ONLY CIVILIZED DOGS BARK Does bark only when they are in association with man. The dog in a state of nature merely howls, howls or whines. Possibly the act of barking is a dog's attempt to speak, as for instance, when a pet dog sees one carrying food he will bark as his way of asking for some. Another dog, which is in the habit of going to bed at eight, will bark to tell one he is ready when the time comes. Although the dog is so much a child of man, his name is used in many expressions of abuse and reproach. Such phrase probably arose in the East, where dogs being scavengers, are considered of very little account.

A Harvard undergraduate, contrary to the regulations, was entertaining his sister, when they heard some one on the stairs. Hastily hiding the girl behind a curtain, he went to the door and confiding an aged man who was revisiting the scene of his youth and was desirous of seeing his old rooms. Obtaining permission, he remarked: "Ah, yes, the same old room." Going to the window, he said, "Ah, yes, the same old view," and peering behind the curtain he exclaimed, "Ah, yes, the same old name."

"My sister, sir," explained the student, "Ah, yes," replied the visitor, "the same old story."

DREAMS I was sitting all alone, dear, Where I sat so oft before; The hills of Paradise, so clear, In the distance as of yore. And a fountain flowed again, dear, The days were as bright and fair; And the blossoms bloomed as then dear, While the fragrance filled the air. Roses in my hands I pressed, dear, My little plot to adorn. When I told them to my breast, dear, My heart was pined by the thorn. Then I broke the soft dark day, dear, Gently I held them under; But oh, as I turned away, dear, My heart seemed torn and sore. Eggs in the earth they sleep, dear, Waiting for the sunny spring, In a loving father's keep, dear, They will have no thorn, no sting. The fountain will flow anew, dear, And Paradise will be seen, dear, And my dearest dream come true. —R. M. ACARD.

Presentations to Retiring Railway Men

The following addresses were recently presented to retiring railway men the first to Mr. Archib. MacDougall being read by Mr. Roland Melkie, and the second to Mr. Garnett by Mr. S. F. Hodgson. Suitable gifts accompanied the addresses.

Mr. Archib. MacDougall, Stores Department, Canadian National Railway, Charlottetown.

We, the undersigned employees of the Stores and Mechanical Departments of the Canadian National Railway at Charlottetown, cannot allow you to retire from the service of the Railway without expressing to you our appreciation of the manner in which you have, during the past forty years, performed your duties as an Inspector in the Stores Department.

Your uniform courtesy and good humor shall not seem forgotten by us. It always seemed a pleasure to you, no matter how busy, to answer the courteous reply to all questions respecting supplies. We know in many instances your patience must have been taxed, but you were always equal to the occasion and now that you are leaving us, in the evening of your life, we desire to let you know that your ability has been greatly appreciated by us. "Say it with flowers" has become an axiom, but flowers, however beautiful, fade and wither. We desire, therefore, much pleasure in placing in your hands the accompanying gift as a reminder of our good will and esteem.

Trusting that you will be spared for many years to enjoy your up-graduation and wishing you and yours health and prosperity, we are,

Sincerely yours, Employees of Stores and Mechanical Departments.

Mr. J. D. Garnett, Charlottetown.

Dear Sir:—We, the undersigned, your fellow employees of the Canadian National Railway at Charlottetown, cannot permit you to leave the service with expressing to you our appreciation of the manner in which you have, during the past forty years, performed your duties as an Inspector in the Stores Department.

C.N.R. May be Sued As Private Corporation

MONTREAL, March 22.—Because administered by a company, the Canadian National Railways are liable for prosecution before any court having jurisdiction, and the state-owned roads lose their privilege of being dealt with solely through Exchequer Court.

It was held by the Court of Appeal in a judgment delivered yesterday by which a finding of the Superior Court allowing Dame C. Ross $25,000 damages for the death of her son, killed in Mount Royal Tunnel on December 16, 1919, is sustained. Half of this amount was assessed against the National Railways and half against the Mount Royal Tunnel Company.

