quart of milk and a dash of nutmeg. Cook until like thin cream, add the gooseberries and serve perfectly cold.

New York Style Letter
By Anne M. Griffin New York

Here comes the revolution — in play clothes. New shorts must be cut "little boy" style, and are usually worn with a shirtwaist blouse which must have long full sleeves. Anna Lee, popular English screen star now in Hollywood, goes out to play in a one-piece ensemble of delectable pink linen. Fitted shorts have a turned-up cuff, the shirtwaist blouse has full sleeves gathered at shoulder and tight cuff.

Many play clothes feature full sleeves which the stars wear in Palm Springs. We saw Signe Hasso wearing shorts of crisp white sharkskin with narrow red piping down the side seams, military style. Her long-sleeved blouse is sheer blue cotton narrowly striped in white.

Well, what are you waiting for? You can make identical outfits for yourself and easily, too, from simple-to-sew patterns. Send for your copy of our Fashion Book today, and select your favorites from all the gay, style-minded play clothes illustrated in full color on its pages.

The yearning to go back to the soil, to plant growing things, tend them and watch them bloom, seems to be growing by leaps and bounds, especially in the feminine world. You may like to dig in overalls or denim slacks.... very workmanlike or perhaps you prefer to stay strictly feminine in flowered cottons, but whatever your heart desire be sure it is cut on functional lines. Your flowered percale apron, will, like as not, have big, roomy pockets for your necessary implements and is worn over a peasant frock. A sun shading sunbonnet is also a wise idea if you don't want to burn unnecessarily or are running away from a freckled nose. Look for sturdy fabric that won't mind frequent tubbings and gay colors that rival the brilliance of your growing flowers.

By September it is anticipated 83 schools will be operating under the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan.

Needlecraft—
—For The Home

This pretty, beruffled pinafore has its own matching sunbonnet and is just right to wear on Summer days. The fitted waistband gives a slim, youthful line and the interesting pockets add a gay note. A tailored blouse is also included in the pattern, and you can wear the pinafore as a dress or a sunback frock on very warm days. The buttoned back makes it easy to slip into without mussing a curl on your head. Either eyelet or matching ruffles give your new striped pinafore ensemble a fresh, cool appearance.

Style No. 3354 is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20. Size 16 requires 4 1-2 yards of 35-inch fabric for pinafore and bonnet; 1 1-2 yards for blouse.
