In Memoriam

HAROLD McKENNA

On Tuesday, September 7th, many friends learned with regret the death of Harold McKenna, youngest son of Dr. S. J. and Mrs. McKenna of Oyster Bed Bridge.

Though in delicate health for several years, Harold worked with his father until a few weeks before his death. Imbued with strong principles of faith received from his truly Christian parents, he accepted with resignation to God's will, his illness and death at the early age of 23. He had desired to begin a course of higher studies as his brothers have done, but, on account of ill health, he was obliged to sacrifice his noble and high ambitions. He was of a quiet disposition, yet he took an active interest in the social affairs of the parish.

During his illness, the deceased was visited by Rev. Father Herrell of Lot 65, by Rev. Father O'Sullivan, C. S. S. R., Charlottetown, and by his pastor, Rev. C. Peters who prepared him for death. He is survived by his sorrowing parents, by two brothers, Rev. Ronald McKenna of Regina and Reginald, medical student at Dalhousie, and by one sister, Beatrice, Mrs. A. G. McGougan, Ont.

The funeral which was largely attended was held from his late residence to St. Augustine's church, Rustico, where a Requiem High Mass was celebrated by Rev. C. Peters. Assisting in the sanctuary were Rev. Father Herrell and Rev. Father Dalton of Hope River. The members of the Holy Name Society to which the deceased belonged led the funeral procession. The following offerings and messages of sympathy were received.

True By The Sun

"Driving is only part of it," he went on. "Mr. Vaughn has no need of a full-time chauffeur. Off jobs in and about the house, an extra man so to speak. The last one couldn't get on with the women."

"Of course you're too good for the job," Mrs. MacPherson said to Jim. "But it would be something, anyway, nobody need know who you are. And you could board here with us."

"I'd like that," Jim smiled gravely. "I do want a job," he continued. "But Mr. Mac is right. I don't know how to do anything—it would be an imposition on Mr. Vaughn and a great imposition on you."

"But what are you going to do?" Mrs. MacPherson asked anxiously. Jim rose from the patent rocker. "Jock and I are going out to see the place," he said, snapping his fingers at the dog. "Then we're coming back for supper."
MacPherson went outside with Jim and the collie.

"Are things so bad with you?" he asked, breaking the silence which followed Mrs. MacPherson's exit.
"Not too rosy," Jim answered. Silence again, presently MacPherson asked hesitantly, "Was there nothing left—of your uncle's fortune?"
"Very little. Only enough to take care of Uncle James and Aunt Emily. Incredible, isn't it?"
MacPherson did not reply at once. Unconscious of the revealing gesture, he polished his pipe against his nose. He and the conscience were grappling again. The strain of the conflict was visible in his lean face.

"Would you like the job here?" he asked at length. "I've the privilege of engaging whoever I please."
"Thank you," Jim answered. "I can't do that."
"It's no easy job. You'd earn you wages. Fifteen dollars and keep."
"At that figure I should be overpaid. No I have definite plans for the future."
"As Leslie said, it would be something," MacPherson continued. "I appreciate that," Jim's voice was husky. He looked at his old friend and smiled, a crooked smile which did not reach his eyes.
"Well, do as you think best," MacPherson's hand touched Jim's arm for a moment. "If you want to stay, you can have the job. I must see to the men now. Supper in half an hour."

Bond, of Ottawa, Canada, met recently in the Capital (September 30) after a separation of 52 years. Looking the picture of health, the twins will shortly visit their oldest brother in Perth, Ontario, when he celebrates his 103th birthday.
