

LIVING NOT DEAD

OTTAWA, March 30.—Flight-Lieut. Clarence Living, the 19-year-old son of Capt. Alf Living, of the Fleming Con-valescent Home, who was a prisoner of war in Germany, is back in the city. Lieut. Living was a passenger on the Tunisian, which docked at St. John on Saturday. He was officially reported dead when his machine was seen to fall in flames over the enemy lines, but afterwards his father received a communication from him stating that he was alive and well. Lieut. Living joined the R. A. F. when he was 18 years of age, and was flying in France a little over four months.

THANKS TO CANADA FROM A SOLDIER.

Many interesting letters are received from the Repatriation Committee from soldiers returning from overseas, who think it their duty to acknowledge the attention that has been paid them by the various governmental and voluntary activities touching their demobilization.

A private in the 189th Battalion writing from Savabec Station, P.Q. to the Militia Department, has this to say:—

"I have the honor by God's will of having been able to return to Canada with my family. But as I thank God, I also wish to thank the Canadian Government for the care taken of us soldiers during our homeward return in the Scotian. We were accommodated with almost anything we wished to have, including refreshments and other things free of charge. Again I thank the Canadian Government for the kindness and care given by them to the Canadian Government soldiers, including myself, who by God's will

THE PROMOTER'S WIFE

BY JANE PHELPS

BARBARA'S FATHER AND MOTHER COMES TO VISIT CHAPTER LIII.

In all the years we had been married, mother had visited us only once. So my delight can be imagined when I received a letter from her saying she and father would come and stay two weeks with us. That was so like mother—setting the time herself, and adhering strictly to it. She never wanted to interfere with anyone's plans.

I was in a perfect flutter of delight I was so anxious for them to be here, so pleased that they would know how far more prosperous we were now than when they visited us before, when we had been married by a couple of years, and living in the smaller apartment.

"I'll give them just the very best time they ever had," I said to myself as I gave orders as to the comfort while with us.

I did many little things to the guest room to make it more home like for mother. It was so much more elegant than anything to which she was accustomed. I was afraid I would make her feel just a little out-of-place. So I added some "homey" touches—a sewing basket, a Bible with good large print so I would not strain her eyes, a couple of copies of her favorite magazine, a footstool she had spoken of as being so comfortable on her previous visit and, the morning she was expected I decked the room with some of the fashionable flowers such as we had at home in the garden. I remember the one of the maids said to me:

"Oh, why didn't you get rose or something?" And rather looked down on my kitchen-garden bouquet.

Father and mother arrived when they said they would. I had persuaded Neil to go with me to meet them.

"Do plan to be at home to your meals while they are here," I said to him while we waited for the train. "I certainly shall do so as far as I can. But business is business. I can't neglect it even for them."

"I don't expect you to," I was little piqued at his answer. "but be at home as much as possible. The will stay only two weeks. Sure! you can make your plans to be with us?"

Neil made no answer. Just the he had spied them, as they left the train, and had rushed forward to meet them.

I was so happy to see them, so glad they had come, that I forgot all about our conversation, and the Neil had made me no promise to remain at home while father and mother were with us.

It makes my heart beat faste even yet, when I think of the fuss they made over little Robert. If I had thought him the nicest baby in the world before, I was sure of it now. Mother could scarcely bear him out of her arms, although his nurse—one with all the new ideas of how baby should be raised—frowned and shook her head behind mother's back.

"It won't hurt him to be cuddled a little," mother said when I told her. "I feel sorry for babies now days. They are put down and not old. They get very little real, old-fashioned tending. Poor dears."

"But it is better for the babies if physicians agree on that." "I don't care if they do. It doesn't hurt the mother or the baby either to be natural. And it isn't natural to have a baby in the house and not cuddle it."

I took father and mother out in the car every morning. They were astonished at the style in which we now lived. And several times I saw mother look as if she were not wholly pleased. But she said nothing—not until the night before she left. Neil had been out several nights to dinner, and when I had found fault, he had been inclined to act impatient. He had also come in long after they had retired.

