WHAT CONSTITUTES STRATEGIC FRONT OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE

The Line that Great Britain is Called Upon to Guard Against the Rival Powers of Europe—Where Trouble May be Expected to take Place—Our Empire Consists in Great Part of Sea Coast of Others

A correspondent of the London Times, evidently one closely identified with the military policy of the country, recently contributed to that paper a highly interesting discussion of the problem of defence, from which we extract the following:

ARMY GOES WHERE NAVY CANNOT REACH

What are fundamental conditions of the naval military defence of our Empire, and what part of that defence is best assigned to the army? First and foremost then our Empire is an oceanic Empire. Strategically considered, it is an Empire the greater part of which consists of the sea coast of other nations, and that frontier can be kept inviolate by naval supremacy alone. Our naval supremacy is the keystone of our whole defensive position. Not only is it the most important issue in itself, but it also limits the military question by the consideration of expense. Our military expenditure must always be the balance of what we can afford to spend after making sure that we have satisfied our naval needs. Even with our great wealth we cannot aim at being at the same time the leading sea power in the world and a first-class military power in the sense in which those words are understood on the Continent of Europe. The problem we have to solve is, therefore, how to make the best possible use of the land forces we can afford to maintain, utilizing our naval supremacy to the fullest in our military dispositions, employing our army not as an expensive alternative to the navy, but as a complement to it, a striking arm to reach where the navy cannot reach.

PEACE ASSURED IN EUROPE AND AMERICA.

Given, then, the complete subordination of our military policy to our general policy of oceanic defence the question that next arises is—Where if we do fight on land at all, are we likely to fight? The answer to that question is, perhaps, best given by the method of exclusion. In the first place it is not on the mainland of Europe. We have no aggressive designs against the territory of any of the Continental Powers, and we cannot afford to keep up armies large enough ever to cope with theirs on ground of their own choosing. If, through any circumstances, we should come into conflict with any of these powers or any combination of them, the struggle will be decided at sea, and in those outlying parts of their possessions where, owing to our command of the sea and to their distance from their bases, we can hope to fight them on land with success. On the continent of America we have indeed a land frontier of some 3,000 miles, adjoining one of the greatest powers in the world. But there again we have no political ambitions that will be likely to bring us into conflict with the United States, no causes of friction that diplomacy and national good feeling could not dispose of. Nor is there any indication that the United States cherish aggressive designs against Canada. There remain the two continents of Africa and Asia.

A MYRIAD OF DANGER POINTS.

Outside of our actual possessions we have in those regions a vast complex of political and commercial interests, which may at any moment bring us into conflict with one or more of the great European powers. South Africa, Eastern and North-Eastern Africa—including Egypt and Abyssinia—Arabia, Mesopotamia, Persia, Afghanistan, India, Indo-China, China, Siberia—that list covers almost the whole of the countries in which in any conceivable circumstances we may be called upon to conduct large operations on land. They form the eastern or south-eastern face of the Old World, and their general strategical distribution may very roughly be indicated, as in the accompanying sketch-plan, by a line drawn from the Cape to Kamschatka. That line is the military "front" of the British Empire, under the political conditions that are likely to prevail for a generation to come.

INDIA THE KEY, CANADA A STRIKING POINT.

A considerable portion of our army and a still larger native force are already permanently stationed in India, the centre point and keystone of our military position.

UNIONISM AND ITS BENEFITS BY PROMINENT UNION SPEAKERS

A Large Mass Meeting in the Union Hall Last Night—Eloquent Addresses on the Benefits of United Labor Were Given—The Meeting Expresses its Desire to See All Labor Organized.

The public mass meeting of working men held in Union Hall last night under the auspices of the Trades and Labor Council was largely attended. James Clinton, president of the Council occupied the chair and almost every seat in the hall was filled.

The Chairman called the meeting to order and stated that it was for the purpose of explaining the objects of unions among laboring men. The prosperity of the working class is the prosperity of the town or community in which they live. The young men are forced to seek their livelihood elsewhere. Unorganized workmen are the only class that have no price on their goods—manual labor. Unionism will keep the skilled workman at home.

Harry Corcoran was the first speaker. He thought Labor Unions were the safety valve of the nations. Even the brutes form themselves in bands. Trade unions are slow but progressive—slow because they have the masses to educate. John Mitchell, one of the greatest leaders of the world kept together a great number of unemployed laborers for six months during the Anthracite coal strike. In the Southern States the Trade Unions are working against child laborers. Child labor degrades mankind and we have not to go to the Southern States to see it either. It is here in this city. All professions are bound in unions. The Trade Union is a business organization. Their commodity for sale is "labor." The only hope for the working men is to get into politics. The union label on union clothing means good articles and good wages paid for the making of them. In the printers' Union they have a Sick Benefit—the same is true also of the Tobacco workers and others. All unions in the city are connected with similar unions in other parts of Canada and the United States.

E. Gallant, of the Laborers Protective Union, followed. He reviewed the history of the Unions in the city since they were first organized in the fall of 1901. The rate of wages adopted by the Labor Union and presented to the employers, were read. The scale was presented to the City Council. Shortly after the candidates for the Council pledged themselves to stand by the labors. The result was a raise in the daily wages of 25c. each. Laborers working on wharves and steamers were successful in obtaining the wages demanded—that of 25c. per hour, because they were organized in a body to stand out for their rights. The price of living has increased during the past few years, and a workman who could at one time live comfortably on $1.25 a day cannot do so under the present state of affairs. J. H. Ward spoke of what Unionism has done for the printers who feel themselves well paid at $8 per week. The proprietors of our printing offices, he understood, were willing to pay good wages if the union could supply capable workmen. C. W. P. Seale of the Protective Union followed, reviewing the history of labor organization in Great Britain from the times of Edward I to the present day. Some of the principles of Unionism are: Equality of wages, protection for the working men, a sick benefit for the members, mutual support, the moral improvement of those in the Union and lastly the prevention of strikes. Union men never strike unless driven to do so. Organizations are keeping up the wages of the workmen today. The working men through the influence of unions are being educated. The workingman is recognized in Canada. Every Government contract has a scale of wages which the contractor must follow. The power of the working men is limitless when united, individually it is worth nothing. We lack in our educational system compulsory education which is enforced with good effects in Great Britain. The union is striving for compulsory education by which boys will be in school preparing for their life's work and not working in the shops or loading on street corners. The speaker then moved a resolution to the effect that the meeting express its approval in founding new unions and bringing into those already founded the workmen yet unorganized.

Henry Huntley, of the Carpenters Union, seconded the resolution. It was also ably spoken to by Frederick C. Nash, Editor of The Patriot, who referred to the benefits of unity.

The motion carried unanimously and the thanks of the Council was tendered Mr. Nash for his presence and his kindly words of approval.
