ANNOUNCEMENTS IN IMPEPERIAL COMMONS

Drastic Measures Adopted in Welsh Coal Fields. Marquis of Landsdowne Again Hints at Conscription. Great Success of War Loan

(Special to the Guardian.)
LONDON, July 13.—The session of Parliament to-day was marked by a series of most important announcements by Ministers. After the House of Commons at the suggestion of Premier Asquith, who moved it in an eloquent speech, passed a resolution expressing gratification at the success of General Botha in conquering German South-West Africa, Chancellor of Exchequer Reginald McKenna announced that subscriptions to the new war loan had reached the unprecedented figure of nearly £600,000,000 ($3,000,000,000), not including small sums received at post offices.

President of Board of Trade Walter Runciman aroused the House to further cheers by a statement that in view of the failure of the South Wales coal owners and miners to reach an agreement on the wage dispute, the Government had decided to apply to the mining industry the Munitions of War Act. This makes it an offense to take part in a strike or lockout until the differences have been reported to the Board of Trade and the Board has referred the matter for settlement by one of the methods prescribed by the Act. A very serious view is taken of the refusal of miners to accept the compromise, for even in the face of the decision of the Government they are threatening defiance. Most of the coal for the navy comes from South Wales and even before the trouble arose the supply was affected by the enlistment in the army of 50,000 of the younger miners, which eventually made it necessary for the Government to stop recruiting in the mining district of Wales. The crisis first threatened three months ago when the miners gave notice to terminate the existing agreements on July 1 and in lieu of these proposed a national programme, giving an all-round increase in wages. The owners objected to the consideration of the new terms during the war and asked the miners to accept existing agreements plus the war bonus. After a series of conferences union officials agreed to recommend the compromise, which was arranged through the Board of Trade. The miners, however, voted yesterday against this and the Government was obliged to take action. The miners assert that their demands would mean no more than sixpence (12 cents) per ton and argue that as the owners are receiving more for their coal than previously they could well pay it. As a matter of fact Mr Runciman to-day also introduced a Bill in the House of Commons to regulate the price of coal.

of a andsdowne, member of the Cabinet without portfolio, stated that twenty or twenty-three British divisions are now in France and Belgium. He expressed the opinion that although recruits are flowing in, the country would not much longer tolerate the anomalies and injustices of the voluntary system, which is taking unequal proportions of married men. He said that the national register would be useful, should it be found necessary to introduce compulsory military services. He intimated that the munitions question is now being satisfactorily handled. Beyond the German claim that they have made further progress in their attacks near Souchez, the French air raid on German communications serving their front in the Woivre and the repulse by both sides of usual attacks, the day was spent on the front without particular incident.

(Special to the Guardian.)
LONDON, July 13.—Six divisions of the British army that went out at the very outset of the war have been followed by others and yet others, and unless I am mistaken we have twenty-two or twenty-three divisions, approximately 420,000 to 440,000 at this moment in the European theatre.

Lord Lansdowne made this statement in moving the second reading of the National Registration Bill in the House of Lords this evening. He added that all this time War Secretary Kitchener has been recruiting his armies, and the stream has been flowing in a volume which was a matter of surprise to most people. The stream of equipment did not flow so satisfactorily, but prodigious efforts had been made to remedy the errors. He was glad to think these efforts had been attended with a considerable amount of success. The Bill, said Lord Lansdowne, was not intended to introduce compulsory service, but if compulsory service ever should become necessary a national registration would greatly assist in introducing it.

PREMIER SIR ROBERT BORDEN ENTERTAINED AT LUNCHEON

In British House of Commons. On Behalf of the People of Canada He Brought the Message that Whatever was Necessary to bring the War to an Honourable and Triumphant end Canada would do Her Part.

(Special to the Guardian.)
LONDON, July 13.—Speaking at a luncheon given in his honour in the House of Commons to-day, Premier Borden, alluding to what had been said re Canada's part in the war, said there was no doubt in his mind what the part would be. "I took the responsibility four days before the actual declaration of war of assuring the Imperial Government that if war should unhappily intervene they might be assured Canada would regard the quarrel as her own and do her part in maintaining the integrity of the Empire. We are not a military nation in Canada, we are a peace loving and peace pursuing people. The great task of development within our own borders is waiting before us. Although for a struggle such as this we were naturally unprepared, the Minister of Militia succeeded in placing on the plains of Valcartier in six weeks 35,000 men. We have sent overseas up to the present nearly 70,000 men, including troops doing garrison duty in the West Indies. We have to-day in Canada 70,000 men under training. The response from every province has been so warm that our difficulty has been to get arms and equipment. So far as men are concerned they are there in abundance. So far as preparations are concerned, we are in very much the same difficultly as yourselves, unprepared for war on such a tremendous scale. In this conflict we are engaged with great nations whose military preparations extended over more than half a century, whose aim so far as we can comprehend it had been world-wide supremacy by force of arms. Naturally in the opening months we could not accomplish all that was necessary, but I take comfort in this that for purposes of war as for other purposes the resources of this Empire are not only abundant but almost limitless. There is yet time for that preparation which perhaps ought to have been made earlier. The day of peril came before our preparation had been fully reached. Looking back on what we had to face, I venture to think the condition to-day is one on which we can fairly congratulate ourselves. I have no fear for the future, though the struggle may be long and entail sacrifices which we did not anticipate at first. I think I may bring to you, on behalf of the people of Canada, this message, that in whatever is necessary to bring the war to an honourable and triumphant conclusion Canada is prepared to take her part. I am sure this is true also of every dominion of the Empire."