"I should rather have a little less laughter, and have more of my husband's society," mother said as I was helping her to pack up, the night before she left us.

"It isn't that, mother. I scarcely think I can make you understand. But Neil is a very big business man—has big deals which depend upon him for their success. He cannot help staying out when these men are in town."

Father, who had been sitting by watching us, now broke in: "I haven't said anything, Bab, but my dear daughter, I am afraid for you and Neil." Then he said some thing under his breath which sounded like "a house of cards."

"Tomorrow—Barbara's Parents Arrive Disapproving."

Well, Well.

HEAR FROM AGAIN

The man who declared that he could resist everything but temptation, has come out with a new saying, viz., that he wouldn't mind obstacles if they didn't get in his way.

SOUND travels at the rate of 400 yard a second, but there are exceptions to the rule: Scandal, 1,000 yards a second; Flattery, 500 yards a second; ruth, 2 1/2 yards a second; an alarm clock, hardly a foot!—Ex.

SPEAKING FROM EXPERIENCE

The young man slid into the jeweler's shop the other day with a furtive air. He handed the jeweler a ring with the stammering statement that he wished it marked "With some names."

"What names do you wish" inquired the jeweler, in a sympathetic tone.

"From Henry to Clara," the young man blushing whispered.

The jeweler looked from the ring to the young man and said, in a fatherly manner, "Take my advice, young man, and have it engraved simply "From Henry."

"NO JOQUE"

A newspaper editor, finding that the letters "j" and "k" were omitted in some typewriting copy, wrote a letter of reprimand to the author who had sent it. The offender replied to this note as follows:—

"Mr. Editor.—Mistakes are liable to happen in the best of regulated families, and to typewriters as well. It is, indeed, a very unfortunate affair, but the 'ep'h' and 'oay' have not damaged. This morning I called at the orphanage of the gentleman whom I bought this outfit but I failed to phind him in; in phact, the orphanice boy says he will not return phor phour or five days. I did not lique the loox ov this variety ov spelling myselph, and consider this no joque but a serious aphair.—Phaithfully yours, J. L."

REVIVE THE OLD GAMES

It is pleasing to note that a movement is on foot to revive "good old sport" in Charlottetown and put the Athletic grounds in shape again. These lines which we penned away back somewhere in the misty nineties will awaken memories of what used to happen out at these same grounds:—

THE GAME

Forget your complaints It's Abbies and Saints— Toddle out there Where they're biting the air— Ripping out hair And wanting to swear. Be not dismayed At the racket they raise The bigger the racket The better it plays. Now don't you like it? That's what we said— No! nobody's hurt, The ball's merely "dead!" Yes! Too bad that fellow Got spoiled on that run But such tackles as that Show what can be done;

CHANGING SEASONS

Full soon the shadetees will be green, the icebergs will be gone; and we will push the old machine across the whiskered lawn. The furnace, in whose maw we've burned a thousand tons of slate, will have the rest it's surely earned, till summer pulls its freight. The day grows long and short the night, and man may save his roll, nor cough up for electric light what didn't go in coal. We'll leave the hovel in the bin, among the dust and slate, and in the garden we'll begin to abhor soon—and late. We'll plant the ocust and the larch, in which the birds will sing, and bless the blooming blasts of March which usher in the spring. The trees which bear the luscious fruits, we'll guard from pests and nares; and gladly plant our gingeeeng roots, and groom our Belgian hares. Ah, life is life, when Spring arrives! To stir the scented soil we work our laughter and our wives, and boss hem as they toil! 'Tis grateful to the soul, indeed, it soothes the nerves that che, to watch the women sow the seed, and ply the hoe and rake. It hears the heart of any man to sit round and smoke, while Julia, Jane and Mary Ann plant spud and artichoke.—Uncle Walt.
