PLUS FINAL CHAPTER KING OF THE MOUNTIES AND OPENING CHAPTER THRILLING NEW SERIAL GANG BUSTERS

One Picture In A Hundred And 100 In 1!

Uproarious stars to tickle your ribs! Beautiful girls to tickle your fancy! Cole Porter songs to tickle your ears! Grand entertainment to tickle you pink! No wonder it's one picture in a hundred . . . it's a hundred pictures in one!

"Something to Shout About," which opens to-day at the Prince Edward Theatre, is a fast and furious fun frolic of stars, girls and delightful surprises . . . set to some of the grandest tunes you ever shuffled a foot to and packing the added thrills of vaudeville entertainment at its best! With a cast headed by Don Ameche, Janet Blair and Jack Oakie, "Something to Shout About" features such Broadway - famous personalities as William Gaxton, Cobina Wright, Jr., and Hazel Scott, the solo swing sensation of Cafe Society and the air waves!

Cole Porter penned the new hit tunes for "Something to Shout About," which was produced and directed by Gregory Ratoff. The tunes include "Something to Shout About," "You'd Be So Nice to Come Home To," "Lotus Bloom," "I Always Knew," "Hasta Luego," and "Through Thick and Thin."

"Sagebrush Law" Has Novel Theme

A son's supreme effort to clear his dead father's name is the foundation for the plot of "Sagebrush" Law," Tim Holt's latest starrer for RKO Radio, opening Thursday at the Empire Theatre. How he comes to grips with the crooks who have stolen the bank's funds and pointed the finger of guilt toward his father, president of the bank, provides Holt with one of his most thrilling and interesting adventure dramas to date.

Cliff (Ukulee Ike) Edwards and Joan Barclay are featured in this fast-shooting drama of a fight of good against evil laid in a small mining town in the west.

Mess Room Chatter Of Canada's Airmen

By Louis V. Hunter
Canadian Press Staff Writer

WITH THE R.C.A.F. SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND, June 26 — (CP) — If cake baked by the Czecho-Slovakian catering officer at an R.C.A.F. fighter squadron is as tasty as the coffee he makes he is in for a busy time and the Jerries who come up to fight Canadians over France are in for a hotter time.

No sooner had the new catering officer arrived at the station than he posted in the pilots' mess the folowing notice:

"All operational pilots are being informed by catering officer that there is a premium in this mess. For every Hun destroyed a special cake is awaiting the concerned pilot. Good luck".

The officer has already improved the coffee. He makes it Canadian style "and that's something," says the pilots.

Steinbeck Tells How Air Gunners Prepare Their Weapons for Raid

Fighters at English Bomber Station Carefully Clean 50-Calibre Machine Guns, Part by Part, to Insure Perfect Operation Aloft

John Steinbeck, the distinguished novelist and playwright, now on an assignment in England as a war correspondent, continues his description of the life of the crew of an American bomber

(By John Steinbeck)

(Special to the New York Herald Tribune and Charlottetown Guardian, Copyright, 1943

BOMBER STATION IN ENGLAND, June 29—It is almost 11 o'clock and dusk is falling. The armor room is a lean-to against the repair hanger. There on the racks are the rows of 50-calibre machine guns, oiled and cleaned, lying side by side. When the mission is completed and the ships come back, the gunners dismount their guns and bring them in. There they clean them carefully and after that the armament men cover them with oil to keep them from rusting. The combination of cold of the altitude and heat from firing and of moisture makes the guns rust very quickly. Here they lie in oil until a new mission is alerted.

Corporal Harpold, of Dallas, is the armament man. He has been in the Army for nine years and during that time he has sometimes been a sergeant and sometimes a private. Right now he is a corporal. The things that happen to Harpold can happen to any one. He was a civilian ground crew man for the Flying Tigers in China a little while ago. He knows his guns thoroughly. He has even been a gunnery instructor.

It would be possible for a goldbrick gunner to have his work done by the ground man except that they aren't goldbrick gunners for very long. If your life and the life of your ship depend on those long steel snouts, you are likely to want to see that they are all right yourself.

The men bring their oily guns to the work benches. They strip them completely and then with clean cloths they go over every part, rubbing and rubbing with new cloths until the cloth shows no sign of oil. It takes a long time. There is no way of doing it quickly. Every part of breech and recoil action must be dry and smooth.

Guns Wiped Clean

The gunners of the Mary Ruth come into the gun room, for now they have a very delicate operation to perform. They must wipe every bit of oil from their guns. Where they will be flying tomorrow at 30,000 feet the temperature will be at 40 below zero. If any oil is left on the moving parts of the machine guns it will freeze at that temperature, the gun will jam and then the "man with the red beard" will be in close enough to make his kill and you and your crew will find yourselves in a prison camp, if you are lucky.

