Gives Pointers on Snaring a Husband

Dorothy Dix

How to Get Your Man

If You Want a Husband, First Go Where There Are Marrying Men; Then Feed Him Or Listen to Him or Cling to Him for Support, and You Can Marry Whom You Please

A young woman who frankly admits that she desires to marry asks how to catch a husband.

Well, daughter, that is a hard question to answer, for there are just as many ways of getting your man as there are different kinds of men, and the tactics that work on one will fail with another.

It would be easy enough for every girl to marry if she could just come out and woo the man in the open, and tell him that he looked good to her, and that she would like to have him for her husband.

Unfortunately a lot of fool conventions prevent a woman from taking this short cut to the altar. It isn't considered "nice" for a girl to see a man first.

All of which is difficult and requires skill and finesse in the doing, but still and for all that it can be done, as is conclusively proved by the fact that wedding bells continue to ring out their sweet music.

Of course the basic principle in husband-hunting is never to fish a dry stream. Which is to say that if a girl wants to marry she must go where there are marrying men.

Even beauty and charm are washouts at long range, but even a homely girl and one endowed with a limited amount of "IT" can convince any man with whom she is thrown in daily contact that she has become necessary to him.

This explains why so many girls with rich papas have forsaken their period drawing rooms for business men. They are not in reality hunting jobs, they are hunting husbands, and they have had sense enough to go where the game is plentiful.

Another way of getting your man is to take him by surprise. Did you ever notice how often a man is taken by a strange face and how easily he falls for a new line?

Therefore if by the time a girl is 23 or 24, she hasn't married and still wants to marry, she should have a hunch that it is time for her to seek new fields and strut herself to a fresh audience where it will be a novelty.

Another way of getting your man is by being a patient listener. In reality an enduring pair of ear drums will do more toward getting a girl a husband than a peaches and cream complexion.

Other men simply won't stand for this. Besides, a man would be ashamed to tell another man the egotistical things he tells a woman. So a woman becomes a necessity to a man's happiness.

hung on a hair trigger that will go off at any old joke, can marry whom she pleases.

Still another way of getting your man is by feeding him. Put angel food in your hand and you can roll him into the holy estate and make him put his neck in the yoke.

And still another way to get your man is by the ever reliable clinging-vine route. This is old stuff, but so are men old-fashioned in their reactions toward women.

A man never forgives the woman who tries to help him, but he adores the woman who flops down on his neck and lets him take care of her.

These are only a few of the many ways of getting your man. There are others. As all women know.

MRS. MICHAEL BAGAN

On Monday night, Oct. 13th the remains of the late Mrs. Michael Bagan arrived at Kinkora accompanied by her son and were taken to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Albert McGuigan, cousins of the Bagan family.

Deceased was formerly Catherine M. Phillips, was born 85 years ago in Middleton, (Kinkora parish) and resided there all through her life until death of her husband, sixteen years ago, when her family took her to make her home with them in Cambridge, Mass.

She enjoyed good health all her long life time until last winter when she contracted influenza from effects of which she never regained her former vitality but gradually weakened until Oct. 11 when, fortified by the last rites of her Holy Church, she calmly and peacefully closed her eyes to meet her Saviour, whom she ever strove to serve faithfully while here.

She leaves to mourn their loss, two daughters, Louise, Mrs. Frank Nutter; Minnie, Mrs. John McAulay, and one son, Harry with whom she lived, who with his wife made her declining years very happy; also two nieces, Mrs. John Melver and Mrs. W. Murphy, California, besides a large circle of warm friends who we saw Ashton standing there.

Rev. Babcock Praises Stomach Gas Remedy

"For years I had gas bloating and restless sleep. Adlerika brought relief from gas and gave refreshing sleep." -Rev. J. O. Babcock (Grosset). Unlike most remedies, Adlerika acts on BOTH upper and lower bowel and removes old poisons you never thought were there and which caused gas bloating and restless sleep. The quick action is surprising. Hughes Drug Co., Ltd.

The New Victor

With many entirely new radio and entertainment features announced, great interest centres around the new Victor Radio line of instruments which is offered this year in a wider range than ever before. Not the least interesting news is the fact that this year Victor is introducing a distinctly modern battery-operated radio at a low price.

The new battery-instrument, now on display at the store of R. T. Holman Ltd., Summerside and Charlottetown has been designed and constructed with a view to bringing up-to-date radio reception to all districts in Canada, whether electrical power is available or not. This set's equipment consists of seven tubes including three screen-grids, and the resulting performance and tone are providing a revelation in the battery-radio field.

Great selectivity and sensitivity are notable features of this Victor, and while it has amazing power, the battery consumption is so low that it sets a new standard in this respect. The cabinet is a fine example of furniture artistry, and though delightfully compact, there is ample room for batteries and for the modern improved built-in-speaker.

of your pocket," said he. "Let me have a look, will you, while you are at the telephone?" Ashton handed it to him, then crossed the room and picked up the receiver.

