More than a score of local workmen have been given steady employment for the last month in connection with the extensive repair work contemplated for the Charlottetown Railroad wharf, and when the preparative work is completed, when everything is ready for actual building, this number will probably be doubled. It is expected that the whole job will take about three months to complete. The most interesting phase of the work now going on is the diving, and the two C. N. R. divers who have been here for some weeks make daily trips to the bottom for the purpose of making the dock bed ready for the big piles that will be driven down later. The other work already finished includes the driving of piles on the east side, and the building of a derrick for driving the piles on the west side. On the west side the piles will be set at a length of 110 feet, that distance to a rock foundation. A two and one half ton steam hammer will be used for driving instead of the usual weight hammer. The construction work now going on is in charge of Mr. A. B. Ceretti, C. N. R. diver. Mr. Ceretti has had many years experience in his work as an employee of the C.N.R., and these experiences were the subject of a most interesting article written especially for a recent issue of the Canadian National Magazine.