Sergeant Brown, the tail gunner, has had his gun jam on the last two missions and he is worried. He has worked over them for hours. He has taken them out on the testing range to fire them and they have worked beautifully. Yet they jammed in the air. This is a mysterious thing. He says: "If they jam again tomorrow I'm going to put in for new guns."

Magics Fill the Air

There are magics in the air. You get as near as you can to causes with your senses and after that there are things that happen which you can't get near to and yet they happen. You must accept them because they affect your life and the probability of its continuing. These are things which cause what might stupidly be called superstition. Take Bomb Boogie, for instance. She is a good ship but she never gets to a target. And every bit of mechanical skill available has been expended on her. They have even changed her engines.

The care of the guns is slow and tender, almost motherly. The parts are held up to the light and inspected and polished again. Grooves and slides are rubbed over and over. When the gun is reassembled the gunners work the slides by hand, over and over. The Mary Ruth has two flexible guns in the nose. The top turret man has two. The tail gunner has two. The waist gunners have one each, and the ball turret, in the belly, has two. The Mary Ruth bristles with guns and when they are all working they can throw a lot of fire.

Now the guns are ready. The gunners wrap the working parts very carefully in clean, dry cloths to keep out any possible moisture. They place them carefully back on their racks. Brown holds up a bleeding finger. "For a week I had whole hands," he says. "And that's the only time they've been uncut since I enlisted. I've been wounded so much, handling these guns. I'm going to put in for the Purple Heart."

"Killed First Man"

We go into the mess hall for a cup of coffee—the only good coffee obtainable in England. Sergeant Crain folds low over his aluminum mess cup which holds a full pint.

"A few days ago I killed my first man," he says. He takes a big swallow of the scalding coffee. "I've been wondering about it. I'm not a killing kind of a man. I don't get angry that way. I've been thinking about that man. I poured my guns into him and he died. I've kicked out all the things I've been told I ought to think about, like it's good to kill Germans and all the other things like 'thou shalt not kill.' And when those things are kicked out, I find I don't think anything about it at all. It's just something that happened. I'm not glad or sorry. I don't have any feeling about it at all. Isn't that funny?" He looked up. His eyes are the washed-blue of Texas. "Don't you suppose I ought to have some kind of feeling about it?" he asks.

IN MEMORIAM

MRS. MALCOLM F. MacDONALD

The death occurred at Eldon on June 16th of Mrs. Malcolm F. MacDonald in her 66th year. Mrs. MacDonald was the daughter of the late Stephen and Mrs. Carrier of Earnscliffe.

Last January she and her husband celebrated their Golden Wedding Anniversary in Walpole, Mass., where they were visiting their son and daughters.

Always of a cheerful disposition and being an efficient practical nurse, her presence was frequently sought in the sick room of friends and relatives. In the midst of her busy life she always found time to participate in any community uplift.

She was a member of St. John's Presbyterian Church, Belfast, and for almost half a century an active member of the Eldon Auxiliary of the Women's Missionary Society being presented with a life membership certificate by that Auxiliary. She was also its efficient secretary up to the time of her illness. She will be greatly missed in her home and community and in the church which she loved.

Besides her husband there are left to mourn their loss four sons and five daughters namely—Milton and Fred in Washington, U. S. A.; Frank in Eldon, and Malcolm in Walpole, Mass.; Estelle (Mrs. M. MacDonald) of Eldon; Mary (Mrs. H. M. Donaldson) of New York; Catherine (Mrs. W. P. Carr), Ethel (Mrs. J. L. Trenholm) both of Walpole, Mass., and Florence at home.

Also two sisters Mrs. W. Judson of Cuina Point and Mrs. J. D. Gillis of Washington, D. C.

The funeral service was conducted by her pastor Rev. E. C. Evans.

The large congragation which filled the spacious church and the beautiful floral tributes evidenced the esteem in which she was held. The pall-bearers were all old old neighbours— J. R. MacWilliams, J. W. MacLeod, J. A. Martin, Percy MacLean, J. T. MacWilliams and Joe Robertson. Interment in Belfast Cemetery.

"Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord, that they may rest from their labours and their works do follow them."

Card of Thanks

Malcolm F. MacDonald and family of Eldon wish to express their sincere thanks to all friends and neighbours for kindness and sympathy during their sad bereavement. 6-30-1i

Navy Praises Two Divers

OTTAWA, June 28 — (CP) —The Navy paid tribute tonight in a press release to the "marked efficiency and perseverance of two of its divers who recently saved the lives of two half drowned ratings pulled from the chill waters of Halifax harbour after their small boat had been capsized by a large freighter.

The rescuers were petty officer Harold Bowden, R.C.N.R., of Toronto, and leading seaman Robert Wigmore, R.C.N., of Victoria, and the men they saved were able seamen Ronald Street, R.C.N.R., of Regina, and Hugh Webber, R.C.N.V.R. of Windsor, Ont