"He's here now," I said. "Do you want to talk with him?" Then I turned away and called Ashton to the phone. As he started across the room my chief spoke to him.

"I see an evening paper sticking out

"Exactly" replied the doctor. The telephone bell rang just then and I answered it. I heard a voice from somewhere inquiring if this was Doctor McAllister's laboratory, and on my answering in the affirmative, the voice asked if Mr. Ashton had arrived yet.

"There's something," I said curiously, "that I don't see yet."

"You will soon," he assured me, "before another day is out, unless I'm mistaken. Have a little patience."

There came a sharp knock at the door just then, and as it swung open,

AUCTION SALE

I will sell by public auction at Chelton on Wednesday, the 22nd day of October, at 2 o'clock p. m., my shore farm, the old member Holland property, containing 160 acres. It is conveniently situated running up the side of the road leading to Searle-town within about 4 miles of Albany or Carleton Siding. This farm is very wide, well-watered by a brook, has a shore with an abundance of seaweed which is the best fertilizer for potatoes. If day proves stormy sale will take place the first fine day.

Highest Quality for 50 Years

THE GREEN CLOAK

"Well," said I thoughtfully, after a little silence. "It's perfectly evident that we've done Harvey a service, although he isn't grateful for it just now. We've cleared him, to our own satisfaction at least. We've found an English housemaid named Jane Perkins. She is, no doubt the girl of whom the profile on the shade reminded him. The next thing to do is to look her up, discover, if possible, whether she happens to possess a green cloak, with that particular kind of collar. It's likely enough, I suppose. There are probably hundreds of garments like that being worn in the city this season. In the department stores they make what they call 'specials' of those things, and sell them in hundred lots, all exactly alike."

The more I thought over the situation, the deeper my perplexity grew. The test upon Harvey had utterly destroyed my hope that we could get from him any clue to the identity of the strange, wild creature we had seen in the hospital. Instead, it had led us to a trig, snug, undoubtedly respectable English housemaid named Jane Perkins; and leading us to her it left us face to face with a coincidence, or rather, a series of coincidences, almost incredible.

"Well," I resumed with a sigh, "there are lots of young women with black hair, and I suppose a good many of them wear green cloaks. But that a girl should have a profile like that of the extraordinary creature we saw in the hospital and later in Morgan's study—a profile like that and the same sort of cloak, and still obviously a different person altogether, is rather disconcerting, Ashton at least would laugh at us if we told him we believed it."

"Yes," said the doctor, "Ashton would laugh. He laughs rather too easily, that young man."

"Then, for the first time I looked long and searchingly into my old chief's face. His eyes were bright with excitement, his cheeks flushed and his big, restless hands beating out a triumphant tattoo upon the table top. He did not look like a man whose plans and theories had gone awry.

CHAPTER VI

After our conversation with Ashton in the morning, which had terminated with a practical declaration of war on our part, upon him, his visit to our laboratory took us rather by surprise. I think, perhaps that he intended it that way, and that there may have been lurking in the bottom of his mind the idea that by coming upon us in that unexpected way, he might surprise some secret we were holding back from him.

"Well," he said cheerfully in answer to our greeting, "I just met Harlowe coming away from here in Malloy's convoy. I suppose with such an array of instruments as this," he he waved his hand to include pretty much everything in the room, "you've succeeded in getting the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth out of him. How about it? Is he innocent or guilty?"

His mockery was perfectly good-natured, but the depth of his skepticism made it possible for Doctor McAllister to be perfectly frank with him.

"He says so himself, I presume," observed Ashton.

"Exactly" replied the doctor. The telephone bell rang just then and I answered it. I heard a voice from somewhere inquiring if this was Doctor McAllister's laboratory, and on my answering in the affirmative, the voice asked if Mr. Ashton had arrived yet.

"He's here now," I said. "Do you want to talk with him?" Then I turned away and called Ashton to the phone. As he started across the room my chief spoke to him.

Best baby in county

Always happy and comfortable; never has colds

Of course every family has a "best" baby in it. But some babies are a lot nicer than others just the same. And that is so largely a matter of health.

For psychologists and medical men say that good nature in babies is dependent largely on their comfort. They are too little to tell you what ails them. So they cry. And you have to guess it's a rash, or chafed skin, or a stopped-up nose.

That is, you guess, unless you are wise enough to prevent these troubles with the handy "Vaseline" jar.

For "Vaseline" Petroleum Jelly is an essential part of any baby's outfit. Apply it to the baby's skin after the bath; to the head too; then take little swabs of cotton on toothpicks, dip it into the jelly, and very gently apply to the baby's nostrils. This cleanses and lubricates them. Tends to prevent colds.

These are easy, safe things to do. Ask your doctor. "Vaseline" Jelly has been used by mothers and doctors for half a century. The very first thing they apply
