OTTAWA, Feb. 6 (CP)—All farmers are entitled to claim deferment for military service but are required to apply for deferments before they will be allowed.

Mr. Robinson made the statement after delegates had been asked to accept and use the labor priority ratings as essential to the war effort or otherwise, and expressed the opinion that the military regulations are unsatisfactory since a farmer is obliged to apply periodically for further deferment from military service.

Present regulations, Mr. Robinson said, "provide that the board may give an indefinite deferment if they will. It is left to their discretion. You understand that it is the military authorities who wish to keep an eye on applications for deferment. The military is represented on the board and they have a say as to whether or not a man is essential.

8-Point Program For Deferment Of Farm Workers

OTTAWA, Feb. 5 (CP)—An eight-point program designed to obtain uniformity in the handling by mobilization boards of applications by farm workers for military deferment has been prepared by Arthur MacNamara, director of National Selective Service and the War Department, announced officially today.

The program, which has the approval of the Minister of National Defence, has been circulated to the 13 mobilization boards throughout Canada.

The growing scarcity of agricultural labor makes it increasingly important that essential agricultural workers be encouraged to remain in their own communities, MacNamara informed the boards.

The program provides: 1. Any agricultural worker is free to "opt out" for active service.

2. Under Selective Service civilian regulations, farm workers are to be regarded as essential to the war effort, but encouraged to assist in relieving other labor shortages in off-seasons.

3. Agricultural workers who leave farms without permits lose their special rights to deferment from compulsory military service.

4. Farm workers who apply for postponement unless it is established that they are not essential workers in agriculture are to be considered for military service.

5. Agricultural workers who are not considered by the board to be essential to the operation of the farm are to be given an opportunity to assist on another farm or increase production of the original farm by a three-month postponement.

6. Persons not employed in agriculture at March 23, 1942, but since then have become engaged in agriculture, and who are shown to be essential farm workers, may be considered for postponement.

7. Military objections and others who receive postponement from military training and are agricultural workers will not be considered to report for alternative service as long as they are engaged in essential agricultural work.

8. Application for a board should be made by agricultural workers engaged in alternative service and such applications should be given favorable consideration.

It is felt that if the above principles are followed by all boards the increasing difficulties in maintaining the military production will be greatly alleviated. Mr. MacNamara said in his letter.

He said that after consulting with the military authorities, the committee has been decided to send out interpretative letters from time to time indicating in some detail the requirements in respect to Selective Service regulations.

CLANO UNPOPULAR Clano generally was held to be unpopular with the Italian people for several reasons. The riches he has attained through his party and government affiliations are a national scandal in Italy. His private life is something else again.

Although married to Edna, Mussolini's favorite daughter, and his wife live a more or less separate life. He is known as a playboy throughout Italy and Europe. The people also have heard stories that he has been intimate with several women.

After his assumption of the Foreign Ministry it was generally believed he was being tried for Mussolini's shoes. But recently that belief has waned. Clano was considered neither popular nor unpopared.

REPORTERS RETURNING FROM Italy have reported that the general opinion is that Clano has been prepared all along for possible political adversity. Some of his fortune is reported to have been blocked in Brazilian banks. He is supposed to have enough for a comfortable exile on deposit in neutral Argentina and Switzerland.

Mussolini has shaken up his cabinet and military leadership several times in the last few years, especially since the war began. After the Italian started moving ground in Greece he became irritated with his underlings and sent many of them into active combat zones under separate orders.

Clano himself was sent to Albania, which added weight to the story that Clano's advice to Mussolini on Greece had been bad.

Mussolini's former ambassador to Britain, and Governor of Dalmatia is under Secretary of Foreign Affairs in the new setup.

Learn-Low Administrator E. R. Stettinius disclosed that the civilian relief and rehabilitation program calls for delivery of about 30,000 tons of food and other supplies monthly from the United States and additional quantities from Great Britain. He said it is being carried out almost entirely under license but in co-operation with the Office of Foreign Relief headed by Herbert H. Lehman.

In payment, the French are shipping iron ore, cork, zinc, lead, cobalt, manganese and other war materials.

Of the first 60,000 tons of relief supplies sent, British deliveries accounted for about half.

ANNOUNCEMENT During the past number of years we have been offering the public an honestly blended line of Livestock and Poultry Feeds, but we have modestly refrained from extensive publicity until we feel definitely assured we had a product to offer that was superior in quality to that of any "BALANCED" livestock feed offered by the trade. Now we know our objective has been reached and we want to tell the world. These feeds were blended with an honest desire to give to the producer of livestock and livestock products, the GREATEST VALUE for his money—that is an HONESTLY BLENDED feed at the lowest possible price.

We have adopted a trade name that we hope will interpret to our customers the fact that every line of feed we now offer, is an honestly blended from the purest grain, milled, concentrates and minerals that money can buy. The name selected is "FON HONOR FEEDS" and when you want to buy honestly blended feeds at a price that will allow you to feed your livestock at a profit, be sure and buy FON HONOR FEEDS. Blended and bagged at our warehouse.

THANKS 8th (Continued from page 1) a night at British 8th Army Headquarters near Tripoli, and amidst large crowds reviewed a long line of tanks and troops. He was said to have left Tripoli early Friday for an unannounced destination. It was a triumphant moment for the doughty Prime Minister who has turned up at odd moments and places in the last few weeks of spectacular tour which has included a meeting with President Roosevelt in Casablanca, a conference with Turkish President Inonu at Adana and a review of troops at Cyprus.

"The occupation of Tripolitania has altered the whole character of the war," he told Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery, their staff officers and thousands of troops gathered at Gen. Montgomery's headquarters near here.

There was a roar of applause from the men who were led by Gen. Montgomery in three checks for the Prime Minister.

Mr. Churchill's arrival from Cairo was dramatic and exciting. He was flown across the route of Romme's retreat and saw for himself the state of the British victory in wrecked German and Italian planes, tanks, trucks and guns still littering the sands across 1,000 miles of wasteland.

He grasped Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's plane circled the field in the bright sunshine and settled in a perfect landing while the fighters roared in the skies above.

The Prime Minister stepped from the plane and was greeted by Gen. Alexander and Gen. Montgomery, hand in both of his and greeted him warmly.

A regiment stood stiffly at guard with fixed bayonets. As soon as Mr. Churchill's plane rolled to a stop hundreds of airmen and officers rushed to surround it and get a glimpse of the British leader. He grasped Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's plane circled the field in the bright sunshine and settled in a perfect landing while the fighters roared in the skies above.