One of the grounds of appeal by the National Railways was that, while the work of the company had been added to the former, the National Railways, this did not change the legal status of the road, and was only used to designate the line operated by the Government.

To this the property of the Canadian National Railways was placed in the same position as any company in respect of litigation.

The Court of Appeal quoted the Act of Incorporation of the railway company to show that there was no real and not only nominal incorporation, whereby the roads were placed in the same position as any company in respect of litigation.

The case was placed in the hands of the jury last night. There will be a sealed verdict this morning.

Uet by Maine's Senator Wins Higher Tariff on Potatoes

WASHINGTON, March 24.—Lobbyists resist to all sorts of stunts to speed legislation in which they are interested, and votes for various measures are obtained by various means, according to one of the last bluffs fired by W. S. Kenyon of Iowa, who recently resigned to accept a Federal judgeship.

But the "cave" for novel methods to speed legislation and for strategy goes to Senator Fernald and Hale of Maine. Without indicating their purpose these dignified Senators sought permission to appear before the Senate Finance Committee last week, of course Senator Fernald's testimony made it easy for them to get an audience. Upon entering the hearing room Senator Fernald was politely sought by the members.

"I want to talk about the schedule on Irish potatoes," said Senator Fernald. "Now it happened to be on St. Patrick's day, and his colleagues thought Senator Fernald was joking. However, he soon discharged their basic conclusion, and made an earnest appeal for a tariff of 36 cents a bushel on Irish potatoes. He pointed out that potatoes are one of the chief products of Maine and that no finer tubers are raised anywhere. He pointed out that the present tariff of 25 cents a bushel does not exclude shipments of potatoes from Ireland, and since that is now to be a free state he thought production would increase, and for that reason greater safeguards are needed.

Serious attention was given to the plea of Senator Fernald, which was fortified by an able argument along the same lines advanced by Senator Hale. After they had indicated they had nothing further to say on the subject, Senator Watson spoke with a gleam in his eye.

"Senator Fernald, we were much impressed by your argument, but we understand that you have a voice and if you will favor us with a song, say, 'Throw Out the Life Line' it may aid you somewhat."

Blushing but without much merriment, Senator Fernald, in a strong well modulated voice, sang the song requested.

While Senator Fernald was singing Senator Watson applauded at every stanza and often joined in the demonstration. The members of the committee insisted on an encore, and Senator Fernald favored them with "Lead Kindly Light," and the report is that Senator Hale joined in low tones.

After the report Senator Watson on the part of the committee announced: "The duty on Irish potatoes will be 25 cents per bushel. There is no denying such a proposal."

LOVELY LONELY ISLAND

Christmas Island, in the Indian Ocean, that lonely voyagers have come upon in the holiday season and have named accordingly. The island has been described by the Society's health, as an open one of the loneliest and most desolate in the world. And its possession of tree-climbing crabs and a supple-scented tree gives it a right to be classed as one of the queerest. The island, 12 miles long by nine miles broad, is in reality made up of the slopes and top of a huge mountain peak. Soundings show that if the waters of the ocean were drained away a rough peninsula 15,000 feet high would stand alone in a plain, the ocean sand forming the last 1,000 feet of its slope.

DEPENDED ON THE WEATHER

First Office Boy—It's pretty good weather for baseball. Second Office Boy—Yes, I don't think my grandmother will die until it gets warmer.

BITTING YOUNG HORSES

Particular attention should be paid to biting young horses, as tubercles, for one reason, are found in their mouths much more tend from such and dry rot, prices of old ones, though the latter are often spoiled by improper bits being forced upon them. A careful examination of the mouth should therefore, be a matter of frequent occurrence, and not only should the condition of the corners of the mouth be inspected, but also that of the tongue and, in fact, the whole of the interior.

A diachin of the interior of horse's mouth to a pint warm water may be used in such cases as soon as possible, but whatever remedy is applied it should be given in small quantities, and the horse
