Bonar Law Asks Closer Attendance In House Sitings

LONDON, Dec 20.—Short as has been the session of Parliament, it affords an opportunity of gauging its position. It so happened that today over 2,000 delegates to the National Unionist Conference assembled in London. They were addressed by Premier Bonar Law, who doubtless had in mind that more or less detached observers had already been passing judgment on the ministry's work.

King Declined To See Unemployed

U. S. Influence May Be Used Towards German Solution

LONDON, December 20.—Ambassador Harvery has been summoned home today to consult with the War Office, and the reason of this is being reported in political circles. It is generally assumed that it foresees a move on the part of the United States to take part in the reparations discussions. The following statement was issued this afternoon by the Embassy: "The American Embassy confirms the Reuter report from Washington published today, to the effect that Ambassador Harvery has been called to Washington for a consultation and expected to sail on Saturday, December 23rd, by the Berengaria. Mrs. Harvery, who has been seriously ill, has recovered sufficiently to be able to accompany her daughter, Mrs. Margaret H. Thompson, and her grand daughter to Madeira on the Royal Naval Castle on Friday, December 22nd."

Enquiries made by your correspondent at the Embassy resulted in no further light being thrown on the sudden summons to the ambassador, and it is understood that the cable from Washington did not give any intimation of the matters which the administration desired to consult him about. He is at present in bed at the Hyde Park Hotel and is suffering from a cold, but is not seriously ill, and there is no apprehension of his not being able to travel next week.

There was the same lack of news in British official quarters concerning the probable or possible developments at Washington. A good deal of interest has been aroused by the visit of President Harding to Secretary Hughes and the presence of J. P. Morgan in the capital.

Rumors of an American 300,000,000 pound loan by the United States to Germany were discussed with particular keenness by the lobbies of the House of Commons. In some quarters it was stated that such a suggestion would be welcomed here and would be of great assistance to the British government. It would, it was presumed, be accompanied by conditions rigidly ruling out any attempt by France to put further military pressure on Germany and would, it was argued, consequently strengthen greatly Bonar Law's resistance to the plan for an advance in the Ruhr valley in dealing over. It would aid him in dealing with the opposition from British quarters in any proposal for an international loan to Germany if it is proposed and largely contributed to by America.

Greek King Paid Visit To Refugees

ATHENS, Dec. 20.—King George paid a surprise visit today to the American orphanage in Constitution square, where the Near East Relief is housing 1,200 Greek orphan girls who arrived a week ago from Samsun and the interior of Anatolia. This was the first informal public appearance of the King since he ascended the throne. He appeared in excellent health. He wore a grey sack suit, a soft colored shirt and a light felt hat. His costume was reminiscent of the Prince of Wales, whom he resembles also in carriage and good natured democracy. The King's visit passed unnoticed by the populace. The handful of passers-by who watched the review from the street supposed that the slim young man in gray was a member of a group of Americans inspecting the children. Although pictures of the King in uniform are displayed in every shop window in Athens, the people in the streets do not recognize him in civilian clothes, which accentuate his youthful appearance. The King and Queen moved into town from the Summer Palace at Tatoi only a few days ago, and his decision not to keep closely to the palace will be approved by the Cabinet ministers as the best possible denial of the rumors which have been circulated that he was practically a prisoner. Luncheon was served at their one of the bride.

Woman And Foster Son Are Murdered

NEW YORK, Dec. 20.—Mrs. Amelia Cataldo and her six-year-old foster son, Fred, were found stabbed to death and partly burned in the kitchen of their home at 2514 Stillwell avenue, Coney Island, this morning at 3 o'clock when firemen went there to put out a fire. Her husband, Adamo is being sought by the police, as a former admirer, a barber with whom she once ran off to California, is being held as a material witness. He is believed to know a great deal about the crime. Mrs. Cataldo was the boy's stepmother. They were murdered about 5 o'clock on Thursday night. On the table of the combination kitchen and dining room in which they were found were the remains of a dinner. The murderer apparently lighted a slow-burning fire of rags in the hope that it would not get going until he was far away. Coney Island detectives and Assistant District Attorney Salvaggi, of King's county, pronounced the crime to be the most ghastly on record in Greater New York. Mrs. Cataldo, described as slender and unusually pretty, had been beaten to death, the slayer crushing in her skull. Then her throat was slashed on the left side and a dozen or more stab wounds were inflicted in the face, throat and breast. The boy had been stabbed in the face and neck and his throat also cut. The bodies were on the kitchen floor and a bundle of smoldering rags was at their side. Three boxes of matches had been used to set their clothing and the pile of rags above, blood soaking the clothing and partly preventing the fire spreading through the kitchen and the rest of the building. However, Mrs. Cataldo's body was scorched and the rag fire had burned away the boy's left arm to the elbow. The numerous wounds plainly were the work of a man insane with jealousy or rage. Either the discarded suitor or the husband committed the crime, the police are certain. The motive in either case was love of the woman. If the discarded man committed the crime, it was because she refused again to desert her husband and go away with him. If the husband was the slayer, the police say, it was because he had learned that since their reconciliation about three months ago the other man was again paying attentions to her in the absence of the husband at work.

Cattle Embargo Making Trouble In Other Dominions

(Special To The Guardian.) LONDON, Dec. 20.—The British ministers are making a soft answer to the Australian Government over Australia's exclusion from new act raising the cattle embargo. They explain that clause 4, which gives the minister of Agriculture power to authorize the entry of cattle from any Dominion was struck out under misapprehension and that no pledge was given to the other dominions. It now appears that both Premier Smuts of Australia and Premier Hughes of South Africa, received definite pledges.
