BRIDES FLEE FIRE

Brides of a year, Mrs. Arthur Gagne, left, formerly of Toronto, and Mrs. George Maxey, Toronto, lost all their clothing except their night attire when they fled from the blazing dormitory of the Imperial Iron Corp at St. Catharines early Tuesday. They went to the plant last week when their husbands started work as cooks at the new dormitories. Mr. Maxey held a wet handkerchief over his nose, crawled back into the burning building to save their purses.

WE'RE NOT SUPERSTITIOUS, BUT LET'S NOT TAKE CHANCES Nowadays, our brains accept quite happily all that science and modern discoveries have put at our disposal, but our emotions are less modern, less matter-of-fact. They still retain memories of ancient times, times when people wondered why it rained, why thunder came and why the sun shone.

Broken Mirrors You have broken your mirror and are worried lest it bring you seven years' bad luck? Did you know, though, that this superstition dates from the days when looking-glasses were instruments of divination and fortune-telling?

Bad Show Perhaps the stage has more superstitions than any other profession. Did you know that actors consider it unlucky for anyone to whistle in the theatre, on or off-stage? They say it will automatically make the public whistle at the show.

Bonanza Town Is Debt-Free And Booming

By P. C. DUBOIS Canadian Press Staff Writer

MALARTIC, Que., May 29—(CP)—There's gold—and lots of it—in and about this mining community that mushroomed into a going concern almost overnight and whose citizens, civic officials and Chamber of Commerce boast as "the town of the future".

Debt-free with a reserve of $30,000 built up in the last few years during which the population pyramided from a modest 1,750 in 1939—year of the town's incorporation—to 5,800 at its 1946 census, Malartic has four gold mine producers within its limits, three of them operating in a subdivided area of 286 acres.

And within a radius of 40 miles, in a district consistently referred to as Quebec's richest gold country, is the home of mines such as O'Brien and Cadillac—located between Malartic and Noranda, 40 miles to the west—and Siscoe, Sullivan, Sigms, Lamont and Bourlambaque near Val D'Or, 18 miles to the east.

The shadow of Quebec's worst mine fire April 24 with entombment of 12 miners in the East Malartic Gold Mine—now hangs over the community. But once the shadow has lifted, civic officials are confident that the town again will move forward at its rapid rate of progress.

"Promising Prospects" The town's pure gold producing mines—Canad Inc. Malartic, East Malartic, Malartic Gold Fields and Siden Malartic—employ more than 1,200 men and their properties have a total assessed value of $2,500,000.

Of the four, East Malartic has the highest production value, artic employs the most men and in addition, the Chamber of Commerce lists four mines now under development and 17 others as "promising prospects."

There's a shyness about many of the up-to-date shops in the main business section, while the paint does not appear to have fully dried on neat bungalow-type homes of which 135 were erected in the residential area last year. The extraordinary width of the community's main street would arouse the envy of town-planners of older-established centres.

Friendly and hospitable—characteristics which the people claim are typical of the north country—Malartic's young and old enjoy all the conveniences of a modern community as well as ample means of relaxation. Their spiritual needs are served by four churches—three Roman Catholic and one Baptist—while there is school accommodation for more than 1,000 children.

There are outdoor rinks for hockey in the winter, and a smart diamond—complete with bleachers—for ball in the summer. The ball park and several tennis courts are situated near the East Malartic minehead. There's a playground for children close by.

Those among the "younger fry" who like night life can have it, if not in Malartic at nearby points such as Val D'Or or Cadillac where clubs, complete with floor-shows, and an enormous trade. Malartic has one night club—but no floor show.

To wear a small wooden cross alleged to be made from a splinter from Christ's cross, an amulet which they were sure could save them from the wiles of all evil spirits.
