AGAIN the Angel of death has visited this community. On the 19th inst. Miss Anna Grace Jenkins, Vernon River Bridge, one of the noblest and best girls this world has ever seen, passed away from earth to her eternal rest in God's glorious Paradise of love. There was over one hundred carriages in the funeral procession to the Methodist Church, Cherry Valley, on the 21st inst. where Rev. Mr. Hudson conducted the service and preached an excellent sermon from this text: "Blessed are they that weep, who can hinder him? who will unto him. What doest thou?" The casket was completely covered with beautiful flowers,—floral offerings that seemed emblematic of the stainless purity of the earthly life of the fair young flower who so gently laid to rest in the quiet little cemetery by the side of her dear mother who passed to her rest a few short years ago. The pall bearers were: John Tweedy, Neil McKinnon, Seymour Young, Allan Fraser, James McEachern and John Redmond.—Cum.

The opening play, selected by the Gage Stock Co., will be "Charley's Aunt," the rollicking English comedy. It is one of the feature plays in the Repertoire of the Gage Stock Co. This play enjoys the reputation of achieving one of the longest runs of recent years in New York, while its success on the road was phenomenal. The first act is laid at college in Cambridge, showing the interior of Jack Chesney's room's, where they have asked the Misses Verdum and Spetigue to visit them and meet Charley Wychem's Aunt who is coming from Brazil and is meeting her nephew for the first time. The aunt falling to appear at the stated time, they enlist the services of Lord Barberly to impersonate the aunt. He accepts the situation and endeavors to do so and succeeds admirably. The second act is laid in the college grounds while the third act shows the sumptuous parlors of Mr. Spetigue the precursor. The situations are extremely funny while the dialogue is sparkling and vivacious, and in fact there is not a dull moment during the course of the play. Many pretty gowns will be worn by the ladies, and the production will be made in a Javish manner. Tickets now on sale.