Sir Robert, in concluding, paid a special tribute to the work of General

Botha in Africa and the Australians and New Zealanders in the Dardanelles. He also alluded feelingly to the admirable and masterly manner in which the British bore themselves against overwhelming numbers in the retreat from Mons. His final sentences were, "After the conclusion of peace it is beyond question that large matters will come up for consideration by the statesmen of the United Kingdom and overseas dominions. It is not desirable that I should dwell upon these considerations. I said what had to be said with considerable fullness and also with some emphasis three years ago. What I then said represents my convictions now. I don't doubt that problems which will then be presented and which will be of an exceedingly difficult and complex character, will find a wide and just solution, and in thanking you for the honour you have done me and the dominion which I represent, let me express the hope and aspirations that in confronting the immense responsibilities which devolve upon those inheriting so great an Empire as ours we shall so bear ourselves, whether in this Mother Island or in the overseas dominions, that the future shall hold in store no reproach to us for lack of vision or want of courage or for failure in duty."

(Special to the Guardian.)
LONDON, July 12.—A sheaf of questions, designed to secure a discussion on the shell controversy and the differences between David Lloyd George, Minister of Munitions and Viscount Haldane, former Minister of War, were asked in the Commons this afternoon but the Premier firmly declined to satisfy the inquiring members of Parliament.

The Prime Minister pleaded that any such discussion under present circumstances could serve no good purpose and that it would be detrimental to the best interests of the nation.

MOVEMENT FOR AEROPLANE WARFARE

Aeronautical Society Advocate Building a Fleet of Ten Thousand Aeroplanes to Bombard German Munition Works.

(Special to the Guardian.)
NEW YORK, July 13.—A News Agency despatch from London says: With the slogan win the war from the air, English aeronautical men to-day launched a movement for a Ministry of Aviation and the building of a fleet of ten thousand aeroplanes to deluge German ammunition works and supply works with bombs. L. S. DeSables, lecturer in aeronautics at the Royal Military Academy, Woolwich, is the real leader of the campaign to create a gigantic air fleet. With him are associated H. G. Wells, the British novelist; C. C. Grey, London, aeronautical editor, and a score of experts in aviation. The plan is to organize a public sentiment through lectures and newspaper articles. Behind the movement is the idea that England's salvation is in air. "Batter down the Rhine bridges by day air raids and trench warfare in France is ended," said a statement issued in support of the new movement to-day. Send ten thousand aeroplanes carrying five bombs over the Krupp munition works and the German armies will be paralyzed. Destroy the bridges over the Meuse over which supplies are carried to the German armies and the Kaiser will be on his knees.

IMPERIAL THANKS TO BOTH AND SMUTS

(Special to the Guardian.)
LONDON, July 13.—The Commons to-day voted thanks to General Louis Botha, General Jan Christian Smuts and the forces of the Union of South Africa upon the successful conclusion of the campaign in German South-West Africa. Premier Asquith, who moved the resolution, paid a tribute to what he characterized as the "remarkable campaign which has just been brought to a remarkable conclusion." "The German dominion of South-West Africa has ceased to exist," he said. "I ask the House," said the Premier in his peroration, "to testify to the admiration of the whole Empire for, and its gratitude to, the illustrious General who has rendered such estimable service to the Empire, which he entered by option and which he has become one of the most honored and cherished sons, and his dauntless and much-enduring troops, whether of Burgher or British birth, who fought like brethren side by side in a cause which is equally as dear to them as to us, the broadening of the bounds of human liberty."

DECLARES COTTON IS REACHING GERMANY

(Special to the Guardian.)
LONDON, July 12.—Sir Henry Dalziel, Liberal, and Mr. D. F. Pennyfather, Unionist have come to the fore by insisting in the Commons to-day that the British Government should make it clear why it had not declared cotton contraband. Failure to do so, it was pointed out, was prolonging the war as cotton is vital in the manufacture of explosive, and is continually reaching Germany through neutral countries.

Lord Robert Cecil, Parliamentary Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs, replied that the Government must consider the interests of neutrals and that the present plans to keep cotton out of Germany are considered effective. If it were shown conclusively that cotton is still going into Germany he added, the Government would take any steps necessary to check it.

GERMAN ASSAILANTS WERE DECIMATED

(Special to the Guardian.)
PARIS, July 13.—Official—in front of our positions at the Labyrinth a German attack was attempted last night under the protection of a violent curtain fire. The assailants were decimated completely and thrown back upon their lines. An aerial squadron of 35 aeroplanes ascended this morning, in spite of a wind blowing 40 miles an hour, and bombarded the railroad station strategically established by the Germans at St. Gneules les Hamonchattel. This station serves the region of Calonne trenches and that of the forest of Apremont. Very important stores of every kind, particularly ammunition, were concentrated there. Our aviators dropped upon these objectives 171 bombs of ninety kilograms each. The bombardment started several fires. All our machine guns opened, although they had been violently cannonaded.

SHIPS WARNED TO LOOK OUT FOR BOMBS

WASHINGTON, July 13.—Warning to look out for bombs concealed in their holds was flashed to-night from the naval wireless towers at Arlington to two ships at sea which sailed from New Orleans, July 9th.

Both the vessels, the British steamships Hotho Head and Baron Napier, cleared with cargoes of mules for the British army, July 8th, and sailed the next day, the former for Dublin and Belfast, via Norfolk, and the latter direct for Avonmouth.

Sending of the warning was ordered by Secretary of the Navy Daniels, upon receiving a telegram from a New Orleans newspaper saying a letter to that paper signed "Pearce" indicated that explosives had been placed aboard those vessels.
